VOTE SNARING DRIVE SHOWS MORE ACTION

INTEREST IN STATE PRIMARY PERKING UP

BY DAVID J. WILKIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP)—Entering the final phase of the primary campaign, candidates for nominations to be made September 11 have begun to warm to the business of vote snaring and what for weeks has been one of the most apathetic of primary campaigns is beginning to arouse at least a little interest among the state's voters.

One of the oddities of the present campaign is the situation developing from the senatorial contest. It presents a contest solely in the Democratic ranks four men are seeking the nomination while the Republican incumbent, Arthur H. Vandenberg is unopposed. Despite the fact the four Democratic aspirants should be busily engaged promoting their individual claims to preferment, two of them have devoted no little time to assailing Vandenberg and otherwise cutting loose with oratorical efforts that normally should be reserved for the bi-partisan period just before the November election.

Vandenberg Denies Charge

Claude S. Carney, of Kalamazoo, and Frank A. Picard, of Saginaw, Democratic candidates for the nomination for senator, in campaign addresses during the week, asserted in substance that Vandenberg voted against the home owners loan act. These assertions brought quick response from Senator Vandenberg, who declared flatly that such statements were "the exact contrary to truth and facts." Senator Vandenberg said he had voted for the home owners loan act that passed the senate June 5, 1934; that he voted for the final conference report that passed the senate June 9, and for the bill giving government guarantee to home owners loan bonds.

Thus far most of the Democratic campaigning has been by Carney and Picard, although Alva M. Cummins, Lansing attorney, also has made occasional addresses and Ray D. Schneider, of Detroit, is apparently preparing for more active campaigning in the senatorial contest durnig the last week before the voting.

A bit more activity has been noted among the Republican and Democratic candidates for the governorship nomination, with all the candidates in the field with the exception of Governor Comstock himself.

An interesting development in connection with the gubernatorial contests was the disclosure by Edward Frensdorf, one of the best known of the Democratic veterans, that he has definitely broken with Governor Comstock and aligned himself with Arthur J. Lacy, one of the governor's opponents for the nomination.

In an address, Fernsdorf announced that he could not "go the way he (Comstock) is going."

Soviet Scientists Rescued By Plane

Moscow, Sept. 1 (AP)—Four Soviet scientists and 15 dogs, isolated for two years on the Island of Nova Zembla in the Arctic ocean because rescue ships were unable to approach through ice-laden seas, have been rescued by airplane.

The rescue was effected two days ago by A. D. Alexeyev, a Russian aviator, who flew from the icebreaker Sibirakoff which was anchored 250 miles south near Cape Cheliuskin.

The aviator landed the entire party safely beside the icebreaker which was escorting commercial ships to Archangel.

THREE KILLED IN CAR MISHAP

Sideswipe Sends Auto in Creek; Only One Passenger Escapes

Lapeer, Mich., Sept. 1. (AP)—Three Detroit residents, a man, woman and child, drowned this afternoon when their car sideswiped another automobile on a narrow bridge over Farmer creek, three and a half miles southwest of here, and plunged into 12 feet of water.

The other car did not stop, and authorities were seeking the driver.

The dead:

Alvert Heinrich, 44, 13111 Filbert avenue, Detroit.

Mrs. Freda Brown, 32, 1942 South Edsel avenue, Detroit.

Ronald Otto, three-year-old son of Rudolph Otto, 12228 Camden street, Detroit.

The only occupant of the car to escape was Gus Otto, 5969 16th street, Detroit, uncle of the boy who drowned. He was able to extricate himself from the car and summoned help. But by the time would-be rescuers arrived, the other three were dead.

The party was enroute to a family reunion, to have been held tomorrow at a cottage on the west branch of the Flint river.

Heinrich was driving the car. The impact of the sidewise collision with the other car almost literally threw it over the railing of the bridge. The creek, which empties into the west branch, is shallow in most places, but below the bridge is a hole 12 feet deep, into which the automobile plunged. Gus Otto said he had to climb on top of the car, after extricating himself, to get his head above water.

Looks Much Like "Baby Face" Nelson

Cheyenne, Wyo., Sept. 1 (AP)—Martin A. Millman, New York City tourist, was in a Cheyenne hotel today still nervous after being mistaken for "Baby-Face" Nelson clear across the broad expanse of Wyoming.

Millman, whose rounded features caused him to be mistaken for the notorious outlaw at Nephi, Utah, yesterday, was stopped near Hanna and later near Laramie. Then he prevailed on Highway Patrolman Reed Koons to escort him to Cheyenne.

Young Texas Fliers Trying It Again

Chicago, Sept. 1. (AP)—Soaring in a circle above Curtiss-Reynolds airport, Jean Larene and Mary Elizabeth Owens, young Texas fliers, today started their third attempt to set a new endurance record in their monoplane, "The Lone Star."

Both women were confident this would be their "lucky try." They took off at 10:44 a. m. central standard time. Six hours later the first refueling contact was negotiated successfully.

To while away the weary hours, the fliers had a two-way radio installed.

Epidemics Ravaging Polish Provinces

Warsaw, Poland, Sept. 1 (AP)—The twin scourages of dysentery and typhoid tonight were ravaging the provinces of Volhynia and Podolia, where Poland's finest fruit gardens are situated.

Travelers reaching the capital recently have brought alarming reports that hundreds had succumbed to the diseases—even the ominous word cholera was whispered.

Today, the newspaper Gazeta Polska published an unofficial report that 250 persons had died in Krezemieniec, town of 10,000 near the Russian border alone. The report said 1,400 were seriously ill ...

BOYS DISCOVER BURIED FORTUNE

Subtle Question Raised Over Ownership of Old Coins

Baltimore, Sept. 1. (AP)—Legal questions arose today to cast shadows of doubt on the hopes of two Baltimore boys, members of poor families, who last night dug up $11,424 in old gold coins.

Lawyers said that the ownership of the money, found buried in the basement beneath the rented home of one of the boys, presented a subtle question.

Perhaps 16-year-old Theodore Jones, whose mother's income from washing is augmented by the family welfare, won't be able to give her that washing machine and money which, he said, "she has needed long enough."

Nor is Henry Grob, 15, quite so certain that he will be able to buy the house for his mother.

Yesterday the boys formed a secret club and last night went down into Theodore's basement to prepare the hiding place that every secret club should have. While digging, their trowel struck a $20 gold piece. That started hours of frantic work which produced the remnants of an old can, 17 $20 gold pieces, 82 $10 pieces, 255 $5 pieces, 64 $26.50 pieces and 2,839 $1 pieces.

A member of the legal staff of the state university told authorities today that the money probably would be classed as a "treasure trove" and would be the property of the original owner or his heirs, if they could be found. If not, there remained the "question" as to the relative claim of the finder or the owner of the property, H. Findlay French.

So far there has been no definite clue as to who buried the money, other than the fact that all the coins are over 50 years old. That fact gave credance to the theory of Henry Horner, veteran policeman, that it might have belonged to an old sea captain, named Donaldson, who lived there with his sisters many years ago. The officer believes the three have been dead for 40 years or more.

Payment Made On World Fair Bonds

Chicago, Sept. 1. (AP)—Officials of a Century of Progress today paid $814,620 in principal and $102,163 in interest on the bond issue of $10,000,000 used to finance the fair.

Yet to be paid is $3,075,060 of the principal and fair officials stated that if attendance holds up the entire issue may be retired.

Loose Banking of Boom Days Hit by Senate Committee

BY RICHARD L. TURNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—A severe and general condemnation of banks, bankers and banking practices in the pre-depression boom days was unleashed tonight by the senate banking committee.

Investment affiliates, speculation in the stock of a bank by its officials with emphasis upon short sales, exhorbitant salaries and bonuses, loans by a bank to its officers and unduly large advances to brokers for speculative transactions were denounced as unethical procedure which hastened and intensified the business troubles of last four years.

The analysis published tonight was the last section of a general report on the whole investigation. All will now be pieced together in book form and published by the government printing office.

It was prepared by the investigating staff which assisted Ferdinand Pecora, now a member of the securities exchange commission, in conducting the inquiry.

Most of the practices denounced are now prohibited by laws enacted since the investigation, notably the Glass-Steagall bill of 1933, which directed that banks divorce their investment affiliates, prohibited loans to officers and speculation by them in shares of their bank, and brought private bankers, such as J. P. Morgan and company, under federal regulation.

Investment affiliates were corporations formed by the officers of a bank for the purpose of dealing in stocks and bonds, a practice prohibited by law so far as the banks themselves were concerned. Of them the report said, under the heading "circumvention of the law:"

"Possessed with this instrumentality that enables these banking institutions to conduct a business and indulge in practices which governmental authority through legislative enactment had

LONG CLOSING IN ON HIS FOE

Efforts to Oust Mayor Walmsley Started in New Orleans

BY RALPH WHEATLEY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New Orleans, Sept. 1 (AP)—Senator Huey O. Long began weaving a web around his mortal political enemy, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, through testimony today before his special state legislative investigating committee, by which he hopes to force the mayor out of office.

Under a section of the state constitution, the committee has the authority to take testimony without rebuttal or cross-examination and lay it before the state legislature, where a two-thirds vote of the senate and house can declare any officer, except the governor or acting governor, out of office and he would not be eligible to succeed himself.

Long, who has the power of a Caesar in Louisiana, has indicated that he will call another special session of the state legislature, probably within a week, at which he will attempt to oust Mayor Walmsley and Judge Nat W. Bond and Judge Walter Gleason, civil district court judges of New Orleans, who have rendered decisions adverse to the Long political interests.

Newspapermen Barred

The hearing today brought out testimony of witnesses who claimed to know of payments from lottery operators aggregating $1,000 weekly to Mayor Walmsley, $700 weekly to Police Superintendent George Reyer and lesser amounts to police captains.

The testimony was taken behind closed doors with all newspapermen

EFFORTS TO AVERT CATASTROPHE FUTILE

BY DONALD CAMERON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—A final, desperate federal drive to avert a general walkout in the giant textile industry collapsed tonight, starting an exodus from the nations cloth mills affecting close to a million workers.

The last slender thread of hope that the strike sword could be held aloft beyond 11:30 p. m., zero hour was cut when labor leaders, after listening to hours of argument, pleading and coaxing, emerged from the offices of the national labor relations board with the grim assertion:

"The strike will go on."

Involved were 150,000 silk workers, directed to join the others in an order flashed just before noon, 407,000 cotton textile workers and 100,000 woolen mill employees. Affected, too, were 200,000 now unemployed in these industries.

Violence Hinted

Rebuffed, but doggedly persistent, Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the labor relations board, had waged a twelfth-hour battle to avert the catastrophe. Much of the board's own prestige; a possible blow to recovery; probable violence and certain suffering by textile workers all were at stake.

But Garrison himself, after the last of today's conferences, wearily told newspapermen that there was no hope of a weakening in the stand of either side before the strike hour.

Threats of violence increased. Francis J. Gorman, militant strike general of the union forces, called off a scheduled appearance before a mass meeting of southern workers in Charlotte, N. C., tomorrow. He gave as his reason the press of business here.

His associates, however, disclosed that fear of possible attack by anti-unionists prompted the strike committee to order him to remain in Washington.

President Thomas F. McMahon of the United Textile Workers, Gorman and other union officials shunted back and forth during the day from strike headquarters to the offices of the national labor board. No details of the discussion were divulged, and no further discussions were scheduled until tomorrow or later.

As the strike deadline neared,

Newberry Man Gets Stiff Prison Term

Bay City (AP) George Weeds, 35, of Newberry and Matt Mihalich, of Fairgrove, under five year sentences for automobile theft were given additional sentences of 10 to 20 years each in circuit court Saturday when they pleaded guilty to robbery armed and assault with deadly weapons. They admitted a gas station hold up at Kawkawlin in which the attendant was shot and severely wounded.

Six Sudden Deaths In State Institution Puzzle Authorities

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—Officials of Wassaic state institution for mental defectives pressed an investigation tonight into the deaths of five boy and one adult patients within a week uncertain whether they would find a grewsome mystery or merely an extraordinary coincidence.

The inquiry was touched off by the strange deaths early yesterday of three boys, sleeping in adjacent beds. At 11:30 o'clock Thursday night they apparently were well. At 1:30 a. m. Dr. Harry C. Storrs, the superintendent, was awakened by an employe reporting that the three boys were dead.

Nikola Napolitan, 13, and Necola De Gorgia, 13, slept in beds side by side. Sidney Cohen, 9, slept in a bed one removed from theirs. The boys in the intervening bed, and all the other children were well.

On Wednesday Robert Peters, 9, collapsed in the building. An examination by Dr. Samuel E. Appel, Dutchess county medical examiner, showed "no particular condition which would lead me to think death was due to anything other than natural causes."

On Monday, John De Angelo, 13, was found dead in bed under conditions similar to those under which the three boys died Thursday night. Examination showed an enlarged thymus gland "probably was the cause of death."

On the same day Max Friedman, 57, dropped dead working near the institution. An autopsy attributed death to a heart attack.

Superintendent Storrs said he was "completely at sea" to explain the sudden deaths. Acting District Attorney Ely Gellert said the case was so baffling "that it's got us dippy."

The medical examiner is waiting for a report on the condition of the digestive organs of the three boys.

Dionne Quintuplets Undisturbed by Rain

Callander, Ont., Sept. 1 (AP)—Rain which played a tattoo today on the roof of the Dionne quintuplets' home, failed to disturb the famous five.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe said the downpour appeared not to have affected the babies in the least. Only a month ago the five Misses Dionne became languid with every downpour.

Four of the quintuplets gained weight today. Yvonne, the heavyweight, gave her little sisters a chance to catch up on her by tipping the scales at the same weight as yesterday—7 pounds, 6¼ ounces.

DOUGLAS QUITS BUDGET OFFICE

Resignation Confirmed By President; Successor Named

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt today confirmed the resignation of Lewis Douglas as director of the budget, by announcing the appointment of Daniel W. Bell, commissioner of accounts and deposits, to serve as acting director.

This was the first official intimation the president had given of receipt of Mr. Dougles' resignation, which was handed to Mr. Roosevelt on Thursday evening, while Mr. Douglas paid a brief call at Hyde Park house.

The president announced the appointment of a temporary successor to Mr. Douglas at the conclusion of a busy round of conferences, during which he approved an extension of the existing NRA automobile code for two months to November 3; received a report of progress on the housing program from James A. Moffett, administrator, and watched developments in the textile strike.

Hopkins Is Guest

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt announced that Mr. Douglas also had submitted the resignation of F. W. Lowery, the assistant director of the budget.

Mr. Bell is a veteran of the treasury and apparently was selected without regard for political qualifications. He entered the treasury in 1911 as a young man and worked up through the various grades to his present position.

No immediate successor was named for Lowery.

While Mr. Roosevelt held Mr. Douglas' resignation on his desk today, and before announcing the acceptance of it, he mapped out in conference with special aides the money needs for continuing unemployment and direct relief which was one of the original causes of the split between the president and his budget director.

In the midst of conferring with aides on the relief needs, Mr. Roosevelt received a delegation of cotton garment manufacturers who brought him first hand word of their recent resolution refusing to abide by his order cutting hours and increasing wages in the cotton garment industry.

The group declined to comment on the visit. The manufacturers at their recent New York meeting instructed the officials to lay their case before the president.

As he gave his attention to relief needs, the president received a report from James A. Moffett, administrator of the housing program, on its progress.

Study Drought Relief

Rexford Guy Tugwell, under secretary of agriculture, visited the summer White House and joined the president and Hopkins in a study of the drought relief program.

It was the $525,000,000 drought relief appropriation authorized by the president that was one of the many points of dispute between the president and Douglas. This item exceeded the budget and the director balked strenuously.

The president insisted the drought was a calamity of nature that must be met at the cost of exceeding the budget. Agriculture and relief experts have estimated even more money will be required but the president is hopeful of keeping within the sum.

14 Injured When Car Hits Motorbus

Monroe (AP) Fourteen persons were injured, two seriously Saturday morning when an automobile skidding on wet pavement 10 miles south of here crashed into a Detroit-bound motorbus. The more seriously hurt were Donald Galyn, 5, and his grandfather W. L. Jones. Jones' right hand was so badly mangled amputation was necessary.

COUNSEL FOR SLAIN GUNMAN SENT TO JAIL

GANGSTER'S CURSE FALLS ON 7 IN CHICAGO

BY MAURICE E. COLLINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Dillinger "curse" fell upon seven more persons today, two of them admittedly the plastic surgeons who tried to rebuild beyond recognition the faces and hands of John Dillinger and his lieutenant, Homer Van Meter.

Louis P. Piquett, a former city prosecutor and counsel for the slain Dillinger, was locked up in lieu of the $50,000 bond, accused of harboring the outlaw and engaging the two doctors to perform the operations—blamed generally for the desperadoes' success in evading capture so long before they were slain.

Piquett Claims Frameup

The arrest of Piquett was termed "one of the most important in years" by United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green.

The surgeons, Dr. Wilhelm Loeser and Dr. Harold Bernard Cassidy, this afternoon pleaded guilty to the charges against them and were held ni bonds of $25,000 each. In addition, Arthur W. O'Leary, an employe of Piquett, entered a guilty plea.

Piquett denied any guilt when the seven persons seized last night were arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. He muttered "I'm framed," when the physicians and O'Leary pleaded guilty. His bond was set at $50,000.

Federal agents said he fled his office yesterday when he received a tip that they were after him.

The other under arrest are William Finerty and his wife, Ella, and Marie Conforti. They pleaded not guilty to charges of harboring Van Meter. Federal operatives said Van Meter and the Conforti woman had lived at the Finerty home in Calumet City, Ill.

District Attorney Green said the operation on Van Meter took place in the Finerty home, while the Dillinger operation was performed at the Chicago home of James J. Probasco. Probasco was killed several weeks ago when he jumped from the window of the department of justice's Chicago office on the 19th floor of a Loop building.

After the operation, Green said, Dillinger went to the Finerty home to recuperate.

Paid $7,500 Each

In both operations, said Green, Dr. Loeser was the chief surgeon and Dr. Cassidy was the assistant.

Reports, lacking official confirmation, were that the physicians were paid $7,500 each for the two operations; that Dr. Loeser and Dr. Cassidy used the aliases of Ralph Robiend and Henry Cass in buying the surgical instruments needed; and that Dillinger and Van Meter remained in the Finerty home from June 13 to July 22.

The arrests were made by federal agents under Melvin H. Purvis, head of the Chicago office of the division of investigation, and J. Edgar Hoover, head of the division.

Asked whether Piquett had given the Dillinger gang more than advice, Green said:

"I can tell you that other charges will be made against him."

Strato Flight Will Not Start Monday

Detroit, Sept. 1. (AP)—The proposed stratosphere balloon flight of Prof. and Mrs. Jean Piccard originally scheduled to start from the Ford airport on Monday, faces additional delay.

Neither the huge balloon, which is being repaired in preparation for the flight, nor the air-tight passenger gondola which is being pressure tested, has arrived at the flight headquarters at Dearborn. Delay has been encountered also in arrangements for the hydrogen supply.

"These latest delays aren't discouraging us," said Mrs. Piccard today. "We first hoped to make the flight in June so we are growing accustomed to waiting. We are hoping to be ready in a few more days, but we cannot say just how long it will be. When everything else is ready we will still have to wait for proper weather conditions."

BOYS DISCOVER BURIED FORTUNE

Baltimore, Sept. 1. (AP)—Legal questions arose today to cast shadows of doubt on the hopes of two Baltimore boys, members of poor families, who last night dug up $11,424 in old gold coins.

Lawyers said that the ownership of the money, found buried in the basement beneath the rented home of one of the boys, presented a subtle question.

Perhaps 16-year-old Theodore Jones, whose mother's income from washing is augmented by the family welfare, won't be able to give her that washing machine and money which, he said, "she has needed long enough."

Nor is Henry Grob, 15, quite so certain that he will be able to buy the house for his mother.

Yesterday the boys formed a secret club and last night went down into Theodore's basement to prepare the hiding place that every secret club should have. While digging, their trowel struck a $20 gold piece. That started hours of frantic work which produced the remnants of an old can, 17 $20 gold pieces, 82 $10 pieces, 255 $5 pieces, 64 $26.50 pieces and 2,839 $1 pieces.

A member of the legal staff of the state university told authorities today that the money probably would be classed as a "treasure trove" and would be the property of the original owner or his heirs, if they could be found, if not, there remained the "question" as to the relative claim of the finder or the owner of the property, H. Findlay French.

So far there has been no definite clue as to who buried the money, other than the fact that all the coins are over 50 years old. That fact gave credance to the theory of Henry Horner, veteran policeman, that it might have belonged to an old sea captain, named Donaldson, who lived there with his sisters many years ago. The officer believes the three have been dead for 40 years or more.

Payment Made On World Fair Bonds

Chicago, Sept. 1. (AP)—Officials of a Century of Progress today paid $814,620 in principal and $102,163 in interest on the bond issue of $10,000,000 used to finance the fair.

Yet to be paid is $3,075,060 of the principal and fair officials stated that if attendance holds up the entire issue may be retired.

Loose Banking of Boom Days Hit by Senate Committee

BY RICHARD L. TURNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—A severe and general condemnation of banks, bankers and banking practices in the pre-depression boom days was unleashed tonight by the senate banking committee.

Investment affiliates, speculation in the stock of a bank by its officials with emphasis upon short sales, exhorbitant salaries and bonuses, loans by a bank to its officers and unduly large advances to brokers for speculative transactions were denounced as unethical procedure which hastened and intensified the business troubles of last four years.

The analysis published tonight was the last section of a general report on the whole investigation. All will now be pieced together in book form and published by the government printing office.

It was prepared by the investigating staff which assisted Ferdinand Pecora, now a member of the securities exchange commission, in conducting the inquiry.

Most of the practices denounced are now prohibited by laws enacted since the investigation, notably the Glass-Steagall bill of 1933, which directed that banks divorce their investment affiliates, prohibited loans to officers and speculation by them in shares of their bank, and brought privat bankers, such as J. P. Morgan and company, under federal regulation.

Investment affiliates were corporations formed by the officers of a bank for the purpose of dealing in stocks and bonds, a practice prohibited by law so far as the banks themselves were concerned. Of them the report said, under the heading "circumvention of the law:"

"Possessed with this instrumentality that enables these banking institutions to conduct a business and indulge in practices which governmental authority through legislative enactment had

LONG CLOSING IN ON HIS FOE

BY RALPH WHEATLEY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New Orleans, Sept. 1 (AP)—Senator Huey O. Long began weaving a web around his mortal political enemy, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, through testimony today before his special state legislative investigating committee, by which he hopes to force the mayor out of office.

Under a section of the state constitution, the committee has the authority to take testimony without rebuttal or cross-examination and lay it before the state legislature, where a two-thirds vote of the senate and house can declare any officer, except the governor or acting governor, out of office and he would not be eligible to succeed himself.

Long, who has the power of a Caesar in Louisiana, has indicated that he will call another special session of the state legislature, probably within a week, at which he will attempt to oust Mayor Walmsley and Judge Nat W. Bond and Judge Walter Gleason, civil district court judges of New Orleans, who have rendered decisions adverse to the Long political interests.

Newspapermen Barred

The hearing today brought out testimony of witnesses who claimed to know of payments from lottery operators aggregating $1,000 weekly to Mayor Walmsley, $700 weekly to Police Superintendent George Reyer and lesser amounts to police captains.

The testimony was taken behind closed doors with all newspapermen

Six Sudden Deaths In State Institution Puzzle Authorities

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—Officials of Wassaic state institution for mental defectives pressed an investigation tonight into the deaths of five boy and one adult patients within a week, uncertain whether they would find a grewsome mystery or merely an extraordinary coincidence.

The inquiry was touched off by the strange deaths early yesterday of three boys, sleeping in adjacent beds. At 11:30 o'clock Thursday night they apparently were well. At 1:30 a. m. Dr. Harry C. Storrs, the superintendent, was awakened by an employe reporting that the three boys were dead.

Nikola Napolitan, 13, and Necola De Gorgia, 13, slept in beds side by side. Sidney Cohen, 9, slept in a bed one removed from theirs. The boys in the intervening bed, and all the other children were well.

On Wednesday Robert Peters, 9, collapsed in the building. An examination by Dr. Samuel E. Appel, Dutchess county medical examiner, showed "no particular condition which would lead me to think death was due to anything other than natural causes."

On Monday, John De Angelo, 13, was found dead in bed under conditions similar to those under which the three boys died Thursday night. Examination showed an enlarged thymus gland "probably was the cause of death."

On the same day Max Friedman, 57, dropped dead working near the institution. An autopsy attributed death to a heart attack.

Superintendent Storrs said he was "completely at sea" to explain the sudden deaths. Acting District Attorney Ely Gellert said the case was so baffling "that it's got us dippy."

The medical examiner is waiting for a report on the condition of the digestive organs of the three boys.

EFFORTS TO AVERT CATASTROPHE FUTILE

BY DONALD CAMERON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—A final, desperate federal drive to avert a general walkout in the giant textile industry collapsed tonight, starting an exodus from the nations cloth mills affecting close to a million workers.

The last slender thread of hope that the strike sword could be held aloft beyond 11:30 p. m., zero hour was cut when labor leaders, after listening to hours of argument, pleading and coaxing, emerged from the offices of the national labor relations board with the grim assertion:

"The strike will go on."

Involved were 150,000 silk workers, directed to join the others in an order flashed just before noon, 407,000 cotton textile workers and 100,000 woolen mill employees. Affected, too, were 200,000 now unemployed in these industries.

Violence Hinted

Rebuffed, but doggedly persistent, Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the labor relations board, had waged a twelfth-hour battle to avert the catastrophe. Much of the board's own prestige; a possible blow to recovery; probable violence and certain suffering by textile workers all were at stake.

But Garrison himself, after the last of today's conferences, wearily told newspapermen that there was no hope of a weakening in the stand of either side before the strike hour.

Threats of violence increased. Francis J. Gorman, militant strike general of the union forces, called off a scheduled appearance before a mass meeting of southern workers in Charlotte, N. C., tomorrow. He gave as his reason the press of business here.

His associates, however, disclosed that fear of possible attack by anti-unionists prompted the strike committee to order him to remain in Washington.

President Thomas F. McMahon of the United Textile Workers, Gorman and other union officials shunted back and forth during the day from strike headquarters to the offices of the national labor board. No details of the discussion were divulged, and no further discussions were scheduled until tomorrow or later.

As the strike deadline neared,

Newberry Man Gets Stiff Prison Term

Bay City (AP)—George Weeds, 35, of Newberry and Matt Mihalich, of Fairgrove, under five year sentences for automobile theft were given additional sentences of 10 to 20 years each in circuit court Saturday when they pleaded guilty to robbery armed and assault with deadly weapons. They admitted a gas station hold up at Kawkawlin in which the attendant was shot and severely wounded.

Dionne Quintuplets Undisturbed by Rain

Callander, Ont., Sept. 1 (AP)—Rain which played a tattoo today on the roof of the Dionne quintuplets' home, failed to disturb the famous five.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe said the downpour appeared not to have affected the babies in the least. Only a month ago the five Misses Dionne became languid with every downpour.

Four of the quintuplets gained weight today. Yvonne, the heavyweight, gave her little sisters a chance to catch up on her by tipping the scales at the same weight as yesterday—7 pounds, 6¼ ounces.

DOUGLAS QUITS BUDGET OFFICE

Resignation Confirmed By President; Successor Named

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt today confirmed the resignation of Lewis Douglas as director of the budget, by announcing the appointment of Daniel W. Bell, commissioner of accounts and deposits, to serve as acting director.

This was the first official intimation the president had given of receipt of Mr. Dougles' resignation, which was handed to Mr. Roosevelt on Thursday evening, while Mr. Douglas paid a brief call at Hyde Park house.

The president announced the appointment of a temporary successor to Mr. Douglas at the conclusion of a busy round of conferences, during which he approved an extension of the existing NRA automobile code for two months to November 3; received a report of progress on the housing program from James A. Moffett, administrator, and watched developments in the textile strike.

Hopkins Is Guest

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt announced that Mr. Douglas also had submitted the resignation of F. W. Lowery, the assistant director of the budget.

Mr. Bell is a veteran of the treasury and apparently was selected without regard for political qualifications. He entered the treasury in 1911 as a young man and worked up through the various grades to his present position.

No immediate successor was named for Lowery.

While Mr. Roosevelt held Mr. Douglas' resignation on his desk today, and before announcing the acceptance of it, he mapped out in conference with special aides the money needs for continuing unemployment and direct relief which was one of the original causes of the split between the president and his budget director.

In the midst of conferring with aides on the relief needs, Mr. Roosevelt received a delegation of cotton garment manufacturers who brought him first hand word of their recent resolution refusing to abide by his order cutting hours and increasing wages in the cotton garment industry.

The group declined to comment on the visit. The manufacturers at their recent New York meeting instructed the officials to lay their case before the president.

As he gave his attention to relief needs, the president received a report from James A. Moffett, administrator of the housing program, on its progress.

Study Drought Relief

Rexford Guy Tugwell, under secretary of agriculture, visited the summer White House and joined the president and Hopkins in a study of the drought relief program.

It was the $525,000,000 drought relief appropriation authorized by the president that was one of the many points of dispute between the president and Douglas. This item exceeded the budget and the director balked strenuously.

The president insisted the drought was a calamity of nature that must be met at the cost of exceeding the budget. Agriculture and relief experts have estimated even more money will be required but the president is hopeful of keeping within the sum.

14 Injured When Car Hits Motorbus

Monroe (AP)—Fourteen persons were injured, two seriously Saturday morning when an automobile skidding on wet pavement 10 miles south of here crashed into a Detroit-bound motorbus. The more seriously hurt were Donald Galyn, 5, and his grandfather W. L. Jones. Jones' right hand was so badly mangled amputation was necessary.

COUNSEL FOR SLAIN GUNMAN SENT TO JAIL

GANGSTER'S CURSE FALLS ON 7 IN CHICAGO

BY MAURICE E. COLLINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Dillinger "curse" fell upon seven more persons today, two of them admittedly the plastic surgeons who tried to rebuild beyond recognition the faces and hands of John Dillinger and his lieutenant, Homer Van Meter.

Louis P. Piquett, a former city prosecutor and counsel for the slain Dillinger, was locked up in lieu of the $50,000 bond, accused of harboring the outlaw and engaging the two doctors to perform the operations—blamed generally for the desperadoes' success in evading capture so long before they were slain.

Piquett Claims Frameup

The surgeons, Dr. Wilhelm Loeser and Dr. Harold Bernard Cassidy, this afternoon pleaded guilty to the charges against them and were held ni bonds of $25,000 each. In addition, Arthur W. O'Leary, an employe of Piquett, entered a guilty plea.

Piquett denied any guilt when the seven persons seized last night were arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. He muttered "I'm framed," when the physicians and O'Leary pleaded guilty. His bond was set at $50,000.

Federal agents said he fled his office yesterday when he received a tip that they were after him.

The other under arrest are William Finerty and his wife, Ella, and Marie Conforti. They pleaded not guilty to charges of harboring Van Meter. Federal operatives said Van Meter and the Conforti woman had lived at the Finerty home in Calumet City, Ill.

District Attorney Green said the operation on Van Meter took place in the Finerty home, while the Dillinger operation was performed at the Chicago home of James J. Probasco. Probasco was killed several weeks ago when he jumped from the window of the department of justice's Chicago office on the 19th floor of a Loop building.

After the operation, Green said, Dillinger went to the Finerty home to recuperate.

Paid $7,500 Each

In both operations, said Green, Dr. Loeser was the chief surgeon and Dr. Cassidy was the assistant.

Reports, lacking official confirmation, were that the physicians were paid $7,500 each for the two operations; that Dr. Loeser and Dr. Cassidy used the aliases of Ralph Robiend and Henry Cass in buying the surgical instruments needed; and that Dillinger and Van Meter remained in the Finerty home from June 13 to July 22.

The arrests were made by federal agents under Melvin H. Purvis, head of the Chicago office of the division of investigation, and J. Edgar Hoover, head of the division.

Asked whether Piquett had given the Dillinger gang more than advice, Green said:

"I can tell you that other charges will be made against him."

Strato Flight Will Not Start Monday

Detroit, Sept. 1. (AP)—The proposed stratosphere balloon flight of Prof. and Mrs. Jean Piccard originally scheduled to start from the Ford airport on Monday, faces additional delay.

Neither the huge balloon, which is being repaired in preparation for the flight, nor the air-tight passenger gondola, which is being pressure tested, has arrived at the flight headquarters at Dearborn. Delay has been encountered also in arrangements for the hydrogen supply.

"These latest delays aren't discouraging us," said Mrs. Piccard today. "We first hoped to make the flight in June so we are growing accustomed to waiting. We are hoping to be ready in a few more days, but we cannot say just how long it will be. When everything else is ready we will still have to wait for proper weather conditions."

Strict Requirements for Admittance to Bar Recommended

Detroit, Sept. 1. (AP)—A tightening up on requirements precedent to examinations for admittance to the practice of law and a five year probationary period for successful applicants will be recommended to the Michigan State Bar association in a report to be presented by its committee on legal education and admission to the bar. The convention will be held at Mackinac Island on September 7 and 8.

The committee, headed by Dean Henry M Bates, of the University of Michigan law school, taking notice of criticisms that a minority of dishonest lawyers is bringing ill repute to the entire bar, will recommend:

1. To be eligible to take Michigan bar examinations, a student must file notice with the state board of law examiners within 60 days after he begins the study of law. This notice must state where and with whom he intends to study.

2. Within 60 days before taking the examination, the applicant must file with the state board a complete record of courses taken, grades received and a detailed record of his school behavior.

3. The license first issued to a successful applicant shall be from three to five years only and probationary. Another examination must be taken at the end of the probation period and will cover his record as a practitioner.

Drastic Action Needed

Commenting on this recommendation, the committee said:

"This may seem drastic. We believe, however, something of the kind has become necessary. In the first place, many persons secure admission to the bar, but do not thereafter practice law as their major or serious undertaking. They, nevertheless, hang on as attorneys, and occasionally undertake to perform legal services, though without the skill and experience which come from serious and continued practice.

"They are more likely to participate in some of the reprehensible occupations associated with illegal practice. The ambulance chaser and the runner for various illegal undertakings are examples of a numerous class of people who seek to plunder society under the protection of admission to the bar."

The committee on criminal jurisprudence will submit for consideration three different methods for the selection of judges without elections "that the judiciary of this state may be freed from the influence of politics and be made independent of the favor of politicians."

Record State Fair Crowd Today Looms

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP) A record breaking crowd is expected to attend the annual Michigan State Fair here Sunday to help celebrate Veterans Day.

Bugle and drums and marching units will provide the colorful background for Sunday's program of events, and veterans organizations in many counties of the state are expected to send musical and drill units.

Despite the rain the fair grounds Saturday was thronged with visitors inspecting the variety of exhibits valued in excess of $1,000,000. One of the chief attractions of the 4-H exhibit is the display of furniture made by Donald Tuttle, 17, Bay City.

Business Conditions Reveal Improvement

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP) The Chamber of Commerce of the United States today reported business conditions were unusually favorable.

In its fortnightly summary it said mid-summer conditions had the advantage of an export gain in the first half of the year. It noted particularly the increase of domestic imports of raw materials "usually forecasting domestic activity."

The chamber also told of increases in payrolls, carloadings and department store sales.

would be brought into the case. The Dillinger mob took $29,000, killed a policeman and wounded four other persons in the robbery of the Merchants National Bank at South Bend on June 30.

Piquett's hearing was set for September 7.

The whereabouts of Dillinger during the last four months of his life, when he was the most hunted criminal in the country, were believed disclosed by the recent developments.

For an indefinite time prior to the operation, believed to have been May 27 or before, he was on the near north side of Chicago. On June 13 he allegedly went to the Finerty home and remained there until he transferred himself to the home of Mrs. Anna Sage, "the woman in red," near the scene of his subsequent slaying, on July 22.

Finerty, was said by south side police to have been a minor member of the Al Capone booze running gang.

Indicted for Graft

Piquett became city prosecutor under Mayor William Hale Thompson. For five years before that he had been chief clerk in the prosecutor's office. During that period police charged he interceded in behalf of gamblers.

He was indicted in September, 1922 on charges of graft in connection with school board coal sales, but was freed when the state failed to bring him to trial.

The seven arrests brought the total of those who have either been indicted or charged with hiding Dillinger to 19. Fifteen other persons died by the gun in connection with the Indiana desperado's crimes.

Rumors that the two physicians and O'Leary had made full confessions, arose a few hours after they appeared in court.

Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, would not confirm reports that the three had agreed to testify against Piquett.

Crash of Transport Plane Investigated

Oregon, Mo., Sept. 1 (AP) An investigation into the crash last night of a transport plane that struck an embankment near here during a storm and burst into flames, killing its five occupants, was launched by a department of commerce inspector today.

The bodies of the pilot and the three men and one woman passenger were prepared for removal to their prospective homes.

The plane, a tri-motor ship of the Rapid Air Lines, Inc., was en route to Omaha, Neb., when the fatal crash occurred.

The pilot, Don Bontrager, 34, apparently had tried to make a forced landing in a six-acre clover field because of a raging rain and wind storm.

Death Of Woman In Hospital Is Probed

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP) Police of Detroit were investigating the death of Margaret Smock, 37, who died in Receiving hospital today half an hour after she was taken to the hospital by a man who gave his name as Steale.

The victim had been wounded and beaten, and physicians believed her skull had been fractured. A post mortem examination was ordered. Her identification was made by her father, Elmer Smock several hours after her death, but because she did not live with him, he said he could shed no light on the mystery of her death.

TURNER BREAKS FLIGHT RECORD

Dashes Across Country in Ten Hours and Two Minutes

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—Col. Roscoe Turner, dashing speed demon of the air, set a new record for a flight from the Pacific to the Atlantic today of ten hours and two minutes.

He roared into Floyd Bennett field in his orange monoplane like a streak of fire from a rifle barrel at 4:05 p. m., E. S. T., shading the record he made last year of ten hours and four minutes.

The clockers figured his margin over the old mark at two minutes and 39 seconds.

"The new record isn't must better than my old one," Turner said, "but we can't break records by hours anymore. Minutes are going to count plenty."

Harrassed by Rain

The colonel not only smashed the record, but probably won $3,500 in prizes. Two thousand dollars was the prize for the Bendix race from Burbank, Calif., to New York, which Turner alone completed. Other entrants stopped at Cleveland for the air races. The other $1,500 was a bonus race officials posted for any flier who broke the record.

Turner was flagged away from the Union Air terminal at Burbank this morning at 3:03 a. m. (P. S. T.). Two hours and 45 minutes later he came down at Albuquerque, N. M., replenished his fuel supply in eight minutes and winged away to Wichita, Kans. He stopped four minutes there, five minutes in St. Louis and ten minutes at Cleveland.

Rainstorms harrassed him all along the route, which he figured at 2,512 miles compared with 2,520 miles he traveled to set the last record.

"This is the toughest flight I ever made in my life. I ran into nothing but storms this side of Albuquerque," he said.

150 THOUSAND SILK WORKERS JOIN WALKOUT

workers in many communities "jumped the gun." Arrests had been made in Macon Georgia where a mob yesterday blocked a train at the Bibb mill. New England manufacturers did not deny rumors that strike breakers were being imported, and both mill owners and strike leaders anticipated clashes with communists.

Of possible violence, Gorman had this to say:

"Our instructions are specific to be peaceful, if possible, but if our workers are slugged by hired thugs they are advised to slug back."

Workers Organized

The strike committee sent telegrams to the governors of 22 states, asking protection from "either the forces of employers or by the insidious and disruptive forces of communism."

Gorman will broadcast a message to all workers at 1 p. m. E. S. T. tomorrow.

The workers have been organized in near-military manner, divided into squads of ten, each under a captain whose responsibility is to maintain "disciplined restraint under provocation."

Claims of manufacturers and strike leaders as to the extent of the strike were at sharp variance. Mill owners predicted few workers would leave the mills, the union asserted that "not a wheel will turn," and that more than 1,000,000 workers will be involved.

The answer will be seen on Monday, when most southern mills will operate. In New England the mills will not be open until Tuesday.

The decision to call out some 150,000 silk workers was somewhat unexpected. Peter Van Horn, chairman of the silk code authority sent word he would confer here Tuesday with Gorman and members of the strike committee. His message was interpreted as a possibility of laying ground work for negotiations.

Organized labor, headed by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, rallied behind the textile workers. Privately it was said in these quarters that the present situation probably would mean a showdown on two issues vital to labor: the possibility of forcing code amendment by strike and the policy of federal relief for strikers.

10-Day Old Baby Poses for Films

Hollywood, Sept. 1 (AP) Movie cameras were set up in a big hospital here today to record the acting of the youngest film player, a 10-day old baby girl, cast for her role a month before she was born.

The young actress was Phyllis Rita Frey, daughter of Sophie Frey and Sam Frey, accountant at Paramount movie studio. She was photographed for a Lee Tracy and Helen Mack picture.

Doctors and cameramen and studio technicians wearing hospital masks surrounded the baby as she was brought into camera range.

World Revolution is Predicted by Voliva

BY RODERICK M. GRANT
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Zion, Ill., Sept. 1 (AP)—For 1935 and '36, Wilbur Glenn Voliva gives the "flat" earth—"revolution and chaos!"

For seven years thenceforward, a world dictator will rule . . . and then the millennium, the passing of the gentile age and the beginning of the thousand years of Christ's second reign.

Voliva, the prophet, preacher and overseer of his religious colony here, opened his Bible and his mathematics text today, dug some magic numbers out of the scriptures, summed up what he proclaimed as proof that things were about to happen.

Backed Up By Bible

He has already summoned the faithful to Shiloh tabernacle Sept. 10 to await the coming of the Lord any time thereafter. So today he elaborated on the grounds for his prophecies remarking that it must be plainly understood he is no date setter but a date searcher.

"I can present from the Bible a volume of figures showing that I am right as to 1935-36," said Voliva.

To begin with, said he, "the present momentous period beginning with the World War, August 2, 1914, is designed in the Bible as 'time of the end.'" He referred the reader to Daniel 8:17-19; 9:26; 11:35, 40-45; 12.4, 6, 9.

"This period will run from 1914 to 1942-43," he explained, "and will reach a world climax in 1935-36 in world revolution and chaos, out of which will come the superman, the world dictator, whose administration of world affairs will continue for approximately seven years, ending with the battle of Armageddon," which, however, Voliva said "will never be fought."

Armageddon will "be halted by the second stage of Christ's coming," said the overseer, "namely his coming in glory to destroy all gentile nations and to inaugurate his millennial rule his rule for one thousand years.

"We shall see the nations of the world align themselves in two great confederacies, the great northeastern confederacy and the revived Roman empire. The former will be headed by Russia and Germany, the latter by Italy, England and France.

"The World War, which cost 20 million lives and more than 200 billion dollars, followed by the world-wide pestilence which destroyed 12 million lives, followed by the greatest earthquake in history, followed by an unparalleled depression, followed by the most wide-spread, terrible drought ever known in history, will be followed by other world calamities which will impoverish all gentile nations, while Palestine will know no depression and will become the wealthiest country in the world."

For the first time in three years, the North Carolina government had a cash balance $70,072 in its general fund at the end of this fiscal year.

LOOSE BANKING OF BOOM DAYS HIT BY COMISH

forbidden to commercial banks, these banking institutions, infected with speculative fervor, indulged in practices and transactions which had the direst consequences.

"Commercial banks found a fertile field among their depositors for purchase of security issues which their investment affiliates were sponsoring. These banks, violating fiduciary duty to depositors seeking disinterested investment counsel from their bankers, referred these depositors to the affiliates for advice. These depositors were sold securities in which the affiliates had a pecuniary interest."

The National City company, affiliate of the National City Bank and the Chase Securities corporation, affiliate of the Chase National Bank, were cited frequently in excerpts from testimony quoted to bring out the practices followed.

The report condemned trading in the stock of the parent company by the investment affiliate and the activities of officers and directors in connection with such procedure.

Hit $100,000 Pension

The testimony of Albert H. Wiggin, former president of Chase National, was recited at length to show his activities in forming several investment corporations, the stock all held by members of his family, for purposes of dealing in stocks, including that of the bank itself.

The report also cited Wiggin's pension of $100,000 a year, giving at the same time a court precedent under which it was contended that such a pension was illegal. The Chase board of directors discontinued the pension at Wiggin's request.

Turning to "activities and practices of officers and directors of commercial banks and investment affiliates," the report said:

"These custodians of funds, gambled and speculated for their own account in the stock of the banking institutions which they dominated; participated in speculative transactions in the capital stock of their banking institutions that directly conflicted with the interest of these institutions which they were paid to serve; participated in and were the beneficiaries of pool operations; bestowed special favors upon officers and directors of their banking institutions and investment affiliates to insure domination and control, for their own personal aggrandizement, of these officers and directors, received the benefits of "preferred lists," with resultant impairment of their usefulness and efficiency as executive officers.

INFLATION SEEN AS VERY LIKELY

Treasury Developments Point to Trend of Monetary Policy

BY RICHARD L. TURNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Recent treasury developments pointed tonight the trend of the administration's monetary policy toward ultimate full realization of the inflationary possibilities of past dollar devaluation, but with an immediate determination to keep inflationary talk from upsetting the market for government bonds.

In addition, there was revealed a governmental effort to see that small industries are supplied with sufficient credit to keep the recovery program in progress. It would test out the contention that the banks are refusing to make sound loans, to keep themselves as liquid as possible.

The happenings of the week pointing to these trends were:

Secretary Morgenthau announced that the $2,800,000,000 profit accruing from last winter's increase in the price of gold eventually would be used to retire government bonds and thereby reduce the national debt, now at an all-time peak of $27,080,000,000.

Devaluation Considered

The treasury made known that the $1,724,700,000 in government bonds falling due in September and October would be retired in the usual way by offering new issues of government securities in exchange.

A survey of rejected applications for bank loans in the Chicago area was announced to begin next week. From the results, government financial officers will decide whether sound loan applications were turned down, and whether the government can supply the credit asked in them.

New changes, too, were generally anticipated with the naming of Daniel W. Bell, commissioner of accounts at the treasury, to be acting director of the budget. He will replace Lewis Douglas, director of the budget, long out of sympathy with administration fiscal policies.

Entering into a discussion of Secretary Morgenthau and Under Secretary Thomas Jefferson Coolidge with President Roosevelt, it was understood, was the possibility of a further future devaluation of the gold dollar. With authority to cut in half the amount of gold equivalent to a dollar, President Roosevelt last winter contented himself with lopping off but 41 percent.

Many believe similar action with relation to the silver dollar is inevitable. The silver dollar is now based on a value of $1.29 an ounce for that metal. The government is buying it at a rate of approximately 50 cents. Inflationists in congress are beginning to clamor for an increase in the statutory price of the metal similar to that ordered for gold in January when the figure was jumped from $20.67 to $35.

John K. Stack, Jr., the remaining Democratic candidate for governor, has made virtually no drive for votes to date.

On the Republican side, Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, Alex J. Groesbeck and John W. Smith are planning additional addresses during the final week before the primary. Ora A. Bailey, Shiawassee county farmer, fourth aspirant for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, has made only a modest campaign.

While the headquarters staffs of the various candidates profess to be confident of the outcome, impartial observers make no attempt to predict the trend of the vote 10 days hence. They explain this as due to the unprecedented lack of public interest in the primary. While some sources have ventured the belief something like 500,000 votes will be cast throughout the state on September 11. This admittedly is pure guess work. However, there is no disposition anywhere to challenge the statement that a relatively small percentage of Michigan's approximately 2,000,-000 electors will go to the polls for the primary.

barred out but with broadcasting equipment set up. The committee room and environs fairly bristled with troops, who rough-handled anyone attempting to pass and escorted Huey Long to and from the committee room.

A string of witnesses told the committee that they had knowlege of the operation of a huge lottery ring, race horse handbooks and houses of girls with protection money being paid to the police and city administration.

The high spot of the testimony was reached when a witness, who said he was Henry R. Long, native of Mississippi and no relation to Huey Long, testified that some twenty lottery establishments were operated in New Orleans and paid approximately $3,500 weekly protection money to city officials.

A witness, who said he was William R. McCarthy, living a half block from a disorderly house on Carnodelet street, testified that he had been unable to have it closed because it was frequented by "the Walmsley brothers, Carroll and Bob, and by Judge Walter Gleason." The witness said Judge Gleason is a candidate for the state supreme court.

After the hearings had adjourned until 2 p. m. Tuesday, Mayor Walmsley issued a statement denying the testimony concerning him.

EXTENDS AUTO CODE 2 MONTHS

President Orders Pact Be Retained Until November 3

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt ordered today that the nation's automobiles be manufactured at least until Nov. 3 under the code he signed just a little more than a year ago.

The president's action at Hyde Park, N. Y., brought to an end speculation over the question of continuing one of the most important and controverted codes that has been tusseled with by NRA.

The position that organized labor will take on the president's order could not be determined tonight. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was out of the city, and Frank Morrison, secretary, said he was not certain what the stand might be.

Morrison reiterated, however, that a maximum work week of 30 hours is sought, and that the work week should not exceed five days. The same demand was made unsuccessfully by labor when the public hearing was held on the code.

Only recently the issue of hours and wages was raised again when Green asked that wages be raised and hours shortened. He also asked elimination of the so-called "merit clause"—giving employers the right to hire and fire workers without consideration of their union or non-union affiliations—and provision of time and a half pay for overtime work.

It was considered significant today, however, that Green did not make the demands as head of the labor group, but as a member of the NRA labor advisory board. Leaders of the industry said they had not yet received any official notice of any demands from the federation.

President Roosevelt's action obviously ended any immediate hopes labor had to gain reopening and revision of the code.

Strict Requirements for Admittance to Bar Recommended

Detroit, Sept. 1. (AP)—A tightening up on requirements precedent to examinations for admittance to the practice of law and a five year probationary period for successful applicants will be recommended to the Michigan State Bar association in a report to be presented by its committee on legal education and admission to the bar. The convention will be held at Mackinac Island on September 7 and 8.

The committee, headed by Dean Henry M. Bates, of the University of Michigan law school, taking notice of criticisms that a minority of dishonest lawyers is bringing ill repute to the entire bar, will recommend:

1. To be eligible to take Michigan bar examinations, a student must file notice with the state board of law examiners within 60 days after he begins the study of law. This notice must state where and with whom he intends to study.

2. Within 60 days before taking the examination, the applicant must file with the state board a complete record of courses taken, grades received and a detailed record of his school behavior.

3. The license first issued to a successful applicant shall be from three to five years only and probationary. Another examination must be taken at the end of the probation period and will cover his record as a practitioner.

Drastic Action Needed

Commenting on this recommendation, the committee said:

"This may seem drastic. We believe, however, something of the kind has become necessary. In the first place, many persons secure admission to the bar, but do not thereafter practice law as their major or serious undertaking. They, nevertheless, hang on as attorneys, and occasionally undertake to perform legal services, though without the skill and experience which come from serious and continued practice.

"They are more likely to participate in some of the reprehensible occupations associated with illegal practice. The ambulance chaser and the runner for various illegal undertakings are examples of a numerous class of people who seek to plunder society under the protection of admission to the bar."

The committee on criminal jurisprudence will submit for consideration three different methods for the selection of judges without elections "that the judiciary of this state may be freed from the influence of politics and be made independent of the favor of politicians."

Record State Fair Crowd Today Looms

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP)—A record breaking crowd is expected to attend the annual Michigan State Fair here Sunday to help celebrate Veterans Day.

Bugles and drums and marching units will provide the colorful background for Sunday's program of events, and veterans organizations in many counties of the state are expected to send musical and drill units.

Despite the rain the fair grounds Saturday was thronged with visitors inspecting the variety of exhibits valued in excess of $1,000,000. One of the chief attractions of the 4-H exhibit is the display of furniture made by Donald Tuttle, 17, Bay City.

Business Conditions Reveal Improvement

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States today reported business conditions were unusually favorable.

In its fortnightly summary, it said mid-summer conditions had the advantage of an export gain in the first half of the year. It noted particularly the increase of domestic imports of raw materials—"usually forecasting domestic activity."

The chamber also told of increases in payrolls, carloadings and department store sales.

COUNSEL FOR SLAIN GUNMAN SENT TO JAIL

would be brought into the case. The Dillinger mob took $29,000, killed a policeman and wounded four other persons in the robbery of the Merchants National Bank at South Bend on June 30.

Piquett's hearing was set for September 7.

The whereabouts of Dillinger during the last four months of his life, when he was the most hunted criminal in the country, were believed disclosed by the recent developments.

For an indefinite time prior to the operation, believed to have been May 27 or before, he was on the near north side of Chicago. On June 13 he allegedly went to the Finerty home and remained there until he transferred himself to the home of Mrs. Anna Sage, "the woman in red," near the scene of his subsequent slaying, on July 22.

Finerty, was said by south side police to have been a minor member of the Al Capone booze running gang.

Indicted for Graft

Piquett became city prosecutor under Mayor William Hale Thompson. For five years before that he had been chief clerk in the prosecutor's office. During that period police charged he interceded in behalf of gamblers.

He was indicted in September, 1922 on charges of graft in connection with school board coal sales, but was freed when the state failed to bring him to trial.

The seven arrests brought the total of those who have either been indicted or charged with hiding Dillinger to 19. Fifteen other persons died by the gun in connection with the Indiana desperado's crimes.

Rumors that the two physicians and O'Leary had made full confessions, arose a few hours after they appeared in court.

Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, would not confirm reports that the three had agreed to testify against Piquett.

Crash of Transport Plane Investigated

Oregon, Mo., Sept. 1 (AP)—An investigation into the crash last night of a transport plane that struck an embankment near here during a storm and burst into flames, killing its five occupants, was launched by a department of commerce inspector today.

The bodies of the pilot and the three men and one woman passenger were prepared for removal to their prospective homes.

The plane, a tri-motor ship of the Rapid Air Lines, Inc., was en route to Omaha, Neb., when the fatal crash occurred.

The pilot, Don Bontrager, 34, apparently had tried to make a forced landing in a six-acre clover field because of a raging rain and wind storm.

Death Of Woman In Hospital Is Probed

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP)—Police of Detroit were investigating the death of Margaret Smock, 37, who died in Receiving hospital today half an hour after she was taken to the hospital by a man who gave his name as Steale.

The victim had been wounded and beaten, and physicians believed her skull had been fractured. A post morten examination was ordered. Her identification was made by her father, Elmer Smock several hours after her death, but because she did not live with him, he said he could shed no light on the mystery of her death.

TURNER BREAKS FLIGHT RECORD

Dashes Across Country in Ten Hours and Two Minutes

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—Col. Roscoe Turner, dashing speed demon of the air, set a new record for a flight from the Pacific to the Atlantic today of ten hours and two minutes.

He roared into Floyd Bennett field in his orange monoplane like a streak of fire from a rifle barrel at 4:05 p. m., E. S. T., shading the record he made last year of ten hours and four minutes.

The clockers figured his margin over the old mark at two minutes and 39 seconds.

"The new record isn't must better than my old one," Turner said, "but we can't break records by hours anymore. Minutes are going to count plenty."

Harrassed by Rain

The colonel not only smashed the record, but probably won $3,500 in prizes. Two thousand dollars was the prize for the Bendix race from Burbank, Calif., to New York, which Turner alone completed. Other entrants stopped at Cleveland for the air races. The other $1,500 was a bonus race officials posted for any flier who broke the record.

Turner was flagged away from the Union Air terminal at Burbank this morning at 3:03 a. m. (P. S. T.). Two hours and 45 minutes later he came down at Albuquerque, N. M., replenished his fuel supply in eight minutes and winged away to Wichita, Kans. He stopped four minutes there, five minutes in St. Louis and ten minutes at Cleveland.

Rainstorms harrassed him all along the route, which he figured at 2,512 miles compared with 2,520 miles he traveled to set the last record.

"This is the toughest flight I ever made in my life. I ran into nothing but storms this side of Albuquerque," he said.

workers in many communities "jumped the gun." Arrests had been made in Macon Georgia where a mob yesterday blocked a train at the Bibb mill. New England manufacturers did not deny rumors that strike breakers were being imported, and both mill owners and strike leaders anticipated clashes with communists.

Of possible violence, Gorman had this to say:

"Our instructions are specific—to be peaceful, if possible, but if our workers are slugged by hired thugs they are advised to slug back."

Workers Organized

The strike committee sent telegrams to the governors of 22 states, asking protection from "either the forces of employers or by the insidious and disruptive forces of communism."

Gorman will broadcast a message to all workers at 1 p. m. E. S. T. tomorrow.

The workers have been organized in near-military manner, divided into squads of ten, each under a captain whose responsibility is to maintain "disciplined restraint under provocation."

Claims of manufacturers and strike leaders as to the extent of the strike were at sharp variance. Mill owners predicted few workers would leave the mills, the union asserted that "not a wheel will turn," and that more than 1,000,000 workers will be involved.

The answer will be seen on Monday, when most southern mills will operate. In New England the mills will not be open until Tuesday.

The decision to call out some 150,000 silk workers was somewhat unexpected. Peter Van Horn, chairman of the silk code authority sent word he would confer here Tuesday with Gorman and members of the strike committee. His message was interpreted as a possibility of laying ground work for negotiations.

Organized labor, headed by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, rallied behind the textile workers. Privately it was said in these quarters that the present situation probably would mean a showdown on two issues vital to labor—the possibility of forcing code amendment by strike and the policy of federal relief for strikers.

10-Day Old Baby Poses for Films

Hollywood, Sept. 1 (AP)—Movie cameras were set up in a big hospital here today to record the antics of the youngest film player—a 10-day-old baby girl, cast for her role a month before she was born.

The young actress was Phyllis Rica Frey, daughter of Sophie Frey and Sam Frey, accountant at Paramount movie studio. She was photographed for a Lee Tracy and Helen Mack picture.

Doctors and cameramen and studio technicians wearing hospital masks surrounded the baby as she was brought into camera range.

SUED FOR $100,000

Los Angeles, Sept. 1 (AP)—Lew Brice, actor, writer, and brother of Fannie Brice, comedienne, was sued for $100,000 damages today by Marchen Jorgensen, concert pianist, who charged she was attacked last Dec. 27.

World Revolution is Predicted by Voliva

BY RODERICK M. GRANT
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Zion, Ill., Sept. 1 (AP)—For 1935 and '36, Wilbur Glenn Voliva gives the "flat" earth—"revolution and chaos!"

For seven years thenceforward, a world dictator will rule . . . and then the millennium, the passing of the gentile age and the beginning of the thousand years of Christ's second reign.

Voliva, the prophet, preacher and overseer of his religious colony here, opened his Bible and his mathematics text today, dug some magic numbers out of the scriptures, summed up what he proclaimed as proof that things were about to happen.

Backed Up By Bible

He has already summoned the faithful to Shiloh tabernacle Sept. 10 to await the coming of the Lord any time thereafter. So today he elaborated on the grounds for his prophecies—remarking that it must be plainly understood he is no date setter but a date searcher.

"I can present from the Bible a volume of figures showing that I am right as to 1935-36," said Voliva.

To begin with, said he, "the present momentous period beginning with the World War, August 2, 1914, is designed in the Bible as 'time of the end.' " He referred the reader to Daniel 8:17-19; 9:26; 11:35, 40-45; 12.4, 6, 9.

"This period will run from 1914 to 1942-43," he explained, "and will reach a world climax in 1935-36 in world revolution and chaos, out of which will come the superman, the world dictator, whose administration of world affairs will continue for approximately seven years, ending with the battle of Armageddon," which, however, Voliva said "will never be fought."

Armageddon will "be halted by the second stage of Christ's coming," said the overseer, "namely his coming in glory to destroy all gentile nations and to inaugurate his millennial rule—his rule for one thousand years.

"We shall see the nations of the world align themselves in two great confederacies, the great northeastern confederacy and the revived Roman empire. The former will be headed by Russia and Germany, the latter by Italy, England and France.

"The World War, which cost 20 million lives and more than 200 billion dollars, followed by the world-wide pestilence which destroyed 12 million lives, followed by the greatest earthquake in history, followed by an unparalleled depression, followed by the most wide-spread, terrible drought ever known in history, will be followed by other world calamities which will impoverish all gentile nations, while Palestine will know no depression and will become the wealthiest country in the world."

For the first time in three years, the North Carolina government had a cash balance—$70,072—in its general fund at the end of this fiscal year.

forbidden to commercial banks, these banking institutions, infected with speculative fervor, indulged in practices and transactions which had the direct consequences.

"Commercial banks found a fertile field among their depositors for purchase of security issues which their investment affiliates were sponsoring. These banks, violating fiduciary duty to depositors seeking disinterested investment counsel from their bankers, referred these depositors to the affiliates for advice. These depositors were sold securities in which the affiliates had a pecuniary interest."

The National City company, affiliate of the National City Bank and the Chase Securities corporation, affiliate of the Chase National Bank, were cited frequently in excerpts from testimony quoted to bring out the practices followed.

The report condemned trading in the stock of the parent company by the investment affiliate and the activities of officers and directors in connection with such procedure.

Hit $100,000 Pension

The testimony of Albert H. Wiggin, former president of Chase National, was recited at length to show his activities in forming several investment corporations, the stock all held by members of his family, for purposes of dealing in stocks, including that of the bank itself.

The report also cited Wiggin's pension of $100,000 a year, giving at the same time a court precedent under which it was contended that such a pension was illegal. The Chase board of directors discontinued the pension at Wiggin's request.

Turning to "activities and practices of officers and directors of commercial banks and investment affiliates," the report said:

"These custodians of funds, gambled and speculated for their own account in the stock of the banking institutions which they dominated; participated in speculative transactions in the capital stock of their banking institutions that directly conflicted with the interest of these institutions which they were paid to serve; participated in and were the beneficiaries of pool operations; bestowed special favors upon officers and directors of their banking institutions and investment affiliates to insure domination and control, for their own personal aggrandizement, of these officers and directors; received the benefits of "preferred lists," with resultant impairment of their usefulness and efficiency as executive officers.

INFLATION SEEN AS VERY LIKELY

Treasury Developments Point to Trend of Monetary Policy

BY RICHARD L. TURNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Recent treasury developments pointed tonight the trend of the administration's monetary policy toward ultimate full realization of the inflationary possibilities of past dollar devaluation, but with an immediate determination to keep inflationary talk from upsetting the market for government bonds.

In addition, there was revealed a governmental effort to see that small industries are supplied with sufficient credit to keep the recovery program in progress. It would test out the contention that the banks are refusing to make sound loans, to keep themselves as liquid as possible.

AUGUST GAVE REAL VARIETY

Highest Temperature on Record Was 83, Lowest 37

Some highs and lows in temperature were recorded at Escanaba during the month of August, records at the weather bureau show. The highest of the month was 83 on the ninth, and the lowest came down to 37 on the 29th. The mean temperature for the month, however, was 61, which was below the normal of 64.3. The maximum reached here in 63 years was 94 in 1896.

The precipitation for the month totalled 2.68 inches, compared with normal of 3.19. The heaviest rain for the month for a 24-hour period was on the first and second, when 1.14 inches fell. So far, the year 1934 is nearly five inches short on precipitation, compared with normal.

Clean-Up of Florence In Rip-Roaring Days Recalled by Pioneers

Iron Mountain—The Regulators were marching out of the little town of Florence, Wis. Their errand was a serious one. Scarcely a word was spoken as they plodded down a sandy road, a dozen masked men or more, heavily armed, and carrying faggots and cans of inflammable fluid.

The Menominee iron range was ablaze with hatred. The conflicting elements were the plug-uglies, tough and gamblers who controlled the territory and its politics, and reputable citizens who had vowed to end the reign of ribaldry with rifle and noose if other methods failed.

Tonight the Regulators—this was the name adopted by these Crusaders of the Upper Peninsula—were about to strike a decisive blow for law and order. Their objective, termed a "camp of death" by Chase S. Osborn, was a low, squat building at the outskirts of town where "Old Man" Mudge maintained a logged "palace" of vice.

Mudge was an accomplished actor. He posed as a minister on annual trips to Ohio and Northern Indiana, enjoying the confidence of the ordained clergy. He wore a silk hat, white cotton gloves and a frock coat—even while behind his bar—and his bland, sanctimonious air gained him large donations for his "missionary work", in the iron county. The money went for new roulette wheels and thugs to terrorize his enemies.

His presence in Florence, just over the Wisconsin line, necessitated that the storm break there. Before it was over bullets sped in several pitched battles, a sheriff and a prosecuting attorney engaged in a pistol duel on the main street and a mining official's son was kidnaped and presumably killed.

Apply the Torch

The Regulators gathered in a solemn knot when they neared the Mudge establishment. They heard the howl of a gaunt timber wolf chained to the back door. Music ribald laughter and the shouts of gamblers issued from a dance hall from which many a lumberjack and miner was reputed to have disappeared after receiving a drink from the "black bottle," containing a mixture of hootch and "knockout drops," and a permanent fixture at the bar.

"Go easy now or they'll see us," advised the leader of the band. "It'll be daybreak in half an hour."

The men, their ranks closed, crept through the trees along the road. They paused to adjust their masks in the shadow of the big building which was constructed of the big building which was constructed of logs on the principle of a fort. While watchmen scanned the front door, they emptied their cans upon the logs and applied matches to the dripping kerosene.

Flames Leap High

Expecting a fusillade from the windows, the Regulators leaped away from the glare of the flames. Blended with screams and running footsteps were yelps from the wolf, tugging in terror at his chain. Heat drove back a bucket brigade organized within. Trunks, furniture and clothing pelted to the ground from windows; a group of lumberjacks struggled to remove a battered melodeon.

Shuffling into the blinding light, "Old Man" Mudge, dressed in his clerical garb, sent curse after curse into the darkness. His daughter Mina, said to have been a beauty shook her fist at the twinkling lights of Florence. But voices were lost in the increasing roar of the flames now climbing over the roof and thrusting its tongues into every cranny and crevice.

Den Wiped Out

To the Regulators, running over the hills, the roar was a welcome one. It was a challenge of civic virtue to organized crime, a threat of more violent measures to clean up the district. They chuckled and grinned beneath their masks, for they knew that one of the worst dens of iniquity on the range would soon be ashes and smouldering timbers.

Today a shallow depression at the edge of a swamp is all that remains of "Old Man" Mudge's establishment. The Regulators have died or gone elsewhere, but their deeds and high points of the war between right and wrong are remembered by their descendants and the citizens who gave them support.

The most vivid historian of the struggle is Osborn, who was a young newspaper editor in Florence in the early eighties when the fight was at its hottest. In his book, "The Iron Hunter," he paints Mudge as the arch-villain of the Middle West who combined the guile of a Borgia with the brutality of Bill Sykes.

"The Mudge Gang was organized over a territory including the region for 500 miles south of Lake Superior from Canada to Minnesota," he says. "Mudge was as much of a genius in some directions as he was a devil in others. Compared with him, Machiavelli was a saint . . . He tolerated no rivals. No sea pirate was more bloodthirsty or vengeful.

Secret Passages

"The gang would run off witnesses when arrests occurred near the law and order line. If they could get rid of them in no other way, the witnesses were killed. Any man who showed an inclination to oppose the gang was either killed or murdered."

Osborn described the headquarters as follows:

"A big log camp with frame gables held a bar and a dance hall and stalls on the first floor. On the second floor were rooms about the size of those in a Tokio Yoshiwara. A third floor attic contained dungeons and two trap doors. In the cellar were dark cells and a secret passage, well timbered with cedar, leading to where the hill on the stockade was situated broked down into a dense swamp.

Surrounded by Wall

"Surrounding this camp of death were sharp pointed palisades, ten feet high, of the kind used against the Indians to inclose pioneer blockhouses. There were loopholes. Two passages led through the stockade."

Mudge was a Michigan product, according to Florence's old timers. Some say he came from Ishpeming, some from Benton Harbor. He left Florence in a cutter pulled by a team of spanking white horses, stopping for a drink at the saloon of Azara Robichaud before turning his back forever on "Whisky Alley," where the Regulators had lashed the undesirables with black-snake whips as an argument to leave town.

With a scarf concealing his venerable locks, he climbed into the cutter, pausing to mutter a sacrilegious blessing upon the community. Then with a string of oaths and a peal of eerie laughter he disappeared over the hills, leaving Mina to look after herself. After a brief stay in central Wisconsin, Mudge went to Benton Harbor, still maintaining his clerical pose, and died there at the age of 70.

"I don't think he was as bad as Osborn made out," said William Judge, former sheriff at Florence. "But his gang caused a lot of trouble. The Menominee iron range was the toughest spot in the Middle West in those days and the worst characters shifted their operations between here and Iron Mountain. When things became too hot in Michigan they jumped to Wisconsin and vice versa.

"Mudge came from a good family and studied for the ministry in his youth, I believe. Anyhow, he knew all the hymns and prayers. He used to tell how he made congregations cry over the plight of the poor downtrodden miners and lumberjacks. With their amens ringing in his ears and their good money in his pocket he would hurry back to his bottle in a hotel.

An Early Racketeer

"He could stacks cards as expertly as any man I ever saw, and pull aces out of his sleeves so rapidly it was impossible to detect him. He was also an accomplished violinist.

There was no racket he didn't undertake. One of his favorites was the sale of a "bee sting preventive," composed of dish water and coloring put up in attractively labeled bottles. He sold it to farmers with the guarantee that if it were rubbed on the hands and face one could remove honey from a hive without unpleasantness.

"Several men who took him at his word nearly died from the consequences. He worked these dodges during the slack season, but never in this territory because everyone knew him too well."

One of the most dastardly acts attributed to the gang was the kidnaping of Willie Dickinson, seven-year-old son of Capt. William E. Dickinson, superintendent of the Commonwealth mine, two miles out of Florence. Dickinson incurred the gang's displeasure by demanding that the owner of a gambling resort move the establishment from property owned by the mine. The owner refused.

"Capt. Dickinson took matters into his own hands," Judge related. "He had a crew of men place skids under the place and roll it away. Shortly afterward his son disappeared while on his way to school in Florence. It was surmised at the time that some one picked him up with a horse and rig, on the excuse of giving the boy a ride to town.

Never Recovered

"The case was like the Lindbergh kidnaping in regard to the excitement it raised. Officers could find no clews. Capt. Dickinson spent thousands of dollars on private detectives, hired spies to join the gang and learn its secrets, offered big rewards and directed a nation-wide search. But he learned nothing. It was supposed the boy was killed and thrown into an abandoned shaft."

Pat McHugh, saloon keeper and former prize fighter, was Mudge's most notorious henchman. He was feared throughout the iron county as a bully. Though numerous charges were laid at his door he always managed to escape arrest. Because of his apparent immunity, it was charged by Osborn that Sheriff John Redmond and J. E. MacIntosh, prosecuting attorney, were under Mudge's control.

Fought A Duel

"Each blamed the other for failure to act in regard to McHugh," Judge said. "The quarrel became so bitter they agreed to duel at 50 paces. The prosecutor fired when a handkerchief was dropped but his bullet whistled wide of the mark. The sheriff's gun missed fire. Tossing aside the useless weapon, Redmond grappled with the prosecutor, who shot him in the lung during the tussle.

"The sheriff's friends obtained a rope and threatened to hang MacIntosh but their temper cooled. Redmond died from the wound a short time later."

Eventually the law caught up with McHugh. Deputies and crusading citizens chased him into a swamp, from which he sniped at them with a rifle while dodging from tree to tree. Bill Noyes, giant woodsman and brother of the two-gun sheriff who succeeded Redmond, soon had the drop on the bully who fell on his knees and begged for his life. Noyes spared him.

"Shots cracked along 'Whisky Alley almost every night," Judge added. "Life was mighty cheap. One one occasion a miner chased another man between two buildings after an argument in a saloon. When the man hid behind a lumber pile the miner waited for him to come out. As a figure stepped from the shadows the miner, who had armed himself with a plank, swung with all his strength. The victim was a stranger.

"The miner was tried for murder, of course, but the jury declared him innocent. It held the killing was accidental because the victim was the wrong man."

Today Florence, with mining at an end and its forests leveled, is a staid and dignified community. Business places fill "Whisky Alley," where several soft drink establishments enjoy a brisk patronage. The town lockup seldom boasts an occupant. Citizens find adventure in watering gardens and mowing their lawns, and Sunday school children play ring-around-the-rosy and other picnic games on the site of the notorious "camp of death."

Pioneer Association Picnic Plans Laid

Final plans have been made for the Alger County Pioneer Association picnic to be held on the old court house grounds at Au Train today. It will be the social event of the season where old timers will meet, music of bygone days played by old fiddlers, candidates for county offices will be there, also speakers of note to address the crowd for a few minutes. Sports will be feature of the days entertainment, the old timers' ball game to top the list, made up of players all over 50 years old. Jack Sharkey is in charge of this feature of the program and he has promised a game of excitement.

Walter Gorey, also in charge of the sports program has made up a program of sports for young and old alike. The program as arranged is as follows:

1:00—Speaking.
1:45—Boys' foot race under 15 years.
2:00—Men's race, free for all.
2:15—Ladies' race, free for all.
2:30—Fat Men's race.
2:45—Fat Ladies' race.
3:00—Tug o' War, county vs. city.
3:15—Tug o' War, free for all.
3:30—Horse shoe pitching.
4:00—Old Timers' ball game.
5:00—Soft ball game.
5:30—Standing jump, girls under 15.
5:45—Standing jump, boys under 15.

Everyone is invited, and are requested to bring their basket. Other refreshments will be served on the ground with ice cream and pop for the children.

BRIEFS

L. C. Clipp, proprietor of the Restwood lodge on Au Train lake relates an interesting fish story that happened at his place Friday afternoon when several of his guests were out fishing. There were seven or eight boats in the lake with people fishing at the mouth of the Au Train river when Prof. C. O. Davies, of the University of Michigan, hooked, what later proved to be an eight pound rainbow trout, and as soon as the fish was hooked he began to attempt to free himself and tangled the professor's fish line with the rest of the lines. While this was going on W. A. Armstrong hooked a seven-pound wall-eyed pike that assisted the rainbow in tangling up the fishing lines. After a while both the fish were landed much to the delight of the fishermen, although much fish line was destroyed.

Labor Day will be quietly observed in Munising Monday. All places of business and public buildings will be closed. There will be no mail delivery. However, the postoffice will dispatch mail as usual. The paper mill employees will hold a picnic at Bay Furnace, and there will be sports program and speaking.

Miss Beth Vendein, who spent the summer on the Pacific coast, and who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Margaret Vendein, east Onota street the past week, left yesterday for Owosso where she will resume her teaching duties with the opening of school.

Funeral services for Mrs. Louise Michelin who died Thursday night were conducted by Rev. P. F. Manderfield yesterday morning. The remains were taken to Cheboygan yesterday afternoon for interment. The pallbearers were: Octave Perry, Henry Gollinger Wm. Carmody, John Saul, Robert Grignon and John E. Ryan. Mr. and Mrs. Gene Ramberg were here from Marquette to attend the funeral services and accompany the remains to their final resting place at Cheboygan. Mrs. Ramberg is a daughter of Mrs. Michelin.

A surprise party was tendered Mrs. Arthur Dale Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Ed Corriveau. The hostesses were Mrs. Charles Kellar, Mrs. Henry Ames and Mrs. Ed Corriveau. Five tables of 500 were played. First prize was won by Mrs. George St. Martin, second to Mrs. Paul Revord, and Mrs. Henry St. Martin received consolation. Mrs. Emma Ames was awarded the door prize.

There will be a meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. All members are urgently requested to be present.

Mrs. Lawrence Sharkey and daughter "Peggy" accamponied by Mrs. Joe Rousseau and Peter Wilson attended the fair at Chicago last week. The party returned to Munising yesterday with the exception of "Peggy" who went on to Marquette where she will visit with her aunt, Mrs. David Depew, a few days before the opening of school.

Older Girls Want To Work for Room

There are three or four girls living outside of Escanaba who plan to attend the county normal here this term, and are looking for places where they can work for their room and board. These girls are all older than high school girls, and are experienced in duties around the home.

Anyone who is able to place one of the girls and give her a room in return for work she is able to do around the home is asked to call C. U. Woolpert, county superintendent of schools.

SOCIETY BRAND CLOTHES
LAUERMAN'S

Custom Tailoring Day at LAUERMAN'S
Tuesday, September 4th

A REPRESENTATIVE of the Society Brand Custom Department is making a special trip from Chicago for this event. He will present a preview of the models, patterns, colors and fabrics that will be worn by the best dressed men this fall.

He will show several hundred samples of fine custom woolens, also Society Brand's complete line of new fall models. He will personally fit customers for suits to be strictly custom tailored to individual measurements—or in a ready-to-wear size, if preferred.

Instead of merely selecting a model from a picture, you may try on various model garments and definitely determine in advance just how you will look in a certain style. This tends to eliminate all guesswork—all uncertainty—all possible disappointments.

Come—be our guest for this interesting and educational custom exhibit.

Some highs and lows in temperature were recorded at Escanaba during the month of August, records at the weather bureau show. The highest of the month was 83 on the ninth, and the lowest came down to 37 on the 29th. The mean temperature for the month, however, was 61, which was below the normal of 64.3. The maximum reached here in 63 years was 94 in 1896.

The precipitation for the month totalled 2.68 inches, compared with normal of 3.19. The heaviest rain for the month for a 24-hour period was on the first and second, when 1.14 inches fell. So far, the year 1934 is nearly five inches short on precipitation, compared with normal.

Clean-Up of Florence In Rip-Roaring Days Recalled by Pioneers

Iron Mountain—The Regulators were marching out of the little town of Florence, Wis. Their errand was a serious one. Scarcely a word was spoken as they plodded down a sandy road, a dozen masked men or more, heavily armed, and carrying faggots and cans of inflammable fluid.

The Menominee iron range was ablaze with hatred. The conflicting elements were the plug-uglies, tough and gamblers who controlled the territory and its politics, and reputable citizens who had vowed to end the reign of ribaldry with rifle and noose if other methods failed.

Tonight the Regulators—this was the name adopted by these Crusaders of the Upper Peninsula—were about to strike a decisive blow for law and order. Their objective, termed a "camp of death" by Chase S. Osborn, was a low, squat building at the outskirts of town where "Old Man" Mudge maintained a logged "palace" of vice.

Mudge was an accomplished actor. He posed as a minister on annual trips to Ohio and Northern Indiana, enjoying the confidence of the ordained clergy. He wore a silk hat, white cotton gloves and a frock coat—even while behind his bar—and his bland, sanctimonious air gained him large donations for his "missionary work", in the iron county. The money went for new roulette wheels and thugs to terrorize his enemies.

His presence in Florence, just over the Wisconsin line, necessitated that the storm break there. Before it was over bullets sped in several pitched battles, a sheriff and a prosecuting attorney engaged in a pistol duel on the main street and a mining official's son was kidnaped and presumably killed.

Apply the Torch

The Regulators gathered in a solemn knot when they neared the Mudge establishment. They heard the howl of a gaunt timber wolf chained to the back door. Music ribald laughter and the shouts of gamblers issued from a dance hall from which many a lumberjack and miner was reputed to have disappeared after receiving a drink from the "black bottle," containing a mixture of hootch and "knockout drops," and a permanent fixture at the bar.

"Go easy now or they'll see us," advised the leader of the band. "It'll be daybreak in half an hour."

The men, their ranks closed, crept through the trees along the road. They paused to adjust their masks in the shadow of the big building which was constructed of the big building which was constructed of logs on the principle of a fort. While watchmen scanned the front door, they emptied their cans upon the logs and applied matches to the dripping kerosene.

Flames Leap High

Expecting a fusillade from the windows, the Regulators leaped away from the glare of the flames. Blended with screams and running footsteps were yelps from the wolf, tugging in terror at his chain. Heat drove back a bucket brigade organized within. Trunks, furniture and clothing pelted to the ground from windows; a group of lumberjacks struggled to remove a battered melodeon.

Shuffling into the blinding light, "Old Man" Mudge, dressed in his clerical garb, sent curse after curse into the darkness. His daughter Mina, said to have been a beauty shook her fist at the twinkling lights of Florence. But voices were lost in the increasing roar of the flames now climbing over the roof and thrusting its tongues into every cranny and crevice.

Den Wiped Out

To the Regulators, running over the hills, the roar was a welcome one. It was a challenge of civic virtue to organized crime, a threat of more violent measures to clean up the district. They chuckled and grinned beneath their masks, for they knew that one of the worst dens of iniquity on the range would soon be ashes and smouldering timbers.

Today a shallow depression at the edge of a swamp is all that remains of "Old Man" Mudge's establishment. The Regulators have died or gone elsewhere, but their deeds and high points of the war between right and wrong are remembered by their descendants and the citizens who gave them support.

The most vivid historian of the struggle is Osborn, who was a young newspaper editor in Florence in the early eighties when the fight was at its hottest. In his book, "The Iron Hunter," he paints Mudge as the arch-villain of the Middle West who combined the guile of a Borgia with the brutality of Bill Sykes.

"The Mudge Gang was organized over a territory including the region for 500 miles south of Lake Superior from Canada to Minnesota," he says. "Mudge was as much of a genius in some directions as he was a devil in others. Compared with him, Machiavelli was a saint . . . He tolerated no rivals. No sea pirate was more bloodthirsty or vengeful.

Secret Passages

"The gang would run off witnesses when arrests occurred near the law and order line. If they could get rid of them in no other way, the witnesses were killed. Any man who showed an inclination to oppose the gang was either killed or murdered."

Osborn described the headquarters as follows:

"A big log camp with frame gables held a bar and a dance hall and stalls on the first floor. On the second floor were rooms about the size of those in a Tokio Yoshiwara. A third floor attic contained dungeons and two trap doors. In the cellar were dark cells and a secret passage, well timbered with cedar, leading to where the hill on the stockade was situated broked down into a dense swamp.

Surrounded by Wall

"Surrounding this camp of death were sharp pointed palisades, ten feet high, of the kind used against the Indians to inclose pioneer blockhouses. There were loopholes. Two passages led through the stockade."

Mudge was a Michigan product, according to Florence's old timers. Some say he came from Ishpeming, some from Benton Harbor. He left Florence in a cutter pulled by a team of spanking white horses, stopping for a drink at the saloon of Azara Robichaud before turning his back forever on "Whisky Alley," where the Regulators had lashed the undesirables with black-snake whips as an argument to leave town.

With a scarf concealing his venerable locks, he climbed into the cutter, pausing to mutter a sacrilegious blessing upon the community. Then with a string of oaths and a peal of eerie laughter he disappeared over the hills, leaving Mina to look after herself. After a brief stay in central Wisconsin, Mudge went to Benton Harbor, still maintaining his clerical pose, and died there at the age of 70.

"I don't think he was as bad as Osborn made out," said William Judge, former sheriff at Florence. "But his gang caused a lot of trouble. The Menominee iron range was the toughest spot in the Middle West in those days and the worst characters shifted their operations between here and Iron Mountain. When things became too hot in Michigan they jumped to Wisconsin and vice versa.

"Mudge came from a good family and studied for the ministry in his youth, I believe. Anyhow, he knew all the hymns and prayers. He used to tell how he made congregations cry over the plight of the poor downtrodden miners and lumberjacks. With their amens ringing in his ears and their good money in his pocket he would hurry back to his bottle in a hotel.

An Early Racketeer

"He could stacks cards as expertly as any man I ever saw, and pull aces out of his sleeves so rapidly it was impossible to detect him. He was also an accomplished violinist.

There was no racket he didn't undertake. One of his favorites was the sale of a "bee sting preventive," composed of dish water and coloring put up in attractively labeled bottles. He sold it to farmers with the guarantee that if it were rubbed on the hands and face one could remove honey from a hive without unpleasantness.

"Several men who took him at his word nearly died from the consequences. He worked these dodges during the slack season, but never in this territory because everyone knew him too well."

One of the most dastardly acts attributed to the gang was the kidnaping of Willie Dickinson, seven-year-old son of Capt. William E. Dickinson, superintendent of the Commonwealth mine, two miles out of Florence. Dickinson incurred the gang's displeasure by demanding that the owner of a gambling resort move the establishment from property owned by the mine. The owner refused.

"Capt. Dickinson took matters into his own hands," Judge related. "He had a crew of men place skids under the place and roll it away. Shortly afterward his son disappeared while on his way to school in Florence. It was surmised at the time that some one picked him up with a horse and rig, on the excuse of giving the boy a ride to town.

Never Recovered

"The case was like the Lindbergh kidnaping in regard to the excitement it raised. Officers could find no clews. Capt. Dickinson spent thousands of dollars on private detectives, hired spies to join the gang and learn its secrets, offered big rewards and directed a nation-wide search. But he learned nothing. It was supposed the boy was killed and thrown into an abandoned shaft."

Pat McHugh, saloon keeper and former prize fighter, was Mudge's most notorious henchman. He was feared throughout the iron county as a bully. Though numerous charges were laid at his door he always managed to escape arrest. Because of his apparent immunity, it was charged by Osborn that Sheriff John Redmond and J. E. MacIntosh, prosecuting attorney, were under Mudge's control.

Fought A Duel

"Each blamed the other for failure to act in regard to McHugh," Judge said. "The quarrel became so bitter they agreed to duel at 50 paces. The prosecutor fired when a handkerchief was dropped but his bullet whistled wide of the mark. The sheriff's gun missed fire. Tossing aside the useless weapon, Redmond grappled with the prosecutor, who shot him in the lung during the tussle.

"The sheriff's friends obtained a rope and threatened to hang MacIntosh but their temper cooled. Redmond died from the wound a short time later."

Eventually the law caught up with McHugh. Deputies and crusading citizens chased him into a swamp, from which he sniped at them with a rifle while dodging from tree to tree. Bill Noyes, giant woodsman and brother of the two-gun sheriff who succeeded Redmond, soon had the drop on the bully who fell on his knees and begged for his life. Noyes spared him.

"Shots cracked along 'Whisky Alley almost every night," Judge added. "Life was mighty cheap. One one occasion a miner chased another man between two buildings after an argument in a saloon. When the man hid behind a lumber pile the miner waited for him to come out. As a figure stepped from the shadows the miner, who had armed himself with a plank, swung with all his strength. "The miner was tried for murder, of course, but the jury declared him innocent. It held the killing was accidental because the victim was the wrong man."

Today Florence, with mining at an end and its forests leveled, is a staid and dignified community. Business places fill "Whisky Alley," where several soft drink establishments enjoy a brisk patronage. The town lockup seldom boasts an occupant. Citizens find adventure in watering gardens and mowing their lawns, and Sunday school children play ring-around-the-rosy and other picnic games on the site of the notorious "camp of death."

5:00—Soft ball game.
5:30—Standing jump, girls under 15.
5:45—Standing jump, boys under 15.

Everyone is invited, and are requested to bring their basket. Other refreshments will be served on the ground with ice cream and pop for the children.

BRIEFS

L. C. Clipp, proprietor of the Restwood lodge on Au Train lake relates an interesting fish story that happened at his place Friday afternoon when several of his guests were out fishing. There were seven or eight boats in the lake with people fishing at the mouth of the Au Train river when Prof. C. O. Davies, of the University of Michigan, hooked, what later proved to be an eight pound rainbow trout, and as soon as the fish was hooked he began to attempt to free himself and tangled the professor's fish line with the rest of the lines. While this was going on W. A. Armstrong hooked a seven-pound wall-eyed pike that assisted the rainbow in tangling up the fishing lines. After a while both the fish were landed much to the delight of the fishermen, although much fish line was destroyed.

Labor Day will be quietly observed in Munising Monday. All places of business and public buildings will be closed. There will be no mail delivery. However, the postoffice will dispatch mail as usual. The paper mill employees will hold a picnic at Bay Furnace, and there will be sports program and speaking.

Miss Beth Vendein, who spent the summer on the Pacific coast, and who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Margaret Vendein, east Onota street the past week, left yesterday for Owosso where she will resume her teaching duties with the opening of school.

Funeral services for Mrs. Louise Michelin who died Thursday night were conducted by Rev. P. F. Manderfield yesterday morning. The remains were taken to Cheboygan yesterday afternoon for interment. The pallbearers were: Octave Perry, Henry Gollinger Wm. Carmody, John Saul, Robert Grignon and John E. Ryan. Mr. and Mrs. Gene Ramberg were here from Marquette to attend the funeral services and accompany the remains to their final resting place at Cheboygan. Mrs. Ramberg is a daughter of Mrs. Michelin.

A surprise party was tendered Mrs. Arthur Dale Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Ed Corriveau. The hostesses were Mrs. Charles Kellar, Mrs. Henry Ames and Mrs. Ed Corriveau. Five tables of 500 were played. First prize was won by Mrs. George St. Martin, second to Mrs. Paul Revord, and Mrs. Henry St. Martin received consolation. Mrs. Emma Ames was awarded the door prize.

There will be a meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. All members are urgently requested to be present.

Mrs. Lawrence Sharkey and daughter "Peggy" accamponied by Mrs. Joe Rousseau and Peter Wilson attended the fair at Chicago last week. The party returned to Munising yesterday with the exception of "Peggy" who went on to Marquette where she will visit with her aunt, Mrs. David Depew, a few days before the opening of school.

Older Girls Want To Work for Room

There are three or four girls living outside of Escanaba who plan to attend the county normal here this term, and are looking for places where they can work for their room and board. These girls are all older than high school girls, and are experienced in duties around the home.

Anyone who is able to place one of the girls and give her a room in return for work she is able to do around the home is asked to call C. U. Woolpert, county superintendent of schools.

SOCIETY BRAND CLOTHES
LAUERMAN'S

Custom Tailoring Day at LAUERMAN'S Tuesday, September 4th

A REPRESENTATIVE of the Society Brand Custom Department is making a special trip from Chicago for this event. He will present a preview of the models, patterns, colors and fabrics that will be worn by the best dressed men this fall.

He will show several hundred samples of fine custom woolens, also Society Brand's complete line of new fall models. He will personally fit customers for suits to be strictly custom tailored to individual measurements—or in a ready-to-wear size, if preferred.

Instead of merely selecting a model from a picture, you may try on various model garments and definitely determine in advance just how you will look in a certain style. This tends to eliminate all guesswork—all uncertainty—all possible disappointments.

Come—be our guest for this interesting and educational custom exhibit.

LABOR DAY

THROUGHOUT the nation, on Monday, American labor will assemble to celebrate in a fitting manner, the day set aside to dignify the important and significant place which labor, the basic principle upon which the strength of this powerful country of ours is founded, has won in this nation.

Labor Day is primarily the occasion for organized labor to review its achievements in the past and to reaffirm its confidence in the policies which have guided workers in their attainment of a higher standard of living for all classes and a fuller enjoyment of life's blessings.

For its material contribution to American civilization organized labor deserves a large measure of credit. It has always furnished, and must continue to, that calm leadership that is necessary to guide a nation through the adversities which are its stepping stones to progress. Radicals and racketeers have attempted to gain a foothold in labor unions, but in the past they have been held in check because organized labor has always stood, and stands today for justice and devotion to American ideals.

At every stage of national growth, whether in peacetime or during war periods, Labor has responded in full measure to the demands made upon it. And in view of the magnificent monument to labor that our nation with its towering buildings, its beautiful homes, and its widespread lines of transportation and communication presents, there is no more fitting occasion for celebration than that in which citizens everywhere will unite in on Monday.

A DEPLORABLE CONDITION

SCHOOLS in the state of Michigan are to open for the boys and girls of this state on Tuesday morning, faced with financial problems that contsitute a serious indictment of those in charge of Michigan's governmental affairs.

In spite of a misleadingly optimistic statement issued at Lansing on Thursday by the state department of public instruction, the schools of this state will open Tuesday morning, just as they did a year ago, with no assurance that they can operate for the full school year. With a primary school fund reduced by approximately $3,000,000, under the amount available from that source a year ago and other state aid reduced in approximate proportions, only the financially fortunate school districts in Michigan can be certain of sufficient funds to operate for the full school year.

The precarious financial position of the schools of this state was known and fully appreciated by a great majority of Michigan's people more than a year ago and up to this time only makeshift action has been taken by those in charge of the affairs of this state, to correct this deplorable situation.

A year ago the financially poor school districts in Michigan were forced to drastically slash teachers' salaries and operate under a shortened school year schedule, in order to provide even the semblance of a normal educational program for the boys and girls of these unfortunate school districts. In spite of the general realization of this condition, the same problems that faced school officers a year ago stand today as an unsurmountable obstacle to the restoration of normal school advantages for all of the boys and girls of Michigan.

A BOOST FOR GIN'RAL JOHNSON

QUITE a boost in pay has come to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson of NRA fame. Having been stepped up from $6,000 to $15,000 he must feel he is appreciated.

To have his pay more than doubled and then win in a tilt against Donald R. Richberg and Miss (or Mrs.) Perkins all in one day must set the gin'ral up quite a bit.

As government salaries go, General Johnson is entitled to his raise in pay. If the new deal is half as good as its adherents say it is, and since NRA is one of, if not the main spoke in the alleged chariot of returning prosperity, it would seem that the head engineer should be rewarded with at least a crumb from the millions upon millions which NRA is alleged by the campaign statisticians to be giving to the people. But, all this aside, no man should be asked to give what General Johnson is giving to any cause without a just recompense. General Johnson has been more indefatigable in recent months than any cabinet member.

Besides satisfaction in the pay boost that has come to the general there doubtless is satisfaction with many that Johnson won in his tilt with Donald R. Richberg and Miss (or Mrs.) Perkins. General Johnson is not going to take a vacation in Europe while the Richberg-Perkins combination warps the NRA around to its own notion. Hugh remains cock of the NRA walk.

Those who have been amazed at the NRA and have stood aghast at much that has been attempted under it, and flinched from such a spectacle of government as the general has given when he has threatened to "crack down," nevertheless vastly prefer the general to the Richberg-Perkins combination.

The whole country knows right where the general stands. He may be wrong and he may be high-handed and autocratic, but never for a moment has the nation been deceived in where he stands. How different the general from the sly, quiet, oily, adroit Richberg, gesturing with one hand to distract the audience while with the other hand he reaches for that which he secretly covets. As for Miss (or Mrs.) Perkins she thinks the moon is made of green cheese. The bluff old general, who can crack hickory nuts with his teeth, knows better.

So while many may dissent from NRA, these many still prefer administration of the new device in full sight of the audience, with lots of noise. Administration of NRA by stealth would make it unbearable.

THE STATUS OF HUEY LONG

IN HIS discussion with newspaper correspondents the other day, President Roosevelt said that he did not believe the situation in Louisiana demanded any federal action.

That Senator Long may go upon the floor of a state legislative body and order the lawmakers around as they crack whips over negroes in the deep South is, as yet, no one's business but that of Louisiana. It elects those legislators. Perhaps it likes that sort of stuff. If it does it may have plenty of it.

The opposition to Mr. Long has entered the courts of Louisiana for relief. That is the right place to make a complaint if Long and his personal legislature have transcended constitutional guarantees.

Perhaps the courts will hold that the legislature acted within the bounds of its jurisdiction, and, if so, its acts are final and must persist until the people send other legislators if dissatisfied with the present ones.

The attitude of the United States government is based solely upon the guarantee of the federal constitution that the national government shall see to it that each state has a republican form of government.

Any action by the United States government is not appropriate in the affair unless and until Mr. Long seizes power in defiance of the courts.

Then we would have a genuine transgression upon a republican form of government because such conduct would be tantamount to an overthrowal of our system of government.

When that time comes action will be so swift that Mr. Long will become dizzier than he did at that Long Island country club. The limits in this respect, however, are so plainly marked out that no man would persist as against the nation unless he were actually afflicted with some form of dementia.

Maybe if California wants to get rid of its Communists they'd be welcome in Cincinnati. They'd do almost anything there to start an uprising of the Reds.

It looks as if Aimee Semple McPherson might be slipping. A small-time evangelist has tied her for kidnaping honors and another preacher is one snake bite ahead of her.

That Kansas weather forecaster who admitted it was getting cooler when the mercury dropped from 102 to 60 probably will feel safe in ordering his coal by February.

While everybody else is supposed to be benefiting by the New Deal, how about the husband who has to exercise his wife's dog?

Huey Long doesn't mind every other man being a king, if Huey only can be the ace.

Beach Club Girl

(By NEA Service) BY MABEL McELLIOTT

CHAPTER XXI

As the days melted into weeks Boots' realization of what she had done, the seriousness of the step she had taken that August morning almost overwhelmed her. She would have died rather than admit that her marriage to Russ had been a mistake; but there it was. Nature, for her own purposes, had thrown a veil of glamour over this particular young man. Moonlit nights, scent of roses in the hedges, the spell of physical nearness had blinded her to his imperfections. Now, quite suddenly, she saw him with clear eyes. He was a fine physical specimen, he was sunbrowned, he had excellent teeth and an agreeable smile. Beyond that, beyond the lovemaking which had already begun to pall a little there was simply nothing; no bond between them. They spoke different languages.

She was not the first girl to come alive to this difference after marriage. But she was young and the lesson was a bitter one. Her stoic acceptance of the situation spoke volumes for her growing maturity. Although she celebrated her 19th birthday early in September she was years older—or felt it—in experience and wisdom. When she passed young girls on the street she glanced at them curiously.

"Was I really that stupid and unseeing last year?" she often said to herself.

After that black afternoon when she had received from her parents a strapped and neatly addressed trunk and a brief, cold note advising her that her father did not wish to hear from her again she had had no further word from Larchneck. She seldom went over to New York now. She had no money to spend and Gloria, discovering that Boots had a real talent for housework, was leaving more and more for her to do in the shabby flat.

When questioned about their plans Russ usually mumbled something vague about starting for Florida a little later. Boots had learned now that the car which he had driven about the village that summer was not really his. It had been taken back by the company because of defaulted payments. How they were to get to Florida she had no least idea but for a long time she trusted in Russ to keep his worl, against her better judgment and indeed her common sense.

The one thing she refused to do was to go to her parents for help. Russ had a little job now and then. Once he was requisitioned as a helper on a bakery wagon, working for the firm Lou drove for, and Boots' cheeks flamed scarlet as she heard the news. It seemed perfectly reasonable to all the family—to Gloria, Lou, and to Russ himself—that he should do this sort of work. To Boots, in her pride and her love, it was a cruel blow. Russ as a lifeguard had been a romantic enough figure, invested with all the glamour of the out-of-doors, windswept blue sea and yellow sand. Russ as a bakery-truck helper she shuddered at the thought. But she had put her hand to the plough now; there was no turning back.

Sometimes, in the dead of night, she thought of her mother and her tears fell thick and fast. She never let Russ see her cry. It made him angry. He hated, he said, "squalling women." But usually he was kind, in a thoroughly unimaginative way. To this girl who had been babied and petted all her life the experience of living as a member of this household was a devastating and maturing one. The old life, seen from this vantage, seemed now unbelievably soft and easy. What had she done with her time, her money? Why, even her old scanty allowance now seemed prodigal.

"We've got to get out of this place. We've simply got to," she murmured one warm morning in late September. She was alone in the flat. Gloria had left the house a few moments before on one of her periodical "shopping" orgies. Gloria was perfectly happy strolling down Manhattan's Fourteenth street, staring at the wax mannequins in the windows, sipping a hot chocolate and swallowing a double-decker sandwich at a crowded soda fountain counter. Lou and Gloria never managed to save a penny. The installment collector was a familiar figure at the door of the flat. But Gloria came home from these expeditions triumphant in her spoils—a velvet hat "just like the uptown shops," a sleazy pink silk vest, a pair of gloves which would shrink hopelessly in the first washing. Bargains were Gloria's very breath of life. Her bureau drawers overflowed with lace trimmed nightgowns with frayed seams. There were half a dozen shoddy pairs of high-heeled shoes tumbling about in gray curls of dust on the floor of her clothes closet.

"I can't live this way, I won't," Boots told herself, setting her lips stubbornly. This was the day Russ had gone over to Jersey to see some vague man "about a job." Boots had rather lost faith in these nebulous jobs. After she had hung the frayed towel beside the cracked dishpan she spread the morning paper out on the drainboard, open at the "help wanted" pages. Girl wanted . . . girl wanted . . . oh, there were 20 jobs open but she was eligible for none of them.

"Steno; some coll. operate slide rule."

"Switchbd. opr. mult. exp."

"Alert, capable woman, over 27; executive ability."

She opened her purse, the dark blue kidskin envelope she had bought so casually last spring. It was still smart looking but the change purse was limp; she shook out its contents. Thirty cents. The quarter Russ had given her yesterday. The nickel she had saved. Russ had been shamefaced but blustering about it.

"Stick with me, kid, and you'l wear diamonds," he had said. He remembered hearing his father say that to his mother.

Thirty cents. Five cents for subway fare to the city. Five cents back. She could have lunch at some counter. Maybe the basement of the dime store. She'd do it. She wouldn't wait around till Russ came home, till Gloria came dawdling in with her bargain of the day. She'd go over to New York and see if there wasn't something—anything—she could do.

If only she didn't meet anyone from home! That was the fear which plagued her most of the time. Would they cut her, turn away their eyes?

She put on her last year's fall tweed, still smart. She had pressed it herself. (How easy it had been in the old days to telephone the tailor to come around!) She darned her gloves.

On the street, her spirits lifted. It was so bright and blue a day; the air had a sort of tonic in it. She lifted her chin and stepped along with animation. She left the mean street with its occasional pallid tree behind her. Ahead, in the dazzling clearness of the distant horizon, she could see the city's towers and spires. New York! She wasn't terrified by it, its vastness and indifference because she had known it all her life as a friendly place to which one went on happy jaunts to theater and shops and restaurants. Of course it was not the same now. She was one of a vast army, struggling for a foothold. She stared out of the window as the train rushed over the bridge, her hands clenched in her mended gloves.

"I must find something," she told herself. "I simply must."

She had the newspaper want ad column in her purse. There would be the agencies first. Experience? No, she hadn't any. But weren't there some things which didn't require experience?

The woman behind the desk shook her head pleasantly but firmly. The woods, she said to Boots, were full of college girls willing to do anything. Had she tried the department stores? She had heard it was possible to get in over at Lacy's. "Personally," she said, lowering her voice, "we only handle clerical work—high-class stuff, you understand. But Lacy's—well, you might say you had a year of college. They like that. They won't investigate."

Lacy's was 10 blocks away. Ten long city blocks of crowds, of traffic lights, of milling taxis. Boots walked them briskly, impelled by youth and a fervent hope and ambition.

The personnel department of Lacy's. You made out a long form, peppered by half a hundred questions, most of them sounding quite irrelevant. You filed this. A serious young woman with a deep voice talked to you about the aims and ideals of the big store and you went away, buoyed up by a new hope. Maybe this time next week you would be behind one of those busy counters. Lace or books or chintzes. Part time at $2.90 a day. Four days of that, Boots thought ecstatically, would be almost $12. Sylvia Rivers paid $12 for her sport shoes, but what did that signify?

Lacy's! She had bought things here always. Blouses, gloves, pretty tailored underthings. Now her highest hope was to be on the other side of the counter, a sales slip in her hand.

She pitted all her strength against the stubborn glass door which swung outward, colliding with a girl who was entering the store.

"Isabel!" The name tumbled out before she had time to think.

The other girl widened her eyes. "My dear, wherever did you drop from?"

Paris, Sept. 2—The president and members of the government and all embassies of the Allied nations left Paris at 10:50 tonight for Bordeaux, where they will remain during the hostilities. The removal of the capital to Bordeaux followed almost immediately upon the issuance of proclamation by the minister of interior, who said the military authorities were responsible for the decision, having decided that fortifications of Paris, while not positively certain of being attacked, undoubtedly will be the pivotal of the field operations of the opposing armies for some time to come.

FIVE TO SEVEN

What a rare world this is, from five to seven!
Some never see the sun till high in heaven,
Behold the dew, or hear the wildbird singing
Its peep of joy before the song of winging.

Begins to ruffle, and the reeds to quiver,
Or city streets to roar, or traffic thicken,
Or men to hurt, and other hearts to sicken.

What a rare world this is, when done the sinning
Of night, nor yet the sin of day beginning,
When man has neither done the wrong nor paid it,
The earth a little as the good God made it.

An old night ended and a new day breaking.
Yes, would you make acquaintance with God's heave
Arise and see the world from five to seven.

Then we would have a genuine transgression upon a republican form of government because such conduct would be tantamount to an overthrowal of our system of government.

When that time comes action will be so swift that Mr. Long will become dizzier than he did at that Long Island country club. The limits in this respect, however, are so plainly marked out that no man would persist as against the nation unless he were actually afflicted with some form of dementia.

Maybe if California wants to get rid of its Communists they'd be welcome in Cincinnati. They'd do almost anything there to start an uprising of the Reds.

CHAPTER XXI

As the days melted into weeks Boots' realization of what she had done, the seriousness of the step she had taken that August morning almost overwhelmed her. She would have died rather than admit that her marriage to Russ had been a mistake; but there it was. Nature, for her own purposes, had thrown a veil of glamour over this particular young man. Moonlit nights, scent of roses in the hedges, the spell of physical nearness had blinded her to his imperfections. Now, quite suddenly, she saw him with clear eyes. He was a fine physical specimen, he was sunbrowned, he had excellent teeth and an agreeable smile. Beyond that, beyond the lovemaking which had already begun to pall a little there was simply nothing; no bond between them. They spoke different languages.

She was not the first girl to come alive to this difference after marriage. But she was young and the lesson was a bitter one. Her stoic acceptance of the situation spoke volumes for her growing maturity. Although she celebrated her 19th birthday early in September she was years older—or felt it—in experience and wisdom. When she passed young girls on the street she glanced at them curiously.

"Was I really that stupid and unseeing last year?" she often said to herself.

After that black afternoon when she had received from her parents a strapped and neatly addressed trunk and a brief, cold note advising her that her father did not wish to hear from her again she had had no further word from Larchneck. She seldom went over to New York now. She had no money to spend and Gloria, discovering that Boots had a real talent for housework, was leaving more and more for her to do in the shabby flat.

When questioned about their plans Russ usually mumbled something vague about starting for Florida a little later. Boots had learned now that the car which he had driven about the village that summer was not really his. It had been taken back by the company because of defaulted payments. How they were to get to Florida she had no least idea but for a long time she trusted in Russ to keep his word, against her better judgment and indeed her common sense.

The one thing she refused to do was to go to her parents for help. Russ had a little job now and then. Once he was requisitioned as a helper on a bakery wagon, working for the firm Lou drove for, and Boots' cheeks flamed scarlet as she heard the news. It seemed perfectly reasonable to all the family—to Gloria, Lou, and to Russ himself—that he should do this sort of work. To Boots, in her pride and her love, it was a cruel blow. Russ as a lifeguard had been a romantic enough figure, invested with all the glamour of the out-of-doors, windswept blue sea and yellow sand. Russ as a bakery-truck helper—she shuddered at the thought. But she had put her hand to the plough now; there was no turning back.

Sometimes, in the dead of night, she thought of her mother and her tears fell thick and fast. She never let Russ see her cry. It made him angry. He hated, he said, "squalling women." But usually he was kind, in a thoroughly unimaginative way. To this girl who had been babied and petted all her life the experience of living as a member of this household was a devastating and maturing one. The old life, seen from this vantage, seemed now unbelievably soft and easy. What had she done with her time, her money? Why, even her old scanty allowance now seemed prodigal.

"We've got to get out of this place. We've simply got to," she murmured one warm morning in late September. She was alone in the flat. Gloria had left the house a few moments before on one of her periodical "shopping" orgies. Gloria was perfectly happy strolling down Manhattan's Fourteenth street, staring at the wax mannequins in the windows, sipping a hot chocolate and swallowing a double-decker sandwich at a crowded soda fountain counter. Lou and Gloria never managed to save a penny. The installment collector was a familiar figure at the door of the flat. But Gloria came home from these expeditions triumphant in her spoils—a velvet hat "just like the uptown shops," a sleazy pink silk vest, a pair of gloves which would shrink hopelessly in the first washing. Bargains were Gloria's very breath of life. Her bureau drawers overflowed with lace trimmed nightgowns with frayed seams. There were half a dozen shoddy pairs of high-heeled shoes tumbling about in gray curls of dust on the floor of her clothes closet.

"I can't live this way, I won't," Boots told herself, setting her lips stubbornly. This was the day Russ had gone over to Jersey to see some vague man "about a job." Boots had rather lost faith in these nebulous jobs. After she had hung the frayed towel beside the cracked dishpan she spread the morning paper out on the drainboard, open at the "help wanted" pages. Girl wanted . . . girl wanted . . . oh, there were 20 jobs open but she was eligible for none of them.

"Steno: some coll. operate slide rule."

"Switchbd. opr. mult. exp."

She opened her purse, the dark blue kidskin envelope she had bought so casually last spring. It was still smart looking but the change purse was limp; she shook out its contents. Thirty cents. The quarter Russ had given her yesterday. The nickel she had saved. Russ had been shamefaced but blustering about it.

"Stick with me, kid, and you'll wear diamonds," he had said. He remembered hearing his father say that to his mother.

Thirty cents. Five cents for subway fare to the city. Five cents back. She could have lunch at some counter. Maybe the basement of the dime store. She'd do it. She wouldn't wait around till Russ came home, till Gloria came dawdling in with her bargain of the day. She'd go over to New York and see if there wasn't something—anything—she could do.

If only she didn't meet anyone from home! That was the fear which plagued her most of the time. Would they cut her, turn away their eyes?

She put on her last year's fall tweed, still smart. She had pressed it herself. (How easy it had been in the old days to telephone the tailor to come around.) She darned her gloves.

On the street, her spirits lifted. It was so bright and blue a day; the air had a sort of tonic in it. She lifted her chin and stepped along with animation. She left the mean street with its occasional pallid tree behind her. Ahead, in the dazzling clearness of the distant horizon, she could see the city's towers and spires. New York! She wasn't terrified by it, its vastness and indifference because she had known it all her life as a friendly place to which one went on happy jaunts to theater and shops and restaurants. Of course it was not the same now. She was one of a vast army, struggling for a foothold. She stared out of the window as the train rushed over the bridge, her hands clenched in her mended gloves.

"I must find something," she told herself. "I simply must."

She had the newspaper want ad column in her purse. There would be the agencies first. Experience? No, she hadn't any. But weren't there some things which didn't require experience?

The woman behind the desk shook her head pleasantly but firmly. The woods, she said to Boots, were full of college girls willing to do anything. Had she tried the department stores? She had heard it was possible to get in over at Lacy's. "Personally," she said, lowering her voice, "we only handle clerical work—high-class stuff, you understand. But Lacy's—well, you might say you had a year of college. They like that. They won't investigate."

Lacy's was 10 blocks away. Ten long city blocks of crowds, of traffic lights, of milling taxis. Boots walked them briskly, impelled by youth and a fervent hope and ambition.

The personnel department of Lacy's. You made out a long form, peppered by half a hundred questions, most of them sounding quite irrelevant. You filed this. A serious young woman with a deep voice talked to you about the aims and ideals of the big store and you went away, buoyed up by a new hope. Maybe this time next week you would be behind one of those busy counters. Lace or books or chintzes. Part time at $2.90 a day. Four days of that, Boots thought ecstatically, would be almost $12. Sylvia Rivers paid $12 for her sport shoes, but what did that signify?

Lacy's! She had bought things here always. Blouses, gloves, pretty tailored underthings. Now her highest hope was to be on the other side of the counter, a sales slip in her hand.

She pitted all her strength against the stubborn glass door which swung outward, colliding with a girl who was entering the store.

"Isabel!" The name tumbled out before she had time to think.

The other girl widened her eyes. "My dear, wherever did you drop from?"

FIVE TO SEVEN

What a rare world this is, from five to seven!
Some never see the sun till high in heaven,
Behold the dew, or hear the wildbird singing
Its peep of joy before the song of winging.

Begins to ruffle, and the reeds to quiver,
Or city streets to roar, or traffic thicken,
Or men to hurt, and other hearts to sicken.

What a rare world this is, when done the sinning
Of night, nor yet the sin of day beginning,
When man has neither done the wrong nor paid it,
The earth a little as the good God made it.

An old night ended and a new day breaking.
Yes, would you make acquaintance with God's heave
Arise and see the world from five to seven.

Paris, Sept. 2—The president and members of the government and all embassies of the Allied nations left Paris at 10:50 tonight for Bordeaux, where they will remain during the hostilities. The removal of the capital to Bordeaux followed almost immediately upon the issuance of proclamation by the minister of interior, who said the military authorities were responsible for the decision, having decided that fortifications of Paris, while not positively certain of being attacked, undoubtedly will be the pivotal of the field operations of the opposing armies for some time to come.

Parade, Picnic Feature Escanaba's Labor Day

UNIONS TO JOIN IN CELEBRATION

Business Places Enter Floats, Speaking and Sports Scheduled

Hundreds of marching men, representing a score or more of different labor organizations, will march in the parade which will feature Escanaba's Labor Day celebration Monday. In addition, there will be floats entered by business houses and local civic bodies.

The activities of the day will start with a ball game at 9 a. m. on the west Ludington street diamond, followed by the parade at 10 a. m. A program of sports will begin at 1 p. m., and there will be a speaking program at South Park, scheduled for 2 p. m., with addresses by Congressman Prentiss M. Brown, Mayor Carl J. Sawyer, and A. E. Radford, labor organizer in lower peninsula automobile plants. Mr. Radford will give inside facts on the labor situation as he has seen it in the last few months. John Luecke is chairman of the speaking.

Rep. Brown

Ed Packenham is parade chairman, and business floats were contracted by Elmer Swanson. Herbert Barry and William Langhorn, Escanaba, and C. J. Cowman and William McNally, Manistique, are also on the parade arrangements committee. Manistique will be represented in the parade by a delegation of papermakers and one of pulp and sulphite workers, all uniformly dressed, wearing white paper caps.

The Escanaba band will lead the parade, which will form at the junior high school to start off at 10 a. m. Floats which will be seen in the parade will represent the following business places DeGrand Motor Co., Escanaba Veneer Co., Hansen and Jensen Oil Co., Swift and Co., The Fair Store, Delta Brewing Co., Fairmont Creamery, Wadhams Oil Co., Northern Motor Co., Escanaba Dairy, I. Stephenson Co., Standard Oil Co. In addition to these there will be a beautiful patriotic float prepared by the Escanaba American Legion and Legion Auxiliary.

Howard McKie, representative of the machinists, is general chairman of the celebration, and the various labor units are represented by the following committeemen: Harry Ebert, barbers; Wilbur Slye, pulp and sulphite workers; Fred Soper, brewery workers; Bert Pennings, papermakers; Robert Cass, dock workers; Fred Peltier, sheet metal workers; Clifford Beaudin, typographical; Albert Nelson, machinists; Louis Amundsen, carpenters; Joseph Beitzer, painters; Peter Logan, firemen.

All Schools Start Work Next Tuesday

Throughout Delta county, schools will reopen Tuesday morning, Sept. 4, for the fall term, County Superintendent C. P. Woolpert announces.

The one exception to the rule is the Schaffer school, which started last Monday, and has completed its first week.

Proclamation

WHEREAS, the strength and security of this mighty land of ours is based primarily upon the foundation of labor,

AND WHEREAS, the significance of labor and its importance in the scheme of existence have never been more apparent than at the present time when we as a nation are emerging from a period of economic instability,

I, CARL J. SAWYER, Mayor of the City of Escanaba urge that Monday, Labor Day, be observed by all citizens of the community in a manner fitting and proper to the dignity of the day, and that all ordinary activities be suspended in observance of the holiday.

Signed:
CARL. J. SAWYER.

SUPERVISION

Editor Daily Press:

Shall the county of Delta, state of Michigan, borrow the sum of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) to defray the costs of materials and equipment to be used in the construction, improvement and completion of several work relief projects in said county of Delta, including therein the costs of supervision?

There is nothing mentioned as to the number of "supervisors" required to execute this project, but the average intellect does not need super-vision to realize how many super-intellects are in demand for a project of this kind. And really it's only a matter of good form that super-minds receive super-salaries. The outlook for the relief workers' share of the total is probably the smallest portion of the loan.

In order to reduce this "supervision' cost, why not select some of this help from the "unemployment" lists? Perhaps there are no people with "brains' on the relief rolls of this county.

Before the qualified electors are asked to vote "yes" on this bond issue, a published statement should be given on how much of this fund will reach the "needy."

To my knowledge there was only one dissenting vote at the meeting of the supervisors; that's one reason for being cautious, and the editorial of a local newspaper has changed front on "bond issues" since the state bond was voted on.

"Watch your step!"

Yours truly,
A Qualified Elector of Delta County.

Columnist Lauds "Sky-Line Drive"

"Don't miss taking the new Skyline Drive in Keweenaw county this summer or fall," says Manthei Howe, editor of the women's page in the Marquette Mining Journal. "You can go to Brockway's Nose and back, with time for lunch along the way, in about a three hours' drive from Houghton or Hancock.

"It will be a precious vacation experience, and worth the time," continues Mrs. Howe. "You will be in luck if you can take the drive when the foliage is colored in autumn. The trip is a glorious one at any time, but one can well imagine that in fall hues the drive will be a tremendous spectacle of coloring."

Coffee first came into human notice during the 18th century because the shrub caused intoxication among sheep.

ESCANABA HAS SAILING FLEET

Many Small Boats Added This Year; Entering In Races Today

As a fitting climax to a season which has witnessed a marked revival of interest in sailing craft, the Escanaba Yacht Club will sponsor a regatta this afternoon off the north shore beach, with races starting at 2:30 p. m. for two classes of sailing boats.

Included in the list of Escanaba and Gladstone boats which will be seen in action today, weather conditions permitting, are the following:

20 to 30 Foot Class

Sandra—Joseph Shipman's 30 foot ketch. Rebuilt and rigged by Shipman and Tim Crane. The largest sailboat in Escanaba.

Marjac—A 25 foot sloop built at Washington Island. Recently purchased by Jack Erickson.

The 20-Foot Class

Sea Hag—Built this spring by a group of high school boys all living in the 700 block on So. 13th st. Henry and Clarence Olson, Carlton Johnson and Melvin Ostman built this 15 foot boat, fitted it with a sloop rig and will sail it in the 20 foot class today.

Escamaid—Built in Escanaba two years ago by the Jacobsen brothers from original plans drawn by Albert Jacobsen. The plans were drawn for a boat suited to sailing conditions of the Bay. The boat is 12½ feet long and fitted with a cat rig.

Mac—Built this summer by Robert Moll, Dick Carlton and John Andrews. Is 14 feet long, cat rigged and its owners claim a lot of speed for their handiwork.

Sea Dog—Owned, built and rigged by Bill Beckstrom. Sloop rigged and 14 feet long. The advance information says that Bill's boat may surprise some of the other sailors.

Dolphin—Purchased by Joseph Shipman from its original owner Bruce Brackett. Shipman sailed it last summer and became so enthusiastic about the sport that he purchased his present 30 foot Ketch last fall. The boat is 14 feet long, sloop rigged and will be sailed by its present owner, Bill Fish.

Unknown—Owned by John Berger and Jack Carlson. Built in Escanaba and rigged by the present owners. 14 foot boat, Marconi sail rigged by the present owners.

Ben Young's cabin cruiser will carry the judges in today's race events. Another addition to the boat fleet at Escanaba, is the Puritana, owned by the Sea Scouts of Escanaba, which is being renovated, and will not be ready for launching until later in the season.

Among the smaller craft entered in the regatta today is "The Snark," a fifteen foot sail boat, built by Skippers John Andrews, Dick Carlton and Robert Moll. The boys spent the entire summer making the craft and launched it just recently. Its entry in the Regatta today will be its first race.

Labor Aims Steadily At Definite Goal, Refuses To Chase Phantoms

This is the fourth of a series of six stories on 'The March of Labor," telling of the gains made by union workers under NRA, the problems which beset them in this new era, and giving a brief history of the union labor movement in the U. S.

BY WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Washington.—The American Federation of Labor, great organization with which nearly 4,000,000 American workmen have cast their lot, is almost exactly what its name implies.

It is as American as pumpkin pie. Its origins are purely American, and its policies have always been insistent on protecting American labor and supporting American institutions. Its few ventures into internationalism have always been half-hearted and vague.

It is a federation, a rather loose-knit association of 108 national and international unions, consisting of nearly 30,000 local unions. The nucleus is some 15 or 20 long-established and powerful craft unions in highly skilled trades.

Though united in the association, member unions keep a high degree of independence in running their own affairs. For instance, in the threatened strike in the cotton textile trades, you observe that the decision to strike or not to strike rests with the textile unions.

The A. F. of L. offers its support, moral and probably financial, but can do nothing about actual conduct of such a strike except offer advice.

LEAVES RACKET LOOPHOLE

This lack of control by the federation over its member unions has contributed to the difficulty of suppressing racketeering and in settling disputes over which union shall do a certain kind of work.

The federation is "of labor." Labor built it, fostered it, supports it, and runs it. The criticism of the federation formerly made, that it had been unable or unwilling to organize the mass of unskilled labor, is less valid today.

BACKS "FEDERAL UNIONS"

These pay dues directly to the federation, which supervises their affairs, gives direction and advice, and guarantees support.

These "federal unions" are not a new device in the federation. They date back to the contest with the Knights of Labor, when the A. F. of L. had to take such a step to avoid the stigma of being "exclusive" and against the unskilled worker.

The federation has a constitution which fixes the objects of its work and the powers of its officers and constituent unions. But the final authority lies in the annual convention, opening this year on Oct. 1 at San Francisco. Delegates attend from national and international unions, city centrals, state federations.

The number of votes of delegates is so arranged that in the past it has always given dominance to the old international unions, which vote in proportion to membership, while central bodies and federal unions generally have one vote apiece.

COUNCIL HAS POWER

Between conventions, authority rests with the executive council of 11 members, which, practically speaking, acts for the federation, subject to the check of the convention. The president, who draws $12,000 a year and traveling expenses, is the actual leader of this labor army.

The federation has always followed the lines laid down by Samuel Gompers, who led it so long that he became a sort of personal incarnation of American labor. It is due to his influence that the federation has always steered clear of political entanglements.

It is due to him that it has had a sound financial policy that enabled it to survive severe depressions in '93, '05, '21, and '29.

It is due to him that it has stayed close to its "practical" view of objectives, always working for the next objective of higher wages, shorter hours, and better conditions, rather than fixing its eyes exclusively on some far-off idealistic goal.

SPOKE PROPHETIC WORDS

Gompers is accused of having had no higher ideal than was expressed by the slogan "More!" But the untruth of this is best shown by the prophetic words he spoke many years ago, before technocracy, before 13,000,000 unemployed, before NRA: "So long as there is one man who seeks employment and can not obtain it, the hours of labor are too long!"

The early years of the A. F. of L. were so occupied in fighting for its own existence that it is not surprising if its social view was not the broadest.

NEGOTIATE FIRST, IS POLICY

The first great A. F. of L. strike, that of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel workers in 1901, was lost, but by rallying public support the federation helped the United Mine Workers to win a coal strike in 1902 in which the elder J. P. Morgan himself had to compromise.

But A. F. of L. policy has always been to negotiate first and to strike only if that fails.

In its earliest days it was regarded by employers much as the Communists are regarded today.

Refusing to be brought into direct political alliances, the federation has exerted a continuous influence in politics, nevertheless. Its lobbying has been a factor in many reforms, its vote has defeated many an anti-labor politician, and its impress has been left on every phase of American life.

"ARISTOCRATS OF LABOR"

The trade union idea of an exclusive, highly skilled craft, reached perhaps its highest development, oddly enough, outside the federation. That is in the Four Brotherhoods of skilled railway workers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Order of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. At their peak, they represented some half-million workers.

Pioneers here were the Engineers, who won and more or less merited the name of "aristocrats of labor." They are highly skilled, highly trained, highly organized workers, who built a benevolent society "The Brotherhood of the Footboard" into one of the richest and greatest labor organizations the world ever saw.

UNABLE TO ACHIEVE UNITY

Efforts to unite the Brotherhoods with the A. F. of L. have been made repeatedly, but never succeeded. Difficulties in amalgamating the A. F. of L. Switchmen's Union with the Trainmen, and failure of the Brotherhoods to support the federation shopmen's strike have been points of friction.

The Engineers are best known to the public for their recent ill-fated excursion into capitalism. Under the leadership of Warren S. Stone, the Brotherhood organized a bank, bought coal mines, developed a Florida city (Venice), planned to enter chain store, steel, hotel, and mail order businesses—it had some 70 firms under its control at one time.

It was bitterly accused in 1924 by the United Mine Workers of conducting its Coal River Collieries on a non-union basis.

But these labor business projects went, many of them, the same way as similar capitalistic projects—the engineer-investors lost their money, and the Brotherhood suffered in money losses and in prestige.

The Locomotive Engineers marked the high point in exclusive skilled craft unionism. But other forces were at work in the ranks of labor.

NEXT: The radicals try to capture the unskilled worker. The "Wobblies," the Communists, and the minor labor elements.

Dr. J. W. Towey Will Address K. of C.'s

Brown and Rushton Speakers At Rapid

Rapid River, Sept. 1 (Special)—Plans have been completed for the big two day Labor-Day celebration given Sunday and Monday at the Dutch Mill, seven miles north of Rapid River by the Walter W. Cole Post of Rapid River.

At the grounds there will be several concession stands, including lunch and beer, and there will be different forms of races for the children and tug of war for the men ,and other various forms of entertainment. There will be dancing in both the afternoon and evening, in the Dutch Mill ballroom floor. Claude Parmalee of Iron Mountain, who is considered the best crack shot artist in the peninsula, and who is also of the Winchester gun company, will give an exhibition both afternoons.

Addresses will be given on both days, by many prominent speakers, included in the list is Congressman Prentiss Brown of St. Ignace and Ex-Senator Herbert J. Rushton of Escanaba. There will also be other speakers on the program. Candidates for offices, in the Democratic, Republican and Farmer-Socialist ranks will also be introduced to the crowd.

The public is cordially invited to attend this big two day affair.

Personal Items

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Johnson and Mrs. Stone Anderson left Friday night for Chicago where they will attend the World's Fair and visit with relatives.

Charles Burton of Lansing arrived Friday to visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Columb for a few days, and later he will make a business tour of the peninsula where he will look over all the CCC camps.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sobesky of Marquette are spending the week-end at their home here.

Miss Lucille Larson of Norway is the guest of Miss Elizabeth Miller for several days. Monday she will go to Trenary where she will be employed in the Trenary high school.

Miss Clara Callahan of Marquette is visiting over the week-end at the Jerry LaFountain home. Miss Callahan recently accepted a position in that city.

Licenses Issued For 450 Cars At Escanaba Office

Even before the office was opened in the morning, automobile owners started lining up Saturday at the department of state branch bureau in Escanaba to purchase automobile licenses replacing the half-year stickers which expired Friday night. Business continued with hardly a break throughout the day, and George Harvey, manager of the local license branch, reported a total of about 450 sets of plates issued, with about 400 passenger and 50 commercial.

This total is far ahead of the total number issued last year, indicating that more cars are in operation due to reduced weight tax rates and that more are taking advantage of the half-year plan of payment.

Parade, Picnic Feature Escanaba's Labor Day

Business Places Enter Floats, Speaking and Sports Scheduled

Hundreds of marching men, representing a score or more of different labor organizations, will march in the parade which will feature Escanaba's Labor Day celebration Monday. In addition, there will be floats entered by business houses and local civic bodies.

Rep. Brown

The activities of the day will start with a ball game at 9 a. m. on the west Ludington street diamond, followed by the parade at 10 a. m. A program of sports will begin at 1 p. m., and there will be a speaking program at South Park, scheduled for 2 p. m., with addresses by Congressman Prentiss M. Brown, Mayor Carl J. Sawyer, and A. E. Radford, labor organizer in lower peninsula automobile plants. Mr. Radford will give inside facts on the labor situation as he has seen it in the last few months. John Luecke is chairman of the speaking.

Ed Packenham is parade chairman, and business floats were contracted by Elmer Swanson. Herbert Barry and William Langhorn, Escanaba, and C. J. Cowman and William McNally, Manistique, are also on the parade arrangements committee. Manistique will be represented in the parade by a delegation of papermakers and one of pulp and sulphite workers, all uniformly dressed, wearing white paper caps.

The Escanaba band will lead the parade, which will form at the junior high school to start off at 10 a. m. Floats which will be seen in the parade will represent the following business places DeGrand Motor Co., Escanaba Veneer Co., Hansen and Jensen Oil Co., Swift and Co., The Fair Store, Delta Brewing Co., Fairmont Creamery, Wadhams Oil Co., Northern Motor Co., Escanaba Dairy, I. Stephenson Co., Standard Oil Co. In addition to these there will be a beautiful patriotic float prepared by the Escanaba American Legion and Legion Auxiliary.

Howard McKie, representative of the machinists, is general chairman of the celebration, and the various labor units are represented by the following committeemen: Harry Ebert, barbers; Wilbur Slye, pulp and sulphite workers; Fred Soper, brewery workers; Bert Pennings, papermakers; Robert Cass, dock workers; Fred Peltier, sheet metal workers; Clifford Beaudin, typographical; Albert Nelson, machinists; Louis Amundsen, carpenters; Joseph Beitzer, painters; Peter Logan, firemen.

All Schools Start Work Next Tuesday

Throughout Delta county, schools will reopen Tuesday morning, Sept. 4, for the fall term, County Superintendent C. U. Woolpert announces.

The one exception to the rule is the Schaffer school, which started last Monday, and has completed its first week.

Proclamation

WHEREAS, the strength and security of this mighty land of ours is based primarily upon the foundation of labor,

AND WHEREAS, the significance of labor and its importance in the scheme of existence have never been more apparent than at the present time when we as a nation are emerging from a period of economic instability,

I, CARL J. SAWYER, Mayor of the City of Escanaba urge that Monday, Labor Day, be observed by all citizens of the community in a manner fitting and proper to the dignity of the day, and that all ordinary activities be suspended in observance of the holiday.

Signed:

SUPERVISION

Editor Daily Press:

Shall the county of Delta, state of Michigan, borrow the sum of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) to defray the costs of materials and equipment to be used in the construction, improvement and completion of several work relief projects in said county of Delta, including therein the costs of supervision?

There is nothing mentioned as to the number of "supervisors" required to execute this project, but the average intellect does not need super-vision to realize how many super-intellects are in demand for a project of this kind. And really it's only a matter of good form that super-minds receive super-salaries. The outlook for the relief workers' share of the total is probably the smallest portion of the loan.

In order to reduce this "super-vision' cost, why not select some of this help from the "unemployment" lists? Perhaps there are no people with "brains' on the relief rolls of this county.

Before the qualified electors are asked to vote "yes" on this bond issue, a published statement should be given on how much of this fund will reach the "needy."

To my knowledge there was only one dissenting vote at the meeting of the supervisors; that's one reason for being cautious, and the editorial of a local newspaper has changed front on "bond issues" since the state bond was voted on. "Watch your step!"

Yours truly,
A Qualified Elector
of Delta County.

Columnist Lauds "Sky-Line Drive"

"Don't miss taking the new Skyline Drive in Keweenaw county this summer or fall," says Manthei Howe, editor of the women's page in the Marquette Mining Journal. "You can go to Brockway's Nose and back, with time for lunch along the way, in about a three hours' drive from Houghton or Hancock.

"It will be a precious vacation experience, and worth the time," continues Mrs. Howe. "You will be in luck if you can take the drive when the foliage is colored in autumn. The trip is a glorious one at any time, but one can well imagine that in fall hues the drive will be a tremendous spectacle of coloring."

Coffee first came into human notice during the 18th century because the shrub caused intoxication among sheep.

ESCANABA HAS SAILING FLEET

Many Small Boats Added This Year; Entering In Races Today

As a fitting climax to a season which has witnessed a marked revival of interest in sailing craft, the Escanaba Yacht Club will sponsor a regatta this afternoon off the north shore beach, with races starting at 2:30 p. m. for two classes of sailing boats.

Included in the list of Escanaba and Gladstone boats which will be seen in action today, weather conditions permitting, are the following:

20 to 30 Foot Class

Marjac—A 25 foot sloop built at Washington Island. Recently purchased by Jack Erickson.

The 20-Foot Class

Sea Hag—Built this spring by a group of high school boys all living in the 700 block on So. 13th st. Henry and Clarence Olson, Carlton Johnson and Melvin Ostman built this 15 foot boat, fitted it with a sloop rig and will sail it in the 20 foot class today.

Escamaid—Built in Escanaba two years ago by the Jacobsen brothers from original plans drawn by Albert Jacobsen. The plans were drawn for a boat suited to sailing conditions of the Bay. The boat is 12½ feet long and fitted with a cat rig.

Mac—Built this summer by Robert Moll, Dick Carlton and John Andrews. Is 14 feet long, cat rigged and its owners claim a lot of speed for their handiwork.

Sea Dog—Owned, built and rigged by Bill Beckstrom. Sloop rigged and 14 feet long. The advance information says that Bill's boat may surprise some of the other sailors.

Dolphin—Purchased by Joseph Shipman from its original owner Bruce Brackett. Shipman sailed it last summer and became so enthusiastic about the sport that he purchased his present 30 foot Ketch last fall. The boat is 14 feet long, sloop rigged and will be sailed by its present owner, Bill Fish.

Unknown—Owned by John Berger and Jack Carlson. Built in Escanaba and rigged by the present owners. 14 foot boat, Marconi sail rigged by the present owners.

Ben Young's cabin cruiser will carry the judges in today's race events. Another addition to the boat fleet at Escanaba, is the Puritana, owned by the Sea Scouts of Escanaba, which is being renovated, and will not be ready for launching until later in the season.

Among the smaller craft entered in the regatta today is "The Snark," a fifteen foot sail boat, built by Skippers John Andrews, Dick Carlton and Robert Moll. The boys spent the entire summer making the craft and launched it just recently. Its entry in the Regatta today will be its first race.

Labor Aims Steadily At Definite Goal, Refuses To Chase Phantoms

This is the fourth of a series of six stories on 'The March of Labor," telling of the gains made by union workers under NRA, the problems which beset them in this new era, and giving a brief history of the union labor movement in the U. S.

BY WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Washington. — The American Federation of Labor, great organization with which nearly 4,000,000 American workmen have cast their lot, is almost exactly what its name implies.

It is as American as pumpkin pie. Its origins are purely American, and its policies have always been insistent on protecting American labor and supporting American institutions. Its few ventures into internationalism have always been half-hearted and vague.

It is a federation, a rather loose-knit association of 108 national and international unions, consisting of nearly 30,000 local unions. The nucleus is some 15 or 20 long-established and powerful craft unions in highly skilled trades.

Though united in the association, member unions keep a high degree of independence in running their own affairs. For instance, in the threatened strike in the cotton textile trades, you observe that the decision to strike or not to strike rests with the textile unions.

The A. F. of L. offers its support, moral and probably financial, but can do nothing about actual conduct of such a strike except offer advice.

LEAVES RACKET LOOPHOLE

This lack of control by the federation over its member unions has contributed to the difficulty of suppressing racketeering and in settling disputes over which union shall do a certain kind of work.

The federation is "of labor." Labor built it, fostered it, supports it, and runs it. The criticism of the federation formerly made, that it had been unable or unwilling to organize the mass of unskilled labor, is less valid today.

BACKS "FEDERAL UNIONS"

These pay dues directly to the federation, which supervises their affairs, gives direction and advice, and guarantees support.

These "federal unions" are not a new device in the federation. They date back to the contest with the Knights of Labor, when the A. F. of L. had to take such a step to avoid the stigma of being "exclusive" and against the unskilled worker.

The federation has a constitution which fixes the objects of its work and the powers of its officers and constituent unions. But the final authority lies in the annual convention, opening this year on Oct. 1 at San Francisco. Delegates attend from national and international unions, city centrals, state federations.

The number of votes of delegates is so arranged that in the past it has always given dominance to the old international unions, which vote in proportion to membership, while central bodies and federal unions generally have one vote apiece.

COUNCIL HAS POWER

Between conventions, authority rests with the executive council of 11 members, which, practically speaking, acts for the federation, subject to the check of the convention. The president, who draws $12,000 a year and traveling expenses, is the actual leader of this labor army.

The federation has always followed the lines laid down by Samuel Gompers, who led it so long that he became a sort of personal incarnation of American labor. It is due to his influence that the federation has always steered clear of political entanglements.

It is due to him that it has had a sound financial policy that enabled it to survive severe depressions in '93, '05, '21, and '29.

It is due to him that it has stayed close to its "practical" view of objectives, always working for the next objective of higher wages, shorter hours, and better conditions, rather than fixing its eyes exclusively on some far-off idealistic goal.

SPOKE PROPHETIC WORDS

Gompers is accused of having had no higher ideal than was expressed by the slogan "More!" But the untruth of this is best shown by the prophetic words he spoke many years ago, before technocracy, before 13,000,000 unemployed, before NRA: "So long as there is one man who seeks employment and can not obtain it, the hours of labor are too long!"

The early years of the A. F. of L. were so occupied in fighting for its own existence that it is not surprising if its social view was not the broadest.

NEGOTIATE FIRST, IS POLICY

The first great A. F. of L. strike, that of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel workers in 1901, was lost, but by rallying public support the federation helped the United Mine Workers to win a coal strike in 1902 in which the elder J. P. Morgan himself had to compromise.

But A. F. of L. policy has always been to negotiate first and to strike only if that fails.

In its earliest days it was regarded by employers much as the Communists are regarded today.

Refusing to be brought into direct political alliances, the federation has exerted a continuous influence in politics, nevertheless. Its lobbying has been a factor in many reforms, its vote has defeated many an anti-labor politician, and its impress has been left on every phase of American life.

"ARISTOCRATS OF LABOR"

The trade union idea of an exclusive, highly skilled craft, reached perhaps its highest development, oddly enough, outside the federation. That is in the Four Brotherhoods of skilled railway workers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Order of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. At their peak, they represented some half-million workers.

Pioneers here were the Engineers, who won and more or less merited the name of "aristocrats of labor." They are highly skilled, highly trained, highly organized workers, who built a benevolent society "The Brotherhood of the Footboard" into one of the richest and greatest labor organizations the world ever saw.

UNABLE TO ACHIEVE UNITY

Efforts to unite the Brotherhoods with the A. F. of L. have been made repeatedly, but never succeeded. Difficulties in amalgamating the A. F. of L. Switchmen's Union with the Trainmen, and failure of the Brotherhoods to support the federation shopmen's strike have been points of friction.

The Engineers are best known to the public for their recent ill-fated excursion into capitalism. Under the leadership of Warren S. Stone, the Brotherhood organized a bank, bought coal mines, developed a Florida city (Venice), planned to enter chain store, steel, hotel, and mail order businesses—it had some 70 firms under its control at one time.

It was bitterly accused in 1924 by the United Mine Workers of conducting its Coal River Collieries on a non-union basis.

But these labor business projects went, many of them, the same way as similar capitalistic projects—the engineer-investors lost their money, and the Brotherhood suffered in money losses and in prestige.

The Locomotive Engineers marked the high point in exclusive skilled craft unionism. But other forces were at work in the ranks of labor.

NEXT: The radicals try to capture the unskilled worker. The "Wobblies," the Communists, and the minor labor elements.

Brown and Rushton Speakers At Rapid

Rapid River, Sept. 1 (Special)—Plans have been completed for the big two day Labor-Day celebration given Sunday and Monday at the Dutch Mill, seven miles north of Rapid River by the Walter W. Cole Post of Rapid River.

At the grounds there will be several concession stands, including lunch and beer, and there will be different forms of races for the children and tug of war for the men ,and other various forms of entertainment. There will be dancing in both the afternoon and evening, in the Dutch Mill ballroom floor. Claude Parmalee of Iron Mountain, who is considered the best crack shot artist in the peninsula, and who is also of the Winchester gun company, will give an exhibition both afternoons.

Addresses will be given on both days, by many prominent speakers, included in the list is Congressman Prentiss Brown of St. Ignace and Ex-Senator Herbert J. Rushton of Escanaba. There will also be other speakers on the program. Candidates for offices, in the Democratic, Republican and Farmer-Socialist ranks will also be introduced to the crowd.

The public is cordially invited to attend this big two day affair.

Gregory-Charland

Miss Florence Gregory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gregory, 610 South Nineteenth street, became the bride of William Charland, son and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Charland, 211 South Fourteenth street, at a pretty early fall wedding ceremony yesterday morning at 8 o'clock at St. Anne's church. Msgr. R. G. Jacques, celebrant of the high mass, performed the marriage ceremony. Mrs. Thomas Tousignant sang the "Ave Maria."

The young couple was attended by Miss Evelyn Gregory and William Gregory. Shirley Jane La Crosse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer LaCrosse, was flower girl.

The bride was gowned in a beautiful white satin gown, form fitting, beaded about the neck and with a high standing collar, puffed sleeves and flared skirt. She wore a short veil with orange blossoms and white slippers and carried a bouquet of snapdragons, lilies of the valley, roses and baby breath. Miss Evelyn Gregory, her bridesmaid, wore a gown of peach taffeta with ruffled skirt and a becoming jacket with puffed sleeves and a picture hat of peach color and white slippers. She carried a bouquet of roses, snapdragons and baby breath. The little flower girl wore a dress of green taffeta with ruffled skirt and green anklets, white slippers and a green taffeta bow. She carried snapdragons and baby breath.

Dinner and supper were served at the home of the bride's parents to forty guests. Home decorations were of blue and pink with flowers and white tapers at each of the tables.

For going away the bride wore a black and white suit with hat and slippers to match. Following a trip to Chicago and Milwaukee Mr. and Mrs. Charland will be at home at 211 South Fourteneth street.

The bride attended the Catholic parochial schools of the city and has been employed at Woolworth's. Mr. Charland attended the public schools and is employed at the paper mill.

Relatives and friends from away who attended the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. John Kolb, Miss Helen Kolb, Nick Kolb, all of Milwaukee, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grmaine of Denver, Colo.

Wedding Here Monday Morning Of Wide Interest

St. Patrick's church will be the scene of a wedding ceremony of impressive beauty on Monday, the marriage of Miss Catherine Aileen Connelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Connelly, and Willard J. LaViolette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert D. LaViolette.

The ceremony will take place at a solemn nuptial high mass at 9 o'clock with Rev. Fr. Mathias LaViolette of Negaunee, brother of Mr. LaViolette, who will officiate, as celebrant, assisted by Rev. Fr. T. Parnell Dunleavy, Rev. Fr. John Hughes and Rev. Fr. Albert Pellisier, of L'Anse, Rev. Fr. Raymond Bergeron of Engadine and Rev. Fr. Thomas Kennedy, will also be present at the ceremony.

Members of the bridal party will be Miss Lucille LaViolette, who has been chosen by the bride-elect for her maid of honor; Miss Margaret Wade and Miss Marjorie Koppes, bridesmaids; and little Aileen Gaffney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gaffney, flower girl; Francis Boyce, who will be best man, and Robert Finley and Frederick Fillion, ushers.

A wedding breakfast for immediate members of the families will be served at the Delta hotel following the marriage service.

The young people will motor through the east on their wedding trip and will be at home in Escanaba at 1414 First Avenue south, after September 20.

Margaret Halligan Will Be Bride Of Dr. W. A. LeMire

Among weddings of unusual interest socially during the month of September is that of Miss Margaret Halligan, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Raymond S. Halligan of Flint, Mich., to Dr. William A. LeMire of this city, son of Mrs. William A. LeMire of 600 Lake Shore Drive.

The ceremony, which is to be one of simplicity of appointment, is to take place at early morning mass at St. Matthew's church, in Flint, on Monday, September 3. Rev. Fr. Daniel Driscoll will officiate.

Attending the bride will be her sister, Kathryn Ann Halligan, who will be her maid of honor and only attendant. Dr. Donald Boyce, of Chicago and Escanaba, will be best man and Gordon Aley of this city, and George M. Algoe of Flint, will be ushers.

A wedding breakfast at the Dresden hotel will follow the ceremony, after which Dr. LeMire and his bride will leave on an eastern motor trip. They will make their home in Escanaba, occupying the LeMire residence during the winter months.

Miss Halligan, who is a prominent member of the Flint Junior league, has been complimented at many delightful affairs prior to the wedding. Both she and Dr. LeMire were honored at a dinner party given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. George M. Algoe, and members of the family and the wedding party will be entertained at a dinner this evening by Dr. and Mrs. Halligan at their home.

Births

A daughter, Joan, was born Aug. 30 to Mr. and Mrs. William Curtis, at their home, 1612 Seventh avenue south.

A Question

When you buy clothing from your merchant and pay him $70.00, you pay about 30% more than his cost, which pays his rent, heat, light, clerks salaries, and all other overhead expenses, as well as his profit on the sale. After a time the clothing is used up and you do the same thing over and call it business.

When you borrow $60.00 from your small loan company, you pay it back with 3% charges on monthly balances, and at the end of ten months you have paid back the principal $60.00, and charges $9.90 for the use of the money, which pays the loan company's rent, heat, light, clerks salaries, and all other overhead expenses, as well as its profit for the use of the loan, then you can do the same thing over and (if you have used the money wisely) call it business.

You have had the use of the clothing and the use of the money—where is the difference?

Jefferson P-T Summer Round-Up Successful

A record of fifty per cent achievement in the annual summer health round-up, in the Jefferson Parent-Teacher area, was reported Saturday by Mrs. C. L. Riegel, chairman of the health program.

Under the round-up activities, parents of children of pre-school age, entering school for the first time this fall, working in perfect cooperation with the health program, had these children examined by their family physician, and given immunization treatments to guard against contagious diseases.

Vilmar Carlson, 408 South Fourteenth street.

Patsy O'Connell, 321 South Fourteenth street.

Jacquelin O'Connell, 306 South Fifteenth street.

Betty Cleereman, 1407 First Avenue south.

James Degnan, 1421 First Avenue south.

Mary Pat Anderson, 221 South Sixteenth street.

Helen Jane Barry, 1304 First Avenue south.

Ethel Mae Richer, 209 South Twelfth street.

James Jensen, 1406 Second Avenue south.

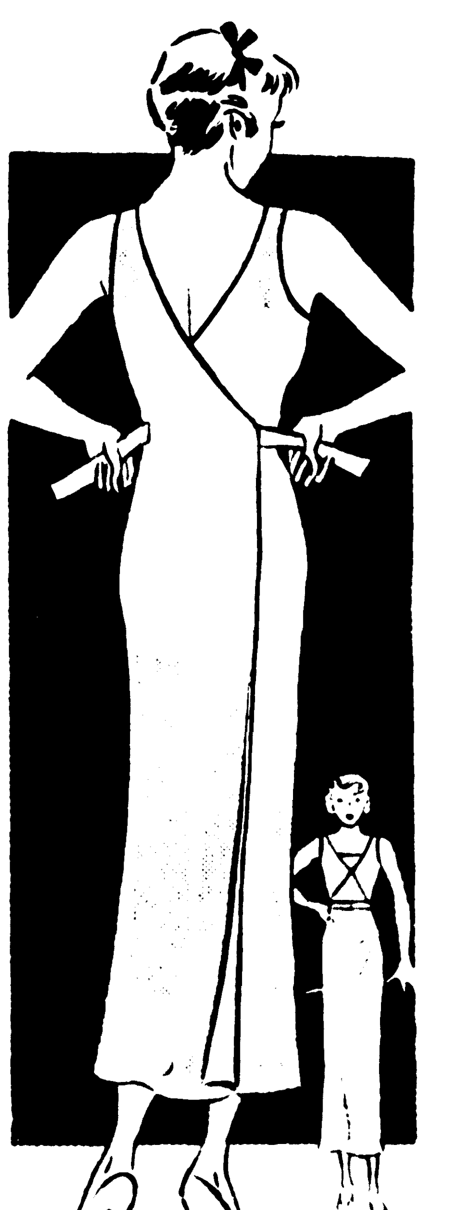
The round-up conducted by the Jefferson unit is similar to that which all Parent-Teacher units of the city engage in as their main summer project.

Library Will Be Closed Monday

The Carnegie Public Library will be closed all day on Monday, it was announced yesterday, in observance of the Labor Day holiday.

Shadow Proof Slip In Wrap Around Style

BY MARIAN MARTIN



PATTERN 9070

This slip has many nice things about it. It fits beautifully. It is shadow proof and it permits the introduction of a dainty "modesty piece" in the front. Two other points will endear it to the woman who selects it for her fall wardrobe. One of these is that it is a wrap-around and therefore adjustable and most figures change just a bit in transit from one season to another. The other reason is that it is so simple to make and so quickly finished the moral of the little tale being—get you some crepe de chine or cambric and use this pattern!

Pattern 9070 may be ordered only in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 3 5-8 yards 39 inch fabric and 1-4 yard of 3 inch lace.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

A beautiful, complete collection of Summer Clothes is shown in the NEW SUMMER EDITION of the MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOK. This book will help you plan a stunning vacation wardrobe. Clever beach ensembles, charming costumes for the gardener, style suggestions for the Summer bride and her attendants and sun suits for children are among the special features. SEND FOR YOUR COPY TODAY. PRICE OF BOOK, FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER, TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Wedding Here Monday Morning Of Wide Interest

St. Patrick's church will be the scene of a wedding ceremony of impressive beauty on Monday, the marriage of Miss Catherine Aileen Connelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Connelly, and Willard J. LaViolette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert D. LaViolette.

The ceremony will take place at a solemn nuptial high mass at 9 o'clock with Rev. Fr. Mathias LaViolette of Negaunee, brother of Mr. LaViolette, who will officiate, as celebrant, assisted by Rev. Fr. T. Parnell Dunleavy, Rev. Fr. John Hughes and Rev. Fr. Albert Pellisier, of L'Anse. Rev. Fr. Raymond Bergeron of Engadine and Rev. Fr. Thomas Kennedy, will also be present at the ceremony.

Members of the bridal party will be Miss Lucille LaViolette, who has been chosen by the bride-elect for her maid of honor; Miss Margaret Wade and Miss Marjorie Koppes, bridesmaids; and little Aileen Gaffney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gaffney, flower girl; Francis Boyce, who will be best man, and Robert Finley and Frederick Fillion, ushers.

A wedding breakfast for immediate members of the families will be served at the Delta hotel following the marriage service.

The young people will motor through the east on their wedding trip and will be at home in Escanaba at 1414 First Avenue south, after September 20.

Margaret Halligan Will Be Bride Of Dr. W. A. LeMire

Among weddings of unusual interest socially during the month of September is that of Miss Margaret Halligan, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Raymond S. Halligan of Flint, Mich., to Dr. William A. LeMire of this city, son of Mrs. William A. LeMire of 600 Lake Shore Drive.

The ceremony, which is to be one of simplicity of appointment, is to take place at early morning mass at St. Matthew's church, in Flint, on Monday, September 3. Rev. Fr. Daniel Driscoll will officiate.

Attending the bride will be her sister, Kathryn Ann Halligan, who will be her maid of honor and only attendant. Dr. Donald Boyce, of Chicago and Escanaba, will be best man and Gordon Aley of this city, and George M. Algoe of Flint, will be ushers.

A wedding breakfast at the Dresden hotel will follow the ceremony, after which Dr. LeMire and his bride will leave on an eastern motor trip. They will make their home in Escanaba, occupying the LeMire residence during the winter months.

Miss Halligan, who is a prominent member of the Flint Junior league, has been complimented at many delightful affairs prior to the wedding. Both she and Dr. LeMire were honored at a dinner party given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. George M. Algoe, and members of the family and the wedding party will be entertained at a dinner this evening by Dr. and Mrs. Halligan at their home.

Births

A daughter, Joan, was born Aug. 30 to Mr. and Mrs. William Curtis, at their home, 1612 Seventh avenue south.

A Question

When you buy clothing from your merchant and pay him $70.00, you pay about 30% more than his cost, which pays his rent, heat, light, clerks salaries, and all other overhead expenses, as well as his profit on the sale. After a time the clothing is used up and you do the same thing over and call it business.

When you borrow $60.00 from your small loan company, you pay it back with 3% charges on monthly balances, and at the end of ten months you have paid back the principal $60.00, and charges $9.90 for the use of the money, which pays the Loan company's rent, heat, light, clerks salaries, and all other overhead expenses, as well as its profit for the use of the loan, then you can do the same thing over and (if you have used the money wisely) call it business.

You have had the use of the clothing and the use of the money—where is the difference?

Jefferson P-T Summer Round-Up Successful

A record of fifty per cent achievement in the annual summer health round-up, in the Jefferson Parent-Teacher area, was reported Saturday by Mrs. C. L. Riegel, chairman of the health program.

Under the round-up activities, parents of children of pre-school age, entering school for the first time this fall, working in perfect cooperation with the health program, had these children examined by their family physician, and given immunization treatments to guard against contagious diseases.

Vilmar Carlson, 408 South Fourteenth street.

Patsy O'Connell, 321 South Fourteenth street.

Jacquelin O'Connell, 306 South Fifteenth street.

Betty Cleereman, 1407 First Avenue south.

James Degnan, 1421 First Avenue south.

Mary Pat Anderson, 221 South Sixteenth street.

Helen Jane Barry, 1304 First Avenue south.

Ethel Mae Richer, 209 South Twelfth street.

James Jensen, 1406 Second Avenue south.

The round-up conducted by the Jefferson unit is similar to that which all Parent-Teacher units of the city engage in as their main summer project.

Library Will Be Closed Monday

The Carnegie Public Library will be closed all day on Monday, it was announced yesterday, in observance of the Labor Day holiday.

Shadow Proof Slip In Wrap Around Style

PATTERN 9070

This slip has many nice things about it. It fits beautifully. It is shadow proof and it permits the introduction of a dainty "modesty piece" in the front. Two other points will endear it to the woman who selects it for her fall wardrobe. One of these is that it is a wrap-around and therefore adjustable and most figures change just a bit in transit from one season to another. The other reason is that it is so simple to make and so quickly finished—the moral of the little tale being—get you some crepe de chine or cambric and use this pattern!

Pattern 9070 may be ordered only in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 3 5-8 yards 39 inch fabric and 1-4 yard of 3 inch lace.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

A beautiful, complete collection of Summer Clothes is shown in the NEW SUMMER EDITION of the MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOK. This book will help you plan a stunning vacation wardrobe. Clever beach ensembles, charming costumes for the gardener, style suggestions for the Summer bride and her attendants and sun suits for children are among the special features. SEND FOR YOUR COPY TODAY. PRICE OF BOOK, FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER, TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Send your order to Escanaba Daily Press Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th St., New York, N. Y.

CROATIAN UNION CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY TODAY

ESCANABA UNION HOST AT PICNIC

Speaking Program Begins at 2:30 at Pioneer Trail Park

A picnic program at Pioneer Trail Park, with sports, speeches, and plenty of food and refreshments, will feature the big celebration staged today by Escanaba Croatians to mark the 40th anniversary of the foundnig of the Croatian Fraternal Union of America. Escanaba Union 335 will be the host today, and the event is expected to draw Croatian countrymen from all parts of the peninsula.

The speaking program this afternoon will start at 2:30, and the main address of the day will be by State Senator W. F. Doyle of Menominee. In addition, there will be music and other entertainment, with a baseball game between two teams of the Croatian league as one of the high lights of the sports program. This game will be to determine the championship of the league, and will be for a $5 merchandise prize. The Croatian children's home band of Des Plaines, Ill., will give a concert.

Roast lamb and roast pig will be served and prepared on the grounds in typical old country style. Mirko Skradski is general chairman of arrangements for the celebration, and he is inviting the public to come and join with the Croatian Union in the anniversary celebration.

The lineups for the ball teams in the game this afternoon will be as follows:

Cardinals — J. Berrisch, J. Skradski, J. Rodman, F. Rodman, A. Smokovitch, J. Smokovitch, J. Sabor, A. Somin, G. Miller, J. Eugates.

Tigers—M. Krasich, P. Vardigan, Jr., J. Krasich, J. Kozar, J. Wixon, M. Perle, N. Nastoff, F. Smokovitch, J. Smokovitch.

Crop Adjustment Program Poll Of Farmers Planned

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Preliminary moves in a nation-wide quiz of 3,000,000 farmers as to their views on crop adjustment in 1935 were drafted today at the AAA, but the actual method of conducting so huge a poll caused officials some puzzlement. Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, who insists that "the farmers run their show," told reporters it was unlikely an individual ballot system would be employed. The exact plan for garnering the farm views, he explained, has not yet been devised.

In any event, farmers who participated this year in production control plans will be asked within two months to express in some fashion their views on next year's crop adjustment program.

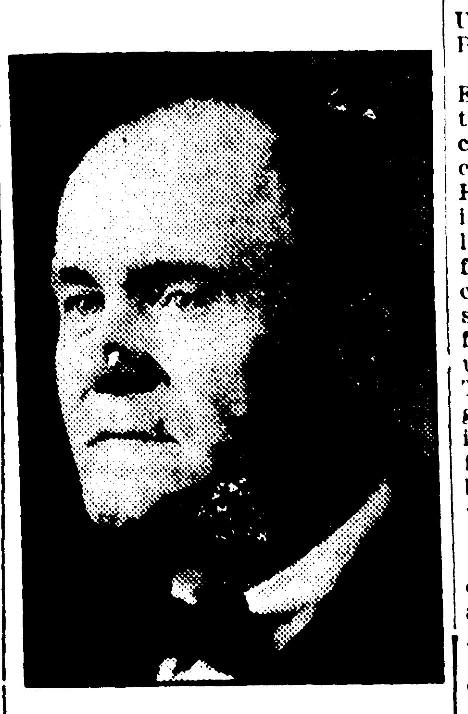
Paul Vardigan Organized Escanaba's Union In 1906

FIRST PRESIDENT



PAUL VARDIGAN

To Paul Vardigan goes the honor of organizing the Croatian Union at Escanaba, the local unit having been formed by him in 1906, and he was the first president.

BY C. W. FLANAGAN

The local Croatian Fraternal Union was organized in 1906 by Paul Vardigan.

Mr. Vardigan, like all non-English speaking immigrants to this country, at that time, was confronted with the usual handicaps that faced the immigrant. He saw the necessity of immediate knowledge of the English language, he saw the great benefits to be conferred with American citizenship, but above all, he saw the imperative need for a freindly hand offered to the alien upon his arrival to this country. Through these needs Mr. Vardigan conceived the idea of organization and with the help of a few of his countrymen the local branch of the National Union was born.

First President

Mr. Vardigan was made president of the newly formed local and held this office for many years. At the present time he holds the important office of chairman of education. An idea as to how well he performs in this office may be gleaned from the fact that he, in conjunction with local educators, is responsible for the naturalization of over 400 of his countrymen.

Realizing that a lodge without a home could not long survive, the society, shortly after its inception set about to secure permanent lodge rooms. With splendid cooperation of the I. Stephenson Lumber company, of Wells, the present Croatian hall in North Escanaba was built in 1910 and still serves as meeting place and is the scene of the many social activities of the local.

Strict immigration laws of the past ten years has to some extent curtailed expansion of the National Union and of course this has been reflected in the program of the local. Restriction of this nature was offset in 1924 with an organization for junior members, known as Nests. The local Nest, under able leadership, of Mr. Frank Sudac, has a large membership and is being well trained to carry on the work and to promote the ideals of the parent organization.

The amazing success of the local order is little to be wondered at when one glances at the solid foundation upon which it is built:

Not In Politics

The Croatian Union of America is exclusively a beneficial and fraternal organization. There is no place in the organization for any partisan politics or religious controversy; its business is conducted with rules and by-laws, which are in harmony with the state.

By assessment and the payment of dues members of the Union are cared for in time of distress.

The society is bound by its laws of organization to promote national, social and moral sentiments among its members, and to encourage its members to become citizens of the United States. The Union supports and maintains a children's home which shelters the children of deceased members and the children of other Croatians whenever possible.

In keeping with the strict Americanization program of the National Union, the local is establishing an English speaking lodge for those of Croatian descent who are unable to speak the language of their fathers.

Well may the Croatians be proud of the achievements of both national and local organizations for in the few years since their organization their membership numbers 80,000, with 550 lodges and 400 Junior Nests and assets of over $6,000,000. This proud race of a proud ancestry dedicated to the proposition that all men are equal, cultivating and teaching Americanism as they do are bound to forge ahead and carve for their posterity a niche in the hall of fame.

COOKS

Mrs. Dipert, daughter Elsie and Mrs. Henry Gisey of Point Betsey Frankfort, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilfred from Tuesday till Friday.

Mrs. Chester Feak is now occupying the home recently vacated by Mrs. Alma Jaynes. Miss Mattson and Miss Stevenson, teachers at the consolidated school, will make their home with Mrs. Feak during the school year.

Wayne Kelley will again teach here this year and will make his home with Mr. and Mrs. William Winkel.

Mrs. Otto Christensen of Viola near Corrine was a Labor Day guest at the home of her sister Mrs. Otto Winkel.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Tauk of Oshkosh motored here Saturday to get Mrs. Rickey Tauk, who has been staying with her daughter Mrs. Frank Wilfred for several weeks. Robert Reif, who has attended school in this district for three years and made his home with the Wilfreds, returned to his home with them.

A miscellaneous showers was given in the Consolidated school Friday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Collins who were recently married. They will reside in the same building.

Doings In New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK, Odds and ends: An insurance salesman cornered Roger Wolfe Kahn the other evening. Knew he was a musician, but didn't know he was the son of the late Otto Kahn, internationa banker.

"Playing in a dance band isn't going to get you very far," said the agent. "What will you amount to at 60 unless you lay aside a few dollars regularly? How would you be able to provide for your family in an emergency?"

"Well," mused Roger, who already owns more insurance than that agent is likely to sell in the next five years, "well, I guess I'd have to sell my saxophone."

Fillbusters' Bureau

A WRITER who has knocked around in odd corners of the globe advises me of the existence, right in this country, of an organization called International Fillibusters Service. For a stated fee it supplies regular data to soldiers of fortune and adventurous spirits on scientific exploration, fillibustering expeditions, revolutions sponsored by patriots and revolutions sponsored by mercenaries. Just now it has only enlistment in the French Foreign Legion to suggest to subscribers who would follow Nietzsche's advice to "live dangerously." But it promises to scare up a couple of comic opera wars this autumn.

At the Library

I'VE often marveled at the patience of librarians, who spend their lives scurrying to satisfy other people's whims.

One day I mentioned this, and was rewarded by a glimpse of a list of strange requests the librarian had jotted down. Here were some of them: How to make pins, how to pluck a chicken; how to get rid of an unwelcome suitor. The history of the wooden peg; a description of the bow of the Sovereign of the Sea, a ship built in 1637; the history of doll carriages. The cost per cubic foot of building a house in Moscow; how many moth balls it would take to kill a person who'd be willing to swallow them; how long a line could be drawn with a certain type of lead pencil. The specific gravity of opals; ice conditions in the Bering Straits in 1904; the use of soap bark in religious ceremonies of South American Indians. One man said he was planning a motor trip, and would someone please tell what weather to anticipate along the Lincoln Highways for the next two weeks.

MAYBE you've wondered whatever became of John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping case who delivered $50,000 to a nan in a cemetery. Well, Dr. Condon is still working on the mystery, still worrying about all that money, and still confident he'll lve to see the case cleared up.

All sorts of cranks still come to his home at all hours of the day and night to tell wild tales and advance fantastic theories. Dr. Condon always listens gravely, and thanks them. Sometimes Department of Justice operatives drop in for another chit, or to show him pictures of suspects. Occasionally, too, he goes out of town on secret missions; nobody knows where.

WINTER CAMPS OF CCC LISTED

Hiawatha National Forest Has Several; Allotment Is Unchanged

BY PAUL MAY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1—Here is the roster of CCC camps which will be operated in the vicinity of Escanaba during the fourth period of CCC activities (winter of 1934-35):

Two camps at Hiawatha National Forest, postoffice addresses, Wetmore and Steuben; Ottawa National Forest, postoffice address, Gibbs City; Hiawatha National Forest., postoffice address, Munising; Marquette National Forest, two camps, at Trout Lake, and Moran; Hiawatha National Forest, two camps, one at Nahma and one at Cooks; two state parks, postoffice addresses, Gwinn and Shingleton; four private park camps, at Germfask, Foster City, Manistique; Big Bay; a state park camp, postoffice address, Channing.

In all, 58 regular CCC camps will be located in Michigan.

CCC officials said it is possible minor changes will be made in the present line-up of winter camps, but that state allotments will remain unchanged and that camps will not be reassigned without good cause.

CHAIRMAN

MIRKO SKRADSKI

Today will be a busy day for Mirko Skradski and his helpers. He is general chairman of arrangements for the Croatian celebration and picnic today at Pioneer Trail Park, and is also president of the Escanaba Croatian Union 335, host to the crowds which will gather for the festivities.

BOND PROPOSAL GETS SUPPORT

State Relief Chief Sees Big Benefit to Delta In $100,000 Issue

The proposal for raising $100,000 from a local bond issue for the purpose of purchasing materials to carry on public works projects in Delta county this fall and winter is a highly desirable one, in the opinion of State Relief Administrator William Haber, of Lansing. This was expressed in a letter to the Delta County Welfare Relief Commission here recently.

In view of the fact that, thus far, it is not contemplated that there will be any money available under the present setup, each county will have to provide from their own funds such amounts as are necessary for the purchase of materials to carry on these projects. Mr. Haber expresses the opinion that the bond proposal for raising money is a good one.

Although no definite outline of the relief program which will be in operation next fall has been issued, it is a definite certainty that the CWA will not be resumed. However, the expansion of the present work division arrangement will involve making available a job on the work division payroll for every able bodied person who is on the relief lists, at pay which will be approximately equal to the budgetary requirements. According to Mr. Haber, it is very likely that the program of work relief outlined at a meeting of county administrators in Marquette, will be adopted during the fall and winter season.

Digs Up Skeleton Of Aboriginal Giant

Versailles, Mo. (AP)—A large mound which obstructed J. D. Crain's view from the front porch of his home turned out, upon its removal, to be a burial vault of aboriginal residents of the Ozark hills, one of them a giant at least 8 feet 4 inches tall.

Undecided what disposition to make of the bones, Crain and his helpers finally dug a deep grave near the front porch of the home, placed the skeletons in a box and re-buried them.

MOST of us hate to see Summer go. We miss the freedom that comes from being out-of-doors. We dread being bottled up in heated houses — wearing heavy clothes—fighting colds and all the impositions of Winter.

Since we have to live indoors, let's be gay and make indoors attractive. A new rug will brighten the living-room and the one it displaces can go upstairs to cheer up a bedroom. Some colorful curtains will accentuate the pale winter sun. A new kitchen range or sink will take the gloom out of that much-used workshop. Some comfortable chairs will help you relax during the long evenings.

A little money will go a long way today in renovizing your home. Just watch the advertisements in this newspaper—there are amazing bargains in furniture, lamps, curtains, rugs and kitchen equipment. You're always more certain to get full value for your money when you buy products advertised by dependable merchants and manufacturers.

Heading the list of speakers at the Croatian picnic at Pioneer Trail Park this afternoon is W. F. Doyle of Menominee, state senator from this district. Mr. Doyle is scheduled to give his address at 2:30 p. m.

Program Today

The following addresses are scheduled on the program for the Croatian celebration at Pioneer Trail Park today. The speaking will start at 2:30 p. m., and in case of rain will be held at the Croatian hall, North Escanaba.

Address of Welcome—Mirko Skradski, president of Escanaba Croatian Union.

Address — Senator W. F. Doyle.

Doings In New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK, Odds and ends: An insurance salesman cornered Roger Wolfe Kahn the other evening. Knew he was a musician, but didn't know he was the son of the late Otto Kahn, international banker.

"Playing in a dance band isn't going to get you very far," said the agent. "What will you amount to at 60 unless you lay aside a few dollars regularly? How would you be able to provide for your family in an emergency?"

"Well," mused Roger, who already owns more insurance than that agent is likely to sell in the next five years, "well, I guess I'd have to sell my saxophone."

Filibusters' Bureau

A WRITER who has knocked around in odd corners of the globe advises me of the existence, right in this country, of an organization called International Filibusters Service. For a stated fee it supplies regular data to soldiers of fortune and adventurous spirits on scientific exploration, filibustering expeditions, revolutions sponsored by patriots and revolutions sponsored by mercenaries. Just now it has only enlistment in the French Foreign Legion to suggest to subscribers who would follow Nietzsche's advice to "live dangerously." But it promises to scare up a couple of comic opera wars this autumn.

At the Library

I'VE often marveled at the patience of librarians, who spend their lives scurrying to satisfy other people's whims.

One day I mentioned this, and was rewarded by a glimpse of a list of strange requests the librarian had jotted down. Here were some of them: How to make pins, how to pluck a chicken; how to get rid of an unwelcome suitor. The history of the wooden peg; a description of the bow of the Sovereign of the Sea, a ship built in 1637; the history of doll carriages. The cost per cubic foot of building a house in Moscow; how many moth balls it would take to kill a person who'd be willing to swallow them; how long a line could be drawn with a certain type of lead pencil. The specific gravity of opals; ice conditions in the Bering Straits in 1904; the use of soap bark in religious ceremonies of South American Indians. One man said he was planning a motor trip, and would someone please tell what weather to anticipate along the Lincoln Highways for the next two weeks.

MAYBE you've wondered whatever became of John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping case who delivered $50,000 to a man in a cemetery. Well, Dr. Condon is still working on the mystery, still worrying about all that money, and still confident he'll live to see the case cleared up.

All sorts of cranks still come to his home at all hours of the day and night to tell wild tales and advance fantastic theories. Dr. Condon always listens gravely, and thanks them. Sometimes Department of Justice operatives drop in for another chit, or to show him pictures of suspects. Occasionally, too, he goes out of town on secret missions; nobody knows where.

WINTER CAMPS OF CCC LISTED

Hiawatha National Forest Has Several; Allotment Is Unchanged

BY PAUL MAY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1—Here is the roster of CCC camps which will be operated in the vicinity of Escanaba during the fourth period of CCC activities (winter of 1934-35):

Two camps at Hiawatha National Forest, postoffice addresses, Wetmore and Steuben; Ottawa National Forest, postoffice address, Gibbs City; Hiawatha National Forest., postoffice address, Munising; Marquette National Forest, two camps, at Trout Lake, and Moran; Hiawatha National Forest, two camps, one at Nahma and one at Cooks; two state parks, postoffice addresses, Gwinn and Shingleton; four private park camps, at Germfask, Foster City, Manistique; Big Bay; a state park camp, postoffice address, Channing.

In all, 58 regular CCC camps will be located in Michigan.

CCC officials said it is possible minor changes will be made in the present line-up of winter camps, but that state allotments will remain unchanged and that camps will not be reassigned without good cause.

CHAIRMAN

MIRKO SKRADSKI

Today will be a busy day for Mirko Skradski and his helpers. He is general chairman of arrangements for the Croatian celebration and picnic today at Pioneer Trail Park, and is also president of the Escanaba Croatian Union 335, host to the crowds which will gather for the festivities.

A Norwegian scientist reports his findings prove that the movement of glaciers foretell the weather as well as regulate drought and flood.

BOND PROPOSAL GETS SUPPORT

State Relief Chief Sees Big Benefit to Delta In $100,000 Issue

The proposal for raising $100,000 from a local bond issue for the purpose of purchasing materials to carry on public works projects in Delta county this fall and winter is a highly desirable one, in the opinion of State Relief Administrator William Haber, of Lansing. This was expressed in a letter to the Delta County Welfare Relief Commission here recently.

In view of the fact that, thus far, it is not contemplated that there will be any money available under the present setup, each county will have to provide from their own funds such amounts as are necessary for the purchase of materials to carry on these projects. Mr. Haber expresses the opinion that the bond proposal for raising money is a good one.

Although no definite outline of the relief program which will be in operation next fall has been issued, it is a definite certainty that the CWA will not be resumed. However, the expansion of the present work division arrangement will involve making available a job on the work division payroll for every able bodied person who is on the relief lists, at pay which will be approximately equal to the budgetary requirements. According to Mr. Haber, it is very likely that the program of work relief outlined at a meeting of county administrators in Marquette, will be adopted during the fall and winter season.

Digs Up Skeleton Of Aboriginal Giant

Versailles, Mo. (AP)—A large mound which obstructed J. D. Crain's view from the front porch of his home turned out, upon its removal, to be a burial vault of aboriginal residents of the Ozark hills, one of them a giant at least 8 feet 4 inches tall.

Undecided what disposition to make of the bones, Crain and his helpers finally dug a deep grave near the front porch of the home, placed the skeletons in a box and re-buried them.

It's time to take down the screens

MOST of us hate to see Summer go. We miss the freedom that comes from being out-of-doors. We dread being bottled up in heated houses — wearing heavy clothes—fighting colds and all the impositions of Winter.

Since we have to live indoors, let's be gay and make indoors attractive. A new rug will brighten the living-room and the one it displaces can go upstairs to cheer up a bedroom. Some colorful curtains will accentuate the pale winter sun. A new kitchen range or sink will take the gloom out of that much-used workshop. Some comfortable chairs will help you relax during the long evenings.

A little money will go a long way today in renovizing your home. Just watch the advertisements in this newspaper—there are amazing bargains in furniture, lamps, curtains, rugs and kitchen equipment. You're always more certain to get full value for your money when you buy products advertised by dependable merchants and manufacturers.

Scenic Trips on Side Roads Offer New Possibilities

Editor's Note—This is the fourth of a series of articles on Conservation affairs written for the United Press by Harry H. Whiteley, a member of the state conservation commission.

BY HARRY H. WHITELEY

Lansing—Agencies of the Michigan Department of Conservation are increasingly able to help the touring public interpret the scenes passing before its eyes as it traverses the state.

It has been found that a large number of travellers fail to get away from the main highways or do not understand the interesting features of a great deal of the country through which they are riding. These features may be historic of which Michigan has a greater share than almost any other section of the Union; or they may be scenic; presenting views which need to be explained to be best appreciated; or they may be the result of forces at work in the early ages: Such as the rock formations, the sand hills, the contour of the country; the natural wealth of the state as expressed in its copper and iron mines, limestone quarries, salt deposits and oil fields.

These are added values to the recreationalist's already planned trip and enhance his appreciation of the offerings Michigan has for him.

New approaches to this problem have been developed this year and include a field officer detailed to state parks where he shows motion pictures of Michigan's out-of-doors and lectures to the visitors as well as local people who care to come. A second experiment was the building of a small office on the south boundary of the Houghton lake state forest, known as a conservation service unit. It was opened the first Sunday in July and "in two hours the attendant was yelling for help," in the graphic report of the educational division.

Signs invite the traveller to stop for information on hunting, fishing, camping facilities, sightseeing and other activities, which would help him enjoy himself. The unit is equipped with the necessary maps, lake and stream information and the like. Warnings to observe the precautions against fire are given. The unit has been so well patronized that an extensive parking place had to be cleared out and an additional attendant provided over the Fourth.

As yet unannounced service which is only in process of consideration contemplates the development of folders on the basis of the old-time automobile log.

These logs would give the position of all places of interest along the route, explain what their significance is and how to reach them. For instance, on a tentative log of a route north out of St. Ignace, it might explain that geologically the region was part of Lake Algonquin. Father Marquette's monument and a few words of his career would follow. Castle Rock would be explained. Nun's Creek, providing camping places and trout fishing, would be 23.8 miles. At 32.3 Hessel Hill with its view of Les Cheneaux region and so on.

To spread knowledge of the purposes of conservation among the people of the state years ago a lecture and picture service was inaugurated.

This has developed into a division of education and public relations which provides motion pictures of Michigan's wild life, lectures, a weekly news release and a monthly bulletin and endeavors to interpret the prosy details of conservation administration into a language understood by every citizen for the purpose of enlisting the public behind the movement for the proper saving and wise use of the state's natural resources. More than a half million persons saw 1,802 reels of these pictures in 1933—if one is interested in figures.

To inculcate a knowledge of fundamental conservation in the younger generation, the Department in co-operation with the department of public instruction will begin a public school educational program this fall.

It will not be pretentious. A high school course of civics will include a two weeks study of Michigan conservation. The same thing will be true of the eighth grade course in government. In addition a grade school booklet with narrative subject matter will be distributed.

This year, for the first time, the story of Michigan conservation will be told in dioramas. Five of this type of exhibits each of which is five feet in length and similar to those used in the Michigan display at A Century of Progress are now being shown. The dioramas depict the work in forestry, fish, game, fire and geology. They will be first shown at the Detroit and Escanaba state fairs and will be available later for such assemblies as wish them.

In the recreational districts every field officer of the Department is an agent of service. He is in uniform to let the public recognize him and his readiness to be of service. He is instructed to regard visitors as guests in his territory and to give them all the information and every service in his power. He is in no sense a guide and his public contacts with tourists are usually as he meets them in the field on his patrols where he has a fine opportunity to render them the courtesies of his position.

This program is fundamentally conceived to inform the public, local as well as transient, and to arouse in people an understanding of the new part natural resources must play in the economic scheme. It is intended to be so effective that the public will frown upon carelessness with fire in the woods and with violations of the common-sense prohibitions which man has had to place about wildlife; and will cherish the preservation of valuable public rights and privileges in these resources.

New Game Law Digest Issued For This Year

Lansing—The 1934-35 digest of Michigan's general game laws will be new in every way.

For the first time it will carry illustrations. A full page is devoted to pictures of three upland gamebirds on which shooting is permitted in season, the ruffed grouse, sharptailed grouse and prairie chicken. Another page has illustrations of protected ducks, the bufflehead, ruddy duck and woodduck, to aid hunters in their identification.

A page is reserved especially for the deer hunter, showing a skeleton drawing of a buck and the vital heart area. This picture is to aid the hunter in getting his deer and reduce the chances of leaving wounded animals in the woods.

On the back cover is a halftone cut of the famous "doe and fawn" picture under the caption: "Look Before You Shoot." The digests contain all the latest hunting regulations, including the federal regulations on migratory waterfowl. They are now in the hands of the printer and are expected to be ready for distribution within a fortnight.

RALLY TO DRAW 200 SPORTSMEN

Association Will Meet September 13 At Crystal Falls

Negaunee — Two hundred sportsmen from various parts of the upper peninsula are expected to attend the fifteenth annual meeting of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association, to be held in Crystal Falls on Thursday, September 13.

The convention will be called to order in the city hall at 1 p. m. central standard time, by Peter Trudell, Jr., of Negaunee, president of the organization. Dinner will be served in the Crystal Inn at 6 o'clock, when the Michigan conservation commission will be guests of the association.

In addition to the 21 clubs belonging to the association, all of which are expected to be represented at the meeting, Mr. Trudell has been informed that the Sault Ste. Marie Sportsmen's club and the Manistique Conservation club also will have members in attendance. The Negaunee Rod and Gun club is expected to send about 20 members to the meeting.

Dinner reservations should be forwarded as soon as possible to M. G. DeGabriele, of Negaunee, secretary of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association, so that the necessary arrangements may be made.

It is expected that members of the conservation commission will occupy the greater part of the program, with the afternoon open for general discussion and talks by men prominent in state conservation affairs.

Springer Spaniel Really Brings the Birds Back Alive

Because of her ability in pointing wildfowl and marsh birds and capturing needed specimens alive for scientific purposes in connection with the waterfowl survey in the park, "Sally" has been of great value to the Department of Conservation and University of Michigan this year.

She has assisted in locating duck nests and is responsible for discovery of the nests of the yellow rail and Virginia rails in Munuskong marsh. The nests of Virginia rail found with the aid of the dog are believed to be the first reported for the upper peninsula.

FISHERMEN RUN AFOUL OF LAW

Many Fail to Get Their Licenses Which Cost Only 50 Cents

Lansing, Mich.—Violations of state fishing laws made up nearly 90 per cent of the arrests by conservation officers during July, according to the monthly report of the Department of Conservation.

The dominating offense was fishing without a license. Of 316 violations reported by officers, 130 involved that charge.

Total number of arrests for fishing violations was 283. The other arrests were divided as follows: Hunting violations 27; interfering with an officer, two; operating a motorboat in a reckles smanner, failure to make fur reports, carelessly setting a fire and burning without a permit one each.

Fines totalling $980.65 and costs amounting to $1,959.65 were assessed 515 days of jail sentences meted out, 10 men were placed on probation, four cases were dismissed, one was adjourned and one was lost, according to the report.

Reaction Watched

The phenomena of public reaction to conservation laws, particularly the law requiring all residents over 18 years of age to purchase a 50-cent fishing license, has been observed closely by the Department of Conservation since the first of the year. Especially since the law is getting its first full-year test.

Although the license fee is considered small enough to be within the reach of all, more arrests have been made for failure to purchase the 50-cent license than for any other violation, reports show. The large numbers of arrests, it is believed, is due mainly to ignorance of the law and neglect and it is felt that another year of enforcement will result in a more widespread understanding with resultant less violations.

The taking and possession of undersize fish, bluegills in most cases, resulted in 85 arrests during July. Most of the cases reported were in the southern half of the lower peninsula.

Other fishing law infractions were: Exceeding catch limit, 10; taking mussels without a license, eight; possession of illegal whitefish, six; non-resident making false statements to obtain resident license, five; operating unlicensed fishboat, five; illegal use of seine, five; selling minnows without license, dynamiting trout stream, exceeding legal number of lines and possession of short pickerel, four each; illegal use of setlines, illegal dipnetting, three each; sale of undersize perch, two; spearing brook trout, possession of setline, marketing illegal fish and fishing in an inland lake in closed season, one each.

Tackle Confiscated

Officers confiscated 730 pounds of illegal fish, most of which was whitefish, and gave it to welfare agencies and state institutions. Fishing equipment confiscated during illegal use included 200 hooks and lines, four rods, reels and lines, tackle box, 60-foot seine, gill net and creel.

Possession of firearms in closed game area without a permit topped the list of hunting law violations.

Seventeen individuals were taken on this charge, officers confiscating 14 guns including two double-barrel shotguns and two .22 caliber rifles. The others were high-powered deer guns. Other hunting violations listed were: Killing deer, possession of pheasant, possession of cub bear, hunting without a license and attempting to kill migratory birds, one each.

TROUT SEASON COMES TO END

Winners Are Announced In Escanaba Big Fish Contest

For the majority of people, Labor Day usually means just a day of rest, but to the thousands of Michigan sportsmen it means the last day of the trout season, and the last chance to catch the big one that got away on previous trips.

The season of 1934 proved to be a poor one from the trout fishers viewpoint. Limit catches were few and far between, and the average size a disappointment. A favorite saying among fishermen this season was "Where are the fish?"

A variety of reasons have been given as the causes for the scarcity of trout. Throughout the whole state conditions were much the same, and the trout appeared to be staying in the deep spring-fed holes all summer long, instead of running up into their usual summer habitations. Then too, tiny winged insects were very plentiful, and the trout gorged on these disdaining all other food. Illegal fishing methods, such as nets and dynamitin have caused great inroads on the trout population. Strict vigilance on the part of officers is putting an end to such violations.

Two Big Trout

In the first annual contest sponsored by the Wolverine Conservation Association, entries were not numerous, although a few good fish were entered for the big fish honors.

First place in the brook trout division is now held by Peter Ethier, who had the good fortune and skill necessary to land an 18 inch trout weighing two pounds, 13½ ounces, dressed. This fish was caught in the Au Train river, a favorite stream for local fly fishermen.

Al Pierson proved his prowess by entering a rainbow trout, 24 inches long, and weighing three pounds, 12½ ounces, dressed. This whopper was caught in the Whitefish river.

Putting one over on the men, Mrs. Hazel Asselin caught the largest large-mouth bass so far entered. It was 20 inches long and weighed four pounds, two ounces, dressed. Wilfred Chartrand holds the record for small-mouth bass, 19 inches long, and weighing three pounds.

The contest for bass still has a month to run, and fishermen generally acknowledge it as the best time for this fighting fish. Undoubtedly other fish in this class and in the pike, the gill and perch will still be entered.

This Quickens Hunter's Heartbeat

A sight to quicken the pulse of the sportsman and stir the imagination of the epicure is this one, of pheasants flying to freedom from the state game preserve near Toledo, heralding the hunting season soon to open in many states. Erie Howard, Ohio state game protector, is freeing the birds, that they may enjoy their liberty at least until guns start popping. Watching release of the birds at the right, is John King, Isaak Walton League representative.

Conservation Economics

When Will We Wake Up?

Michigan has 57,980 square miles of land and 40,000 square miles of the Great Lakes within its boundaries. Besides the Great Lakes, containing one third of all of the fresh water in the world, the retreating glaciers left more than 5,000 inland lakes for the enjoyment of our people. Besides the beaches on the inland lakes 1,624 miles of shore line on Lakes Michigan, Huron and Superior offer facilities for swimming, fishing and sailing unexcelled in their variety and extensiveness.

"You certainly have a great deal of lake shore. Do you use all of it?" was the first comment which Dr. Wehrwein, land ecoomist at the University of Wisconsin, made, when shown a map of Delta county this summer. The truthful reply must be that, except for a few miles on the west side of Little Bay de Noc and a summer colony at Garth, Delta county has developed only a small part of the 70 miles of lake shore which should be one of our most valuable natural resources. Escanaba has done practically nothing from the standpoint of complete utilization of the recreational possibilities of the water which lies at our door step.

Menominee Gets Results

Other cities have not been so shortsighted. Menominee is constructing a fine concrete breakwater to provide a harbor for pleasure craft and sail boats. Gladstone has made commendable progress with her aquatic park and boat harbor. Those familiar with the resort developments around some of the weedy mudholes which are politely called lakes in southern Michigan can not understand the lack of appreciation of the possibilities which lie in the cool clean water of Little Bay de Noc. Several of our enthusiastic sailors have gone ahead in spite of the handicaps, and their sailboats are anchored all the way from the docks to Portage point. Regardless of this evidence Escanaba continues officially asleep on the job.

We are anxious to have yachts stop here in the summer but we have no place where a self-respecting owner can tie his boat. Menominee and Gladstone will soon offer these facilities while we will continue on the Black List (truthfully speaking) of every yacht owner on the lakes until we provide facilities where a boat can be docked in clean water and passengers may not be compelled to walk through sand and coal dust to reach our hotels.

No Gas Tax

It would seem to the critical observer that enough money has already been spent moving good clay around on the duck pastures at the South end of Ludington Park to build a fine pleasare boat harbor which would furnish a good amount of work and at the same time be a genuine asset to Escanaba. If all of the sail and motor boats owned here were tied at one dock the fleet would be an attractive sight to tourist and resident alike. The spirit developed by the simple act of docking all of the boats at one place would be the greatest stimulation to boat ownership that could be made. There is no gas tax on a sail boat. The initial cost of a small boat is well within reach of the average man or boy and the upkeep is almost nothing. Practically all of our local boats have been built here by the owners in their spare time and the total construction costs are surprisingly moderate.

The lighted signboards on the roads leading into Escanaba advertise our assets to the tourists. We do not need to advertise that we are the most backward city on the west side of Lake Michigan in the development of the recreational aspects of our aquatic resources. Some day we will wake up and realize that Bay De Noc and our lake shore are an important natural resource whose development must have an important place in our general plan for wise planned utilization of all of our natural resources.

Notre Dame has a tradition that it never rains when a new gold coating is being put on the huge dome of the administration building.

OFFICERS WEAR NEW HEADGEAR

Conservation Force Will Not Be So Easy to Spot in Woods

Lansing, Mich.—It may not be so easy for violators to "spot" a conservation officer in the woods this fall.

The old-style dress caps by which the officers were easily distinguished while on patrol duty will not be seen. New-type felt hats of conventional style will be worn instead.

For several years conservation officers have favored a change in headgear. They have wanted something that would distinguish them from bus drivers and gas station attendants, something that would be more comfortable as well as practical in the woods. The original caps often caught on branches and had a habit of blowing off in the wind and rolling across the icy surface of a lake, according to the Department of Conservation.

The new hat is patterned after that worn by federal forestry rangers and is of a color to match the uniform. The cap is being retained for use on dress occasions.

CHRISTMAS TREES VS. DEER HUNTERS

It has come to a good many peoples attention that in the last few years a great many trees are being taken out by hunters in the fall during the annual deer trek into the northwoods. In three days last fall while hunters were headed back home I counted 17 trailer loads of trees, some trailers had as high as six beautiful trees on them. Now I would say that the conservation department ought to realize something out of them. Say for instance a hunter buying his license would be asked if he was taking a Christmas tree, if so, he would be compelled to pay a small fee and in return receive a tag to be placed on it for transportation. This small fee could be used by the state to purchase new seedlings to be transplanted and in that way we would not have a total loss. If the hunter will stop and realize that only in a short time they will be compelled to leave the trees and not be allowed to take any, so by getting a small fee of 25 cents or so would be worth while paying for and in that way we would always have trees to take home.

Another thing that has come to our attention, is that some of the hunters are getting very careless about leaving their camping grounds all littered up. You may start out in the spring of the year on a little jaunt out along some road and the first thing you will notice is a bunch of stakes sticking out of the ground, a few bunks made out of poles, with a bunch of balsam boughs, or a pile of dead straw, an old stove, a bunch of pipes, old cans and a bunch of half rotten wood. Now we all know that those things are not very nice things to look upon. Its very poor judgment on the campers part. I think if their attention be called on this matter it would stop at once.

Hunters, give us an idea on these matters and think it over.

THE RED GODS' BLACK BOOK

The Red Gods are those mystical ghosts of the outdoors which watch over the Wild Life of the Air, Woods and Water. The Indians believed that the Red Gods recorded the death of all birds, fish and animals. Those killed for useful purposes were entered in the Red Book and those destroyed and wasted were entered in the Black Book. Every Indian expected to be asked to explain all entries in the Black Book when he reached the Happy Hunting Ground.

The Red Gods still keep the Black Book. They have filled volumes since the coming of the white men. We will read the entries as they appear.

Who shot the gulls on Portage Point? Six or eight of these splendid big white birds were killed on Portage Point recently and left to rot on the sand. The gulls are the scavengers of the lake beaches. Wtih the help of the crayfish and a few insects they keep our beaches free of dead fish and other obnoxious materials. No one can deny that they are a definite picturesque resource of the Great Lakes harbors. They have no value as human food. They are so tame and fly so slow that any neophytic game hog can hit them with a .22. Yet some "mighty hunter" shot them and left them where they fell. Who can excuse this entry in the Red Gods' Black Book?

The story of the Civilian Conservation Corps, its objects and accomplishments, is told by F. A. Silcox, Forester, United States forest service, in comment accompanying a one-reel sound motion picture, "Forests and Men," recently released by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Forester Silcox says that the C. C. C. was inaugurated not only for the conservation of the forests but for the rebuilding of the men through the mental and spiritual benefits received. The film illustrates this by scenes taken in camps throughout the country, showing enrollment of the men, their arrival at the Army's conditioning camps and their transportation to the forest camps where the work of fighting forest fires, building bridges and repairing damage caused by erosion and destructive rodents is carried on.

Prints of this film in both 16 mm. and 35 mm. size are available for loan upon application to the Division of Motion Pictures, Extension Service, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., the borrower paying the transportation costs.

Peninsula Paragraphs

By Marjorie Huntoon Morrill

THE ECONOMY OF NATURE

These are the days when "economy" is being thought about. Of course many of us have always thought about it but it has been in the sense of "saving." Now we have learned that sometimes we save only when we use and sometimes the word means "adjustment" as much as anything else. We are learning that about conservation. We thought for a good many years that "settlement," of a territory meant civilization and wealth. Forests were meant to be cut down and towns built up. Swamps were meant to be drained and turned into farms. A tree was of no use unless it could be made into lumber, or cut into posts and poles, or ground into paper pulp.

Great fortunes were built up for a few of America's familes out of the old economy. Great cities were erected about the industries wheih the forest products fed. But the territories so "exploited" became waste lands, the towns and hamlets became deserted, the peoples who had built homes and invested their small earnings were left with only the cut-over, worthless country to repay for a life-time of work.

Families Stranded

The swamps were found to consist for the most part of a thin layer of muck on top of sand. The drainage ditches took off the water and the water and wind took off the black muck. Families were lured from other localities and found themselves stranded and helpless. But today the sons and grandsons of the lumberman and 'jack have a new job. They are busy building up the land devastated by the old economic system. They are in the CCC camps as workmen and foresters, planting trees, fighting fires, protecting from insect and flood the plant and animal life still left from the old ways.

Jerry Skulina of the Sage river believes that all predators should be held in control but not entirely killed off. He tells you that when you exterminate any specie you interfere with the balance of nature and bring greater trouble down upon your head.

Take the porcupine. This spined creature is becoming so plentiful that large sections of forests are reported dead and dying because of the girdling of the bark by his sharp teeth. The overproduction of porcupine, believes Jerry, is due in part at least, to the extermination of the fisher. This once-important furred animal was the one creature who killed the porcupine by climbing trees and ripping open the unprotected stomach of the porcupine. But the rich man, and especially the rich woman, wanted the beautiful fur of the fisher and that animal was killed off. So now we have too many porcupines.

Cats and Clover

Like the cat and the clover story. It is believed that Darwin started that one. Clover, the story goes, can only be polinated by the bumble bee. Field mice rob the bee nests during the winter, eat the stored honey so that the insects starve to death and eat the young bees. No bees, no clover. So the farmers brought cats into the picture. The cats killed off the mice and there was plenty of bees to help the clover do its proper seeding. This is a nice story for people who like cats and a sad one for people who like birds. But the story has gone around the world.

ISLE HAS TOO MANY MOOSE

Professor Predicts Food Problem Will Be Serious Soon

Michigan has a population problem, not of human beings, but among the moose on Isle Royale, the state's "colonial possession" in Lake Superior.

Since 1913, the last time moose were seen crossing on the ice from the mainland, the animals have increased until certain parts of the island "resemble a well stocked barnyard," while before many years the food problem will reach the starvation point, writes Dr. Adolph Murie, of the University Museum of Zoology, in a published report based on observations made in 1929 and 1930, authorized by the 55th state legislature.

Destroy Many Trees

Already the moose have seriously interfered with the scenic beauty of the island by destroying many trees and bushes for food, Dr. Murie finds. In addition, they are over-browsing the water vegetation in the lakes to the extent that water-lily and weed beds are badly reduced in extent. To prevent further scenic damage, to protect lake fishing and to prevent the moose from eventually eating themselves out of food, he recommends a reduction of the population to a point which the island can support. Isle Royale undoubtedly now has the greatest concentration of moose of any like area in North America.

Moose were probably on Isle Royale in 1905, though no migration from the shore was recorded until the winter of 1912-13. The few that crossed at that time have now increased to a minimum of 1,000 in 1930, with the probability that an actual count would show two or three times as many. It is estimated that approximately 50 per cent of all cows have a calf each year, a rate of population growth which is excessive for the 220 square miles of the island's area.

Proposes Shooting Some

The best method of reducing the moose would be the shooting of a definite number each year by state employees, as is usually done in national parks overpopulated with some type of animal life, Dr. Murie believes. He also suggests that the cougar might be introduced as a natural check, as this animal is employed in the Kaibab National Forest to keep down the number of deer. If funds were available some of the moose might be rounded up and shipped to other parts of the country. The tolerance of bears, wolves and cougars on the island would also give a naturalness and variety to the animal life which has made Yellowstone Park attractive, says Dr. Murie.

Open hunting, apparently the simplest solution to the problem, would be inadvisable because of the difficulty of control from year to year, and would be more butchery than sport at present, due to the abundance and tameness of the moose, Dr. Murie states. If the island eventually becomes a national park, as is predicted, hunting would of course be permanently prohibited.

Peninsula Expects CCC Will Be Made Permanent Project

A statement by Washington officials August 25, that the Civilian Conservation corps, familiarly known to thousands of Upper Peninsula people as the CCC, will probably be made a permanent institution, is of special interest to this district.

The law creating the corps expires March 31, 1935. However, the administration, it is announced, expects little or no opposition to re-enactment without any time limit.

Congress will probably approve the reforestation law early in the next session, and a decision on the corps could be made easily, it is pointed out, in the form of amendments to the CCC statute in coneection with forestry legislation.

The establishment and maintenance of the CCC is generally recognized as one of the best moves of the administration. Original complaints and criticisms have disappeared, and officials of the U. S. Forest service say there will be need for the CCC indefinitely. About 170,000 youths are now enrolled in corps activities, of whom between 5,000 and 6,000 are employed in the Upper Peninsula.

Legislation by the coming congress will probably increase the need for more CCC workers on government forests and other projects. If the plans carry for the establishment of a 1,300-mile tree belt in the middle west, additional thousands of men will be needed.

L. W. Staege of Babcock, Wis., caught the largest muskellunge in Oneida county this season when he landed a 50-inch muskie, that weighed 32 pounds, 11 ounces. The fish put up a fight for an hour and 45 minutes.

Scenic Trips on Side Roads Offer New Possibilities

Editor's Note—This is the fourth of a series of articles on Conservation affairs written for the United Press by Harry H. Whiteley, a member of the state conservation commission.

BY HARRY H. WHITELEY

Lansing—Agencies of the Michigan Department of Conservation are increasingly able to help the touring public interpret the scenes passing before its eyes as it traverses the state.

It has been found that a large number of travellers fail to get away from the main highways or do not understand the interesting features of a great deal of the country through which they are riding. These features may be historic of which Michigan has a greater share than almost any other section of the Union; or they may be scenic; presenting views which need to be explained to be best appreciated; or they may be the result of forces at work in the early ages: Such as the rock formations, the sand hills, the contour of the country; the natural wealth of the state as expressed in its copper and iron mines, limestone quarries, salt deposits and oil fields.

These are added values to the recreationalist's already planned trip and enhance his appreciation of the offerings Michigan has for him.

New approaches to this problem have been developed this year and include a field officer detailed to state parks where he shows motion pictures of Michigan's out-of-doors and lectures to the visitors as well as local people who care to come. A second experiment was the building of a small office on the south boundary of the Houghton lake state forest, known as a conservation service unit. It was opened the first Sunday in July and "in two hours the attendant was yelling for help," in the graphic report of the educational division.

Signs invite the traveller to stop for information on hunting, fishing, camping facilities, sightseeing and other activities, which would help him enjoy himself. The unit is equipped with the necessary maps, lake and stream information and the like. Warnings to observe the precautions against fire are given. The unit has been so well patronized that an extensive parking place had to be cleared out and an additional attendant provided over the Fourth.

As yet unannounced service which is only in process of consideration contemplates the development of folders on the basis of the old-time automobile log.

These logs would give the position of all places of interest along the route, explain what their significance is and how to reach them. For instance, on a tentative log of a route north out of St. Ignace, it might explain that geologically the region was part of Lake Algonquin. Father Marquette's monument and a few words of his career would follow. Castle Rock would be explained. Nun's Creek, providing camping places and trout fishing, would be 23.8 miles. At 32.3 Hessel Hill with its view of Les Cheneaux region and so on.

To spread knowledge of the purposes of conservation among the people of the state years ago a lecture and picture service was inaugurated.

This has developed into a division of education and public relations which provides motion pictures of Michigan's wild life, lectures, a weekly news release and a monthly bulletin and endeavors to interpret the prosy details of conservation administration into a language understood by every citizen for the purpose of enlisting the public behind the movement for the proper saving and wise use of the state's natural resources. More than a half-million persons saw 1,802 reels of these pictures in 1933—if one is interested in figures.

To inculcate a knowledge of fundamental conservation in the younger generation, the Department in co-operation with the department of public instruction will begin a public school educational program this fall.

It will not be pretentious. A high school course of civics will include a two weeks study of Michigan conservation. The same thing will be true of the eighth grade course in government. In addition a grade school booklet with narrative subject matter will be distributed.

This year, for the first time, the story of Michigan conservation will be told in dioramas. Five of this type of exhibits, each of which is five feet in length and similar to those used in the Michigan display at A Century of Progress are now being shown. The dioramas depict the work in forestry, fish, game, fire and geology. They will be first shown at the Detroit and Escanaba state fairs and will be available later for such assemblies as wish them.

In the recreational districts every field officer of the Department is an agent of service. He is in uniform to let the public recognize him and his readiness to be of service. He is instructed to regard visitors as guests in his territory and to give them all the information and every service in his power. He is in no sense a guide and his public contacts with tourists are usually as he meets them in the field on his patrols where he has a fine opportunity to render them the courtesies of his position.

This program is fundamentally conceived to inform the public, local as well as transient, and to arouse in people an understanding of the new part natural resources must play in the economic scheme. It is intended to be so effective that the public will frown upon carelessness with fire in the woods and with violations of the common-sense prohibitions which man has had to place about wildlife; and will cherish the preservation of valuable public rights and privileges in these resources.

New Game Law Digest Issued For This Year

Lansing—The 1934-35 digest of Michigan's general game laws will be new in every way.

For the first time it will carry illustrations. A full page is devoted to pictures of three upland gamebirds on which shooting is permitted in season, the ruffed grouse, sharptailed grouse and prairie chicken. Another page has illustrations of protected ducks, the bufflehead, ruddy duck and woodduck, to aid hunters in their identification.

A page is reserved especially for the deer hunter, showing a skeleton drawing of a buck and the vital heart area. This picture is to aid the hunter in getting his deer and reduce the chances of leaving wounded animals in the woods.

On the back cover is a halftone cut of the famous "doe and fawn" picture under the caption: "Look Before You Shoot." The digests contain all the latest hunting regulations, including the federal regulations on migratory waterfowl. They are now in the hands of the printer and are expected to be ready for distribution within a fortnight.

RALLY TO DRAW 200 SPORTSMEN

Association Will Meet September 13 At Crystal Falls

Negaunee — Two hundred sportsmen from various parts of the upper peninsula are expected to attend the fifteenth annual meeting of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association, to be held in Crystal Falls on Thursday, September 13.

The convention will be called to order in the city hall at 1 p. m. central standard time, by Peter Trudell, Jr., of Negaunee, president of the organization. Dinner will be served in the Crystal Inn at 6 o'clock, when the Michigan conservation commission will be guests of the association.

In addition to the 21 clubs belonging to the association, all of which are expected to be represented at the meeting, Mr. Trudell has been informed that the Sault Ste. Marie Sportsmen's club and the Manistique Conservation club also will have members in attendance. The Negaunee Rod and Gun club is expected to send about 20 members to the meeting.

Dinner reservations should be forwarded as soon as possible to M. G. DeGabriele, of Negaunee, secretary of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association, so that the necessary arrangements may be made.

It is expected that members of the conservation commission will occupy the greater part of the program, with the afternoon open for general discussion and talks by men prominent in state conservation affairs.

Springer Spaniel Really Brings the Birds Back Alive

Because of her ability in pointing wildfowl and marsh birds and capturing needed specimens alive for scientific purposes in connection with the waterfowl survey in the park, "Sally" has been of great value to the Department of Conservation and University of Michigan this year.

She has assisted in locating duck nests and is responsible for discovery of the nests of the yellow rail and Virginia rails in Munuskong marsh. The nests of Virginia rail found with the aid of the dog are believed to be the first reported for the upper peninsula.

FISHERMEN RUN AFOUL OF LAW

Many Fail to Get Their Licenses Which Cost Only 50 Cents

Lansing, Mich.—Violations of state fishing laws made up nearly 90 per cent of the arrests by conservation officers during July, according to the monthly report of the Department of Conservation.

The dominating offense was fishing without a license. Of 316 violations reported by officers, 130 involved that charge.

Total number of arrests for fishing violations was 283. The other arrests were divided as follows: Hunting violations 27; interfering with an officer, two; operating a motorboat in a reckles smanner, failure to make fur reports, carelessly setting a fire and burning without a permit one each.

Fines totalling $980.65 and costs amounting to $1,959.65 were assessed 515 days of jail sentences meted out, 10 men were placed on probation, four cases were dismissed, one was adjourned and one was lost, according to the report.

Reaction Watched

The phenomena of public reaction to conservation laws, particularly the law requiring all residents over 18 years of age to purchase a 50-cent fishing license, has been observed closely by the Department of Conservation since the first of the year. Especially since the law is getting its first full-year test.

Although the license fee is considered small enough to be within the reach of all, more arrests have been made for failure to purchase the 50-cent license than for any other violation, reports show. The large numbers of arrests, it is believed, is due mainly to ignorance of the law and neglect and it is felt that another year of enforcement will result in a more widespread understanding with resultant less violations.

The taking and possession of undersize fish, bluegills in most cases, resulted in 85 arrests during July. Most of the cases reported were in the southern half of the lower peninsula.

Other fishing law infractions were: Exceeding catch limit, 10; taking mussels without a license, eight; possession of illegal whitefish, six; non-resident making false statements to obtain resident license, five; operating unlicensed fishboat, five; illegal use of seine, five; selling minnows without license, dynamiting trout stream, exceeding legal number of lines and possession of short pickerel, four each; illegal use of setlines, illegal dipnetting, three each; sale of undersize perch, two; spearing brook trout, possession of setline, marketing illegal fish and fishing in an inland lake in closed season, one each.

Tackle Confiscated

Officers confiscated 730 pounds of illegal fish, most of which was whitefish, and gave it to welfare agencies and state institutions. Fishing equipment confiscated during illegal use included 200 hooks and lines, four rods, reels and lines, tackle box, 60-foot seine, gill net and creel.

Possession of firearms in closed game area without a permit topped the list of hunting law violations.

Seventeen individuals were taken on this charge, officers confiscating 14 guns including two double-barrel shotguns and two .22 caliber rifles. The others were high-powered deer guns. Other hunting violations listed were: Killing deer, possession of pheasant, possession of cub bear, hunting without a license and attempting to kill migratory birds, one each.

TROUT SEASON COMES TO END

Winners Are Announced In Escanaba Big Fish Contest

For the majority of people, Labor Day usually means just a day of rest, but to the thousands of Michigan sportsmen it means the last day of the trout season, and the last chance to catch the big one that got away on previous trips.

The season of 1934 proved to be a poor one from the trout fishers viewpoint. Limit catches were few and far between, and the average size a disappointment. A favorite saying among fishermen this season was "Where are the fish?"

A variety of reasons have been given as the causes for the scarcity of trout. Throughout the whole state conditions were much the same, and the trout appeared to be staying in the deep spring-fed holes all summer long, instead of running up into their usual summer habitations. Then too, tiny winged insects were very plentiful, and the trout gorged on these disdaining all other food. Illegal fishing methods, such as nets and dynamiting have caused great inroads on the trout population. Strict vigilance on the part of officers is putting an end to such violations.

Two Big Trout

In the first annual contest sponsored by the Wolverine Conservation Association, entries were not numerous, although a few good fish were entered for the big fish honors.

First place in the brook trout division is now held by Peter Ethier, who had the good fortune and skill necessary to land an 18 inch trout weighing two pounds, 13½ ounces, dressed. This fish was caught in the Au Train river, a favorite stream for local fly fishermen.

Al Pierson proved his prowess by entering a rainbow trout, 24 inches long, and weighing three pounds, 12½ ounces, dressed. This whopper was caught in the Whitefish river.

Putting one over on the men, Mrs. Hazel Asselin caught the largest large-mouth bass so far entered. It was 20 inches long and weighed four pounds, two ounces, dressed. Wilfred Chartrand holds the record for small-mouth bass, 19 inches long, and weighing three pounds.

The contest for bass still has a month to run, and fishermen generally acknowledge this as the best time for this fighting fish. Undoubtedly other fish in this class and in the pike, blue gill and perch will still be entered.

This Quickens Hunter's Heartbeat

A sight to quicken the pulse of the sportsman and stir the imagination of the epicure is this one, of pheasants flying to freedom from the state game preserve near Toledo, heralding the hunting season soon to open in many states. Eric Howard, Ohio state game protector, is freeing the birds, that they may enjoy their liberty at least until guns start popping. Watching release of the birds at the right, is John King, Isaak Walton League representative.

Conservation Economics

When Will We Wake Up?

Michigan has 57,980 square miles of land and 40,000 square miles of the Great Lakes within its boundaries. Besides the Great Lakes, containing one third of all of the fresh water in the world, the retreating glaciers left more than 5,000 inland lakes for the enjoyment of our people. Besides the beaches on the inland lakes 1,624 miles of shore line on Lakes Michigan, Huron and Superior offer facilities for swimming, fishing and sailing unexcelled in their variety and extensiveness.

"You certainly have a great deal of lake shore. Do you use all of it?" was the first comment which Dr. Wehrwein, land economist at the University of Wisconsin, made, when shown a map of Delta county this summer. The truthful reply must be that, except for a few miles on the west side of Little Bay de Noc and a summer colony at Garth, Delta county has developed only a small part of the 70 miles of lake shore which should be one of our most valuable natural resources. Escanaba has done practically nothing from the standpoint of complete utilization of the recreational possibilities of the water which lies at our door step.

Menominee Gets Results

Other cities have not been so shortsighted. Menominee is constructing a fine concrete breakwater to provide a harbor for pleasure craft and sail boats. Gladstone has made commendable progress with her aquatic park and boat harbor. Those familiar with the resort developments around some of the weedy mudholes which are politely called lakes in southern Michigan can not understand the lack of appreciation of the possibilities which lie in the cool clean water of Little Bay de Noc. Several of our enthusiastic sailors have gone ahead in spite of the handicaps, and their sailboats are anchored all the way from the docks to Portage point. Regardless of this evidence Escanaba continues officially asleep on the job.

We are anxious to have yachts stop here in the summer but we have no place where a self-respecting owner can tie his boat. Menominee and Gladstone will soon offer these facilities while we will continue on the Black List (truthfully speaking) of every yacht owner on the lakes until we provide facilities where a boat can be docked in clean water and passengers may not be compelled to walk through sand and coal dust to reach our hotels.

No Gas Tax

It would seem to the critical observer that enough money has already been spent moving good clay around on the duck pastures at the South end of Ludington Park to build a fine pleasure boat harbor which would furnish a good amount of work and at the same time be a genuine asset to Escanaba. If all of the sail and motor boats owned here were tied at one dock the fleet would be an attractive sight to tourist and resident alike. The spirit developed by the simple act of docking all of the boats at one place would be the greatest stimulation to boat ownership that could be made. There is no gas tax on a sail boat. The initial cost of a small boat is well within reach of the average man or boy and the upkeep is almost nothing. Practically all of our local boats have been built here by the owners in their spare time and the total construction costs are surprisingly moderate.

The lighted signboards on the roads leading into Escanaba advertise our assets to the tourists. We do not need to advertise that we are the most backward city on the west side of Lake Michigan in the development of the recreational aspects of our aquatic resources. Some day we will wake up and realize that Bay De Noc and our lake shore are an important natural resource whose development must have an important place in our general plan for wise planned utilization of all of our natural resources.

Notre Dame has a tradition that it never rains when a new gold coating is being put on the huge dome of the administration building.

OFFICERS WEAR NEW HEADGEAR

Conservation Force Will Not Be So Easy to Spot in Woods

Lansing, Mich.—It may not be so easy for violators to "spot" a conservation officer in the woods this fall.

The old-style dress caps by which the officers were easily distinguished while on patrol duty will not be seen. New-type felt hats of conventional style will be worn instead.

For several years conservation officers have favored a change in headgear. They have wanted something that would distinguish them from bus drivers and gas station attendants, something that would be more comfortable as well as practical in the woods. The original caps often caught on branches and had a habit of blowing off in the wind and rolling across the icy surface of a lake, according to the Department of Conservation.

The new hat is patterned after that worn by federal forestry rangers and is of a color to match the uniform. The cap is being retained for use on dress occasions.

CHRISTMAS TREES VS. DEER HUNTERS

It has come to a good many peoples attention that in the last few years a great many trees are being taken out by hunters in the fall during the annual deer trek into the northwoods. In three days last fall while hunters were headed back home I counted 17 trailer loads of trees, some trailers had as high as six beautiful trees on them. Now I would say that the conservation department ought to realize something out of them. Say for instance a hunter buying his license would be asked if he was taking a Christmas tree, if so, he would be compelled to pay a small fee and in return receive a tag to be placed on it for transportation. This small fee could be used by the state to purchase new seedlings to be transplanted and in that way we would not have a total loss. If the hunter will stop and realize that only in a short time they will be compelled to leave the trees and not be allowed to take any, so by getting a small fee of 25 cents or so would be worth while paying for and in that way we would always have trees to take home.

Another thing that has come to our attention, is that some of the hunters are getting very careless about leaving their camping grounds all littered up. You may start out in the spring of the year on a little jaunt out along some road and the first thing you will notice is a bunch of stakes sticking out of the ground, a few bunks made out of poles, with a bunch of balsam boughs, or a pile of dead straw, an old stove, a bunch of pipes, old cans and a bunch of half rotten wood. Now we all know that those things are not very nice things to look upon. Its very poor judgment on the campers part. I think if their attention be called on this matter it would stop at once.

Hunters, give us an idea on these matters and think it over.

THE RED GODS' BLACK BOOK

The Red Gods are those mystical ghosts of the outdoors which watch over the Wild Life of the Air, Woods and Water. The Indians believed that the Red Gods recorded the death of all birds, fish and animals. Those killed for useful purposes were entered in the Red Book and those destroyed and wasted were entered in the Black Book. Every Indian expected to be asked to explain all entries in the Black Book when he reached the Happy Hunting Ground.

The Red Gods still keep the Black Book. They have filled volumes since the coming of the white men. We will read the entries as they appear.

Who shot the gulls on Portage Point? Six or eight of these splendid big white birds were killed on Portage Point recently and left to rot on the sand. The gulls are the scavengers of the lake beaches. Wtih the help of the crayfish and a few insects they keep our beaches free of dead fish and other obnoxious materials. No one can deny that they are a definite picturesque resource of the Great Lakes harbors. They have no value as human food. They are so tame and fly so slow that any neophytic game hog can hit them with a .22. Yet some "mighty hunter" shot them and left them where they fell. Who can excuse this entry in the Red Gods' Black Book?

The story of the Civilian Conservation Corps, its objects and accomplishments, is told by F. A. Silcox, Forester, United States forest service, in comment accompanying a one-reel sound motion picture, "Forests and Men," recently released by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Forester Silcox says that the C. C. C. was inaugurated not only for the conservation of the forests but for the rebuilding of the men through the mental and spiritual benefits received. The film illustrates this by scenes taken in camps throughout the country, showing enrollment of the men, their arrival at the Army's conditioning camps and their transportation to the forest camps where the work of fighting forest fires, building bridges and repairing damage caused by erosion and destructive rodents is carried on.

Prints of this film in both 16 mm. and 35 mm. size are available for loan upon application to the Division of Motion Pictures, Extension Service, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., the borrower paying the transportation costs.

Peninsula Paragraphs

By Marjorie Huntoon Morrill

THE ECONOMY OF NATURE

These are the days when "economy' is being thought about. Of course many of us have always thought about it but it has been in the sense of "saving." Now we have learned that sometimes we save only when we use and sometimes the word means "adjustment" as much as anything else. We are learning that about conservation. We thought for a good many years that "settlement," of a territory meant civilization and wealth. Forests were meant to be cut down and towns built up. Swamps were meant to be drained and turned into farms. A tree was of no use unless it could be made into lumber, or cut into posts and poles, or ground into paper pulp.

Great fortunes were built up for a few of America's famiiles out of the old economy. Great cities were erected about the industries whcih the forest products fed. But the territories so "exploited" became waste lands, the towns and hamlets became deserted, the peoples who had built homes and invested their small earnings were left with only the cut-over, worthless country to repay for a life-time of work.

Families Stranded

The swamps were found to consist for the most part of a thin layer of muck on top of sand. The drainage ditches took off the water and the water and wind took off the black muck. Families were lured from other localities and found themselves stranded and helpless. But today the sons and grandsons of the lumberman and 'jack have a new job. They are busy building up the land devastated by the old economic system. They are in the CCC camps as workmen and foresters, planting trees, fighting fires, protecting from insect and flood the plant and animal life still left from the old ways.

Jerry Skulina of the Sage river believes that all predators should be held in control but not entirely killed off. He tells you that when you exterminate any specie you interfere with the balance of nature and bring greater trouble down upon your head.

Take the porcupine. This spined creature is becoming so plentiful that large sections of forests are reported dead and dying because of the girdling of the bark by his sharp teeth. The overproduction of porcupine, believes Jerry, is due in part at least, to the extermination of the fisher. This once-important furred animal was the one creature who killed the porcupine by climbing trees and ripping open the unprotected stomach of the porcupine. But the rich man, and especially the rich woman, wanted the beautiful fur of the fisher and that animal was killed off. So now we have too many porcupines.

Cats and Clover

Like the cat and the clover story. It is believed that Darwin started that one. Clover, the story goes, can only be polinated by the bumble bee. Field mice rob the bee nests during the winter, eat the stored honey so that the insects starve to death and eat the young bees. No bees, no clover. So the farmers brought cats into the picture. The cats killed off the mice and there was plenty of bees to help the clover do its proper seeding. This is a nice story for people who like cats and a sad one for people who like birds. But the story has gone around the world.

ISLE HAS TOO MANY MOOSE

Professor Predicts Food Problem Will Be Serious Soon

Michigan has a population problem, not of human beings, but among the moose on Isle Royale, the state's "colonial possession" in Lake Superior.

Since 1913, the last time moose were seen crossing on the ice from the mainland, the animals have increased until certain parts of the island "resemble a well stocked barnyard," while before many years the food problem will reach the starvation point, writes Dr. Adolph Murie, of the University Museum of Zoology, in a published report based on observations made in 1929 and 1930, authorized by the 55th state legislature.

Destroy Many Trees

Already the moose have seriously interfered with the scenic beauty of the island by destroying many trees and bushes for food, Dr. Murie finds. In addition, they are over-browsing the water vegetation in the lakes to the extent that water-lily and weed beds are badly reduced in extent. To prevent further scenic damage, to protect lake fishing and to prevent the moose from eventually eating themselves out of food, he recommends a reduction of the population to a point which the island can support. Isle Royale undoubtedly now has the greatest concentration of moose of any like area in North America.

Moose were probably on Isle Royale in 1905, though no migration from the shore was recorded until the winter of 1912-13. The few that crossed at that time have now increased to a minimum of 1,000 in 1930, with the probability that an actual count would show two or three times as many. It is estimated that approximately 50 per cent of all cows have a calf each year, a rate of population growth which is excessive for the 220 square miles of the island's area.

Proposes Shooting Some

The best method of reducing the moose would be the shooting of a definite number each year by state employees, as is usually done in national parks overpopulated with some type of animal life, Dr. Murie believes. He also suggests that the cougar might be introduced as a natural check, as this animal is employed in the Kaibab National Forest to keep down the number of deer. If funds were available some of the moose might be rounded up and shipped to other parts of the country. The tolerance of bears, wolves and cougars on the island would also give a naturalness and variety to the animal life which has made Yellowstone Park attractive, says Dr. Murie.

Open hunting, apparently the simplest solution to the problem, would be inadvisable because of the difficulty of control from year to year, and would be more butchery than sport at present, due to the abundance and tameness of the moose, Dr. Murie states. If the island eventually becomes a national park, as is predicted, hunting would of course be permanently prohibited.

Peninsula Expects CCC Will Be Made Permanent Project

A statement by Washington officials August 25, that the Civilian Conservation corps, familiarly known to thousands of Upper Peninsula people as the CCC, will probably be made a permanent institution, is of special interest to this district.

The law creating the corps expires March 31, 1935. However, the administration, it is announced, expects little or no opposition to re-enactment without any time limit.

Congress will probably approve the reforestation law early in the next session, and a decision on the corps could be made easily, it is pointed out, in the form of amendments to the CCC statute in coneection with forestry legislation.

The establishment and maintenance of the CCC is generally recognized as one of the best moves of the administration. Original complaints and criticisms have disappeared, and officials of the U. S. Forest service say there will be need for the CCC indefinitely. About 170,000 youths are now enrolled in corps activities, of whom between 5,000 and 6,000 are employed in the Upper Peninsula.

Legislation by the coming congress will probably increase the need for more CCC workers on government forests and other projects. If the plans carry for the establishment of a 1,300-mile tree belt in the middle west, additional thousands of men will be needed.

TEACHERS BEGIN DUTIES MONDAY

Escanaba Schools Reopen Tuesday Morning For Fall Term

School bells will ring again at Escanaba Tuesday morning to announce the end of the summer vacation, but for teachers the school year will start officially Monday morning. A general meeting for all teachers of the Escanaba public schools has been called by Superintendent R. E. Cheney for 10 a. m. Monday at the Junior high school. Building meetings will be held at 1:30 p. m. and teachers tomorrow will be getting their teaching materials and other equipment in order for the opening of school Tuesday. Grade school principals will meet Monday at 8:30 a. m., and special teachers of art, music, and physical education are asked to meet at the same hour to arrange building schedules.

Following is the complete list of teachers in the Escanaba public schools for the year 1934-35:

Senior High School

John Lemmer, principal; Irma G. Bangs, Marie Bezold, Ruby Blizel, R. P. Bowers, Edw. E. Edick, Mary E. French, George Grab, A. BOAT PARTY

Fayette, Mich.—A delightful boat party given by the members and friends of the J. F. F. club was held on the shore of Big Summer Island on Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Clarabelle Hooper of Grand Rapids, who is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Laux.

A very pleasant evening was spent playing games and dancing on the large smooth rocks, by the light of a large bon fire.

The hostess, Miss Leda Gierke served a delicious lunch, which was enjoyed by all.

Miss Hooper stated that she will always have many pleasant memories of the occasion.

Musician May Do American Opera On Billy the Kid

New York (AP)—Ferde Grofe believes that the exploits of Billy the Kid, southwestern bad man of other days, might provide a first rate subject for an American opera—and he has ambitions now to be represented on the operatic stage.

The picaresque is always suitable for stage presentation, and, believes the composer of "Tabloid" and "Grand Canyon Suite," Billy the kid is sufficiently picaresque—and sufficiently "folk" in flavor as well.

But he hasn't decided definitely as yet and is still discussing libretto possibilities with his friends.

He is determined, however, that he will do an American opera, based on American themes and situations, and preferably scenes and themes having to do with the west.

Further, he wants the subject to have a folk character. It should be something close to the soil, like, perhaps, Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," which is Bohemia to the life, or even the "Beggars' Opera," which reproduces a period and a given stratum of English society perfectly.

But he has not decided, and would welcome suggestions.

Meanwhile the man who may compose an American folk opera waves an expressive baton over his dance band. And thinks.

RANCHER TELLS OF BIG DROUTH

Watson Man Back from Nebraska Trip; Saw Cattle Dying

A story of complete desolation, the result of the continued drouth, in Nebraska, was told Saturday by Willard Anderson, owner of a ranch near Watson, Mich., who has just returned from a hurried trip to Burewell, Neb., where he has a 640-acre ranch.

Mr. Anderson, who left for the west, following a message telling him of the serious state of affairs on his holdings, spent three weeks there.

"Conditions are bad, very bad," he said discussing his trip. "There is little or no grazing. Cattle are starving, in fact in one pasture I saw as many as 65 head lying dead of starvation. There is grass only on the sand hills and sage brush and Russian thistles are being cut and bailed for forage.

"The scarcity of water is serious," he said. "I visited during my stay there at the homes of wealthy ranchers, and the utmost care to waste no water, even to the extent of all living in the home using the same wash water, was being taken by everyone."

Cattle, Mr. Anderson stated, under government regulations sell for from $12 to $20 a head, and providing the owner of the stock is in debt, he realizes only about $6 on each head sold, the remainder going to the creditors.

Mr. Anderson had a thrilling experience during the Burewell Rodeo fatal shooting episode a few weeks ago, one of the shots fired by irate cowboys under cover of the mock battle staged by soldiers of a nearby fort, narrowly missed his head, the shock affecting his sense of hearing for over an hour.

TRENARY NEWS

Trenary, Mich.—Trenary's new deal in school administration was completed this week with hiring of W. Herman Johnson of Cadillac, as superintendent of schools to replace V. C. Vaughan who recently resigned to accept a position at Honor, Michigan.

Mr. Johnson comes to Trenary with six years of experience as superintendent, having served two years in that capacity at Harlan Agricultural school, and four years as superintendent at Cooks. Mr. Johnson is a graduate of Michigan State College having a bachelor of science degree. He has also completed some work on his master's degree at the same school.

The rest of the Trenary teaching staff for the coming year will be as follows:

Mr. Edwin Beck of Waukesha, Wis., principal and mathematics.

Mr. Kelly of Marquette, Latin and English.

Miss Larson of Norway, fourth and fifth grades.

Miss Violet Brown of Mankato, Minn., kindergarten and first grade.

There will be three new teachers in the school system besides the new superintendent, Mr. Johnson. The new teachers are Miss Larson, who will replace Miss Genevieve Miller, who resigned to take a position in Lansing. Miss Miller, who replaces Mrs. John Knaus, and Mr. Kelly, who takes over Mrs. Vaughan's subjects.

School will be called Tuesday morning at 8:45 fast time, September 4. There will be a teachers' meeting Tuesday afternoon at the close of school. The school will probably run on fast time until the end of September when Escanaba and vicinity goes back to slow time.

Mrs. Vance Davis and family visited Escanaba on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Trenary have returned from a week's visit with their daughter, Dorothy, in Lansing. Mr. and Mrs. Trenary returned by the way of Chicago and visited the Century of Progress in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cauchon have moved to Kiva where they will make their home. Mrs. Cauchon was formerly Miss Esther Hulbert.

Francis Finlan visited Escanaba on Thursday.

Mr. Edwin Beck of Waukesha arrived in Trenary Thursday night to resume his duties as teacher in the Trenary schools for the coming year. Mr. Beck attended the Milwaukee Normal School this summer.

Philip Viton was a Munising visitor on Thursday.

Miss Ione Shipley of Osier has moved to Trenary where she will be employed at Mrs. Katherine Sloan's rooming and boarding house. She is a sister of Mrs. Richard Williams who was employed by Mrs. Sloan until a year ago.

Relief Grants for September Issued

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Grants totaling $68,161,476 for September relief activities, including money for direct relief, work relief projects and other purposes, were announced today by the federal relief administration.

The grants included $4,349,320 to Michigan.

New Waterfowl Regulations Favor Birds and Sportsmen

Duck hunters in the United States will have fewer days of shooting this year than last, but they will have a longer season and will hunt on days recommended by their own state game departments.

Shooting waterfowl on baited premises may continue, but only under permit, and the baiting of mourning doves has been prohibited.

Hunting previously permitted during the half hour before sunrise has been made illegal, but the former restriction on shooting before noon on the opening day of the season has been removed.

Bag and possession limits on specially imperiled species of ducks have been reduced, but limits on other ducks and migratory game birds remain the same as last year.

So states the bureau of biological survey in summarizing changes in the regulations under the migratory bird treaty act adopted August 15 by Secretary Wallace and approved August 20 in a proclamation by President Roosevelt.

"In other words," says the bureau's statement, "both birds and hunters have been given special consideration in the new regulations, and the sportsmen this year will have as great hunting privileges as are consistent with the precarious status of our waterfowl. Although charged with the responsibility of protecting the birds that migrate between the United States and Canada, the biological survey is of the opinion that the sportsmen should have something to say about matters affecting regulations governing their hunting, and the regulations this year have been drafted with this thought in mind. They were made in accordance with the recommendations of the secretary's advisory board of sportsmen and conservationists, following the most extensive wild fowl investigations ever undertaken, and they are in line with predictions made by the bureau after the advisory board's meeting.

"These predictions," the statement continues, "aroused protests, but many of the critics from both sides after reviewing the waterfowl reports later expressed approval of the proposed action, confirming our judgment that these regulations come as near as possible to combining adequate conservation with reasonable sporting privileges. We are convinced that any further concessions in either direction would have increased dissatisfaction."

Flexible Seasons Provided

Though reduced to a 30-day maximum because of a general decrease of waterfowl, the open seasons on these birds have been determined in accordance with a flexible provision permitting game departments to recommend the time and spread of shooting considered most suitable for their own states. This provision has made it possible for states in areas affected by drought or other special conditions to make appropriate recommendations. The flexible-season provision has also made it possible to eliminate zoning within states, with the single exception of New York, where a separate season is continued for Long Island.

California has chosen a season of 22 days consisting of Saturdays and Sundays during 11 weeks beginning October 20 and ending December 30, and New Mexico will have a 28-day season providing shooting on Saturdays and Sundays for 14 weeks, October 13 to January 13.

All other states have elected 30-day seasons.

Two states will have continuous seasons—Nebraska October 16 to November 14 and West Virginia November 1 to 30.

Hunters in nine states will shoot 5 days a week for 6 weeks—Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and Wyoming Wednesday to Sunday October 3 to November 11; Iowa Wednesday to Sunday October 10 to November 18; and Arkansas and Mississippi Tuesday to Saturday November 6 to December 15.

Baiting to be Regulated

As predicted in a recent statement by the biological survey, the new regulations include an amendment designed to control the principal abuses of baiting migratory waterfowl and thus to protect further the birds and, as a necessary consequence, to increase ultimately the opportunities for legitimate sport.

The control provided for is a system of permits, the permits to be issued without charge by the chief of the biological survey and revocable by the secretary of agriculture. The permits will be issued upon the conditions that migratory waterfowl on baited premises will not be shot after 3 p. m., nor while resting on water or land, nor in violation of state law or regulations.

Each baiting permittee is also to agree to keep an accurate record of the number of persons shooting on the premises and of the species and number of each species of waterfowl killed on the premises during the open season, the number of blinds employed, the numbers of birds killed at each blind each day, and the kinds of food employed and the intervals of feeding the birds. All this information must be reported to the chief of the biological survey within one month after the close of the open season.

"With this information within reach for the first time, the department of agriculture," says the bureau, "will have extensive and reliable data upon which to determine its future policy with reference to the very controversial question of baiting."

By a further amendment the new regulations absolutely prohibit the shooting of mourning doves attracted or enticed to baited fields.

Bag Limits on Imperiled Ducks Reduced

Because of the specially critical status of certain species of ducks revealed by the biological survey's investigations, the daily bag limits on these birds have been reduced from eight to five and the possession limits from 16 to 10.

The species so affected are the canvasback, redhead, eider duck, greater scaup, lesser scaup, ringneck, blue-wing teal, green-wing teal, cinnamon teal, shoveller and gadwall.

Other Changes Summarized

Other amendments to the regulations change the seasons on rails and gallinules (except coot) in Massachusetts, Wisconsin, and New York (including Long Island) and on mourning doves in Louisiana and Texas, all in accordance with suggestions of the state game departments.

In Wisconsin and New York the seasons on rails and gallinules have been made to conform with the waterfowl season, and in Massachusetts the season under the amended regulation will be October 4 to November 2.

The new mourning dove season in Louisiana will be November 2 to January 31, and the Texas season has been changed by providing a separate season for Brazos county—November 15 to January 15. This change, the biological survey explains, was recommended by the advisory board, migratory bird treaty act, because of a temporary confusion in special state legislation.

Regulations Being Published

The amended regulations as approved by the president are now in press, and copies may be obtained, as soon as issued, from the bureau of biological survey, U. S. department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Hunting Stamps Required

In accordance with a recent act of congress, the bureau also points out that this year for the first time all migratory-waterfowl hunters who are over 16 years of age will be required to carry a federal hunting stamp. These stamps are sold at $1 each at all post offices in towns of 2,500 population or more, in county seats, and in certain other localities. The fund derived from the sale of these stamps has been set aside by congress to be used in purchasing or leasing marsh and water areas to be acquired as waterfowl refuges.

Roadside Nesting Of Game Birds Is Subject of Check

Lansing, Mich.—What gamebirds use roadside cover for nesting purposes in Michigan? How and to what extent are they affected by roadside mowing?

In an effort to obtain an answer to these questions the state highway department, co-operating with the Department of Conservation, has sent questionnaires to highway superintendents in various counties.

Date of mowing, type of roadside cover, number of nests, species of gamebird nesting, whether any birds were killed or their nests destroyed are among the questions asked.

The check-up is planned principally as an inventory of pheasant conditions in southern half of the lower peninsula, but returns from some counties farther north are expected to bring data on ruffed grouse. The purpose of the survey is to ascertain whether flushing bars should be used in roadside mowing operations.

Wild cotton, close relative to cultivated cotton growing in Florida, is host to several insect pests destructive to cotton in many foreign countries but which have not yet become established in the United States. Among them is the pink bollworm.

LAKES DRY UP ABOUT STATE

Cause and Remedy Are Causing Worry to Many Citizens

"Our lake seems to be drying up. What is the cause of the conditions? Can anything be done to remedy it?"

This is one of the numerous inquiries which the Department of Conservation has received from various parts of the state this summer. All of the inquiries complain about the lowering of water levels on inland lakes. Much concern is evidenced in many instances where the water has receded to such an extent as to reduce property valuations.

Cottagers Suffer

The low water conditions are reported more serious in cases where the lake bottom has a gentle slope so that a drop of a few inches in the water level exposes many feet of the beach. In some cases cottages built close to the water's edge a few years ago are now as much as a quarter-mile from water.

In view of the alarm shown, W. Osgood of the Geology Division, Department of Conservation, has made a survey of conditions in several parts of the state. He has attributed the condition of lake levels to three causes: The subnormal amount of rainfall of the past several years, the construction of ditches to drain marshes for the purpose of cultivating them and the exceedingly hot weather which tends to increase evaporation.

Not Permanent Condition

Every month of 1934, Osgood's report shows, has fallen below the state average in precipitation for the past 47 years.

"This condition judged in the light of past records will not be permanent," Osgood says. "Should the precipitation of the next few years return to normal, then the lake levels should come up again. However, irreparable damage has been done in numerous localities of the state by the construction of drainage ditches. These ditches operate to lower the general ground water level of the area and drain moisture from the land. Areas drained by such ditches obviously cannot withstand drought conditions as well as before, because the ground water level is lowered and the water supply drops farther from the surface soil. Lakes in the vicinity of drainage ditches may be permanently affected. The surfaces of such lakes are definitely related to the ground water level and when the level goes down as a result of ditch drainage the lake level will drop accordingly."

Pumping Unsuccessful

Restoring levels by pumping water from some other source offers little hope, Osgood says. The tremendous amount of water necessary to help even a very small lake and the cost of such a project eliminates it from serious consideration. Where drainage ditches have been cut the water table has often been permanently lowered and the damming of these ditches would probably be of only minor aid.

"The remedy for the existing low water conditions lies very largely in increased rainfall," Osgood says. "Judging from past records, the next few years should show a gradual increase which will eventually raise the ground water level and relieve the present distress. Just when this increase will take place cannot be predicted, but it seems certain to come."

Tanks first were used in warfare by the British.

New Waterfowl Regulations Favor Birds and Sportsmen

Duck hunters in the United States will have fewer days of shooting this year than last, but they will have a longer season and will hunt on days recommended by their own state game departments.

Shooting waterfowl on baited premises may continue, but only under permit, and the baiting of mourning doves has been prohibited.

Hunting previously permitted during the half hour before sunrise has been made illegal, but the former restriction on shooting before noon on the opening day of the season has been removed.

Bag and possession limits on specially imperiled species of ducks have been reduced, but limits on other ducks and migratory game birds remain the same as last year.

So states the bureau of biological survey in summarizing changes in the regulations under the migratory bird treaty act adopted August 15 by Secretary Wallace and approved August 20 in a proclamation by President Roosevelt.

"In other words," says the bureau's statement, "both birds and hunters have been given special consideration in the new regulations, and the sportsmen this year will have as great hunting privileges as are consistent with the precarious status of our waterfowl. Although charged with the responsibility of protecting the birds that migrate between the United States and Canada, the biological survey is of the opinion that the sportsmen should have something to say about matters affecting regulations governing their hunting, and the regulations this year have been drafted with this thought in mind. They were made in accordance with the recommendations of the secretary's advisory board of sportsmen and conservationists, following the most extensive wild fowl investigations ever undertaken, and they are in line with predictions made by the bureau after the advisory board's meeting.

"These predictions," the statement continues, "aroused protests, but many of the critics from both sides after reviewing the waterfowl reports later expressed approval of the proposed action, confirming our judgment that these regulations come as near as possible to combining adequate conservation with reasonable sporting privileges. We are convinced that any further concessions in either direction would have increased dissatisfaction."

Flexible Seasons Provided

Though reduced to a 30-day maximum because of a general decrease of waterfowl, the open seasons on these birds have been determined in accordance with a flexible provision permitting game departments to recommend the time and spread of shooting considered most suitable for their own states. This provision has made it possible for states in areas affected by drought or other special conditions to make appropriate recommendations. The flexible-season provision has also made it possible to eliminate zoning within states, with the single exception of New York, where a separate season is continued for Long Island.

California has chosen a season of 22 days consisting of Saturdays and Sundays during 11 weeks beginning October 20 and ending December 30, and New Mexico will have a 28-day season providing shooting on Saturdays and Sundays for 14 weeks, October 13 to January 13.

All other states have elected 30-day seasons.

Two states will have continuous seasons—Nebraska October 16 to November 14 and West Virginia November 1 to 30.

Hunters in nine states will shoot 5 days a week for 6 weeks—Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and Wyoming Wednesday to Sunday October 3 to November 11; Iowa Wednesday to Sunday October 10 to November 18; and Arkansas and Mississippi Tuesday to Saturday November 6 to December 15.

Baiting to be Regulated

As predicted in a recent statement by the biological survey, the new regulations include an amendment designed to control the principal abuses of baiting migratory waterfowl and thus to protect further the birds and, as a necessary consequence, to increase ultimately the opportunities for legitimate sport.

The control provided for is a system of permits, the permits to be issued without charge by the chief of the biological survey and revocable by the secretary of agriculture. The permits will be issued upon the conditions that migratory waterfowl on baited premises will not be shot after 3 p. m., nor while resting on water or land, nor in violation of state law or regulations.

Each baiting permittee is also to agree to keep an accurate record of the number of persons shooting on the premises and of the species and number of each species of waterfowl killed on the premises during the open season, the number of blinds employed, the numbers of birds killed at each blind each day, and the kinds of food employed and the intervals of feeding the birds. All this information must be reported to the chief of the biological survey within one month after the close of the open season.

"With this information within reach for the first time, the department of agriculture," says the bureau, "will have extensive and reliable data upon which to determine its future policy with reference to the very controversial question of baiting."

By a further amendment the new regulations absolutely prohibit the shooting of mourning doves attracted or enticed to baited fields.

Bag Limits on Imperiled Ducks Reduced

Because of the specially critical status of certain species of ducks revealed by the biological survey's investigations, the daily bag limits on these birds have been reduced from eight to five and the possession limits from 16 to 10.

The species so affected are the canvasback, redhead, eider duck, greater scaup, lesser scaup, ringneck, blue-wing teal, green-wing teal, cinnamon teal, shoveller and gadwall.

Other Changes Summarized

Other amendments to the regulations change the seasons on rails and gallinules (except coot) in Massachusetts, Wisconsin, and New York (including Long Island) and on mourning doves in Louisiana and Texas, all in accordance with suggestions of the state game departments.

In Wisconsin and New York the seasons on rails and gallinules have been made to conform with the waterfowl season, and in Massachusetts the season under the amended regulation will be October 4 to November 2.

The new mourning dove season in Louisiana will be November 2 to January 31, and the Texas season has been changed by providing a separate season for Brazos county—November 15 to January 15. This change, the biological survey explains, was recommended by the advisory board, migratory bird treaty act, because of a temporary confusion in special state legislation.

Regulations Being Published

The amended regulations as approved by the president are now in press, and copies may be obtained, as soon as issued, from the bureau of biological survey, U. S. department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Hunting Stamps Required

In accordance with a recent act of congress, the bureau also points out that this year for the first time all migratory-waterfowl hunters who are over 16 years of age will be required to carry a federal hunting stamp. These stamps are sold at $1 each at all post offices in towns of 2,500 population or more, in county seats, and in certain other localities. The fund derived from the sale of these stamps has been set aside by congress to be used in purchasing or leasing marsh and water areas to be acquired as waterfowl refuges.

Lansing, Mich.—What gamebirds use roadside cover for nesting purposes in Michigan? How and to what extent are they affected by roadside mowing?

In an effort to obtain an answer to these questions the state highway department, co-operating with the Department of Conservation, has sent questionnaires to highway superintendents in various counties.

Date of mowing, type of roadside cover, number of nests, species of gamebird nesting, whether any birds were killed or their nests destroyed are among the questions asked.

The check-up is planned principally as an inventory of pheasant conditions in southern half of the lower peninsula, but returns from some counties farther north are expected to bring data on ruffed grouse. The purpose of the survey is to ascertain whether flushing bars should be used in roadside mowing operations.

Wild cotton, close relative to cultivated cotton growing in Florida, is host to several insect pests destructive to cotton in many foreign countries but which have not yet become established in the United States. Among them is the pink bollworm.

LAKES DRY UP ABOUT STATE

Cause and Remedy Are Causing Worry to Many Citizens

"Our lake seems to be drying up. What is the cause of the conditions? Can anything be done to remedy it?"

This is one of the numerous inquiries which the Department of Conservation has received from various parts of the state this summer. All of the inquiries complain about the lowering of water levels on inland lakes. Much concern is evidenced in many instances where the water has receded to such an extent as to reduce property valuations.

Cottagers Suffer

The low water conditions are reported more serious in cases where the lake bottom has a gentle slope so that a drop of a few inches in the water level exposes many feet of the beach. In some cases cottages built close to the water's edge a few years ago are now as much as a quarter-mile from water.

In view of the alarm shown, W. Osgood of the Geology Division, Department of Conservation, has made a survey of conditions in several parts of the state. He has attributed the condition of lake levels to three causes: The subnormal amount of rainfall of the past several years, the construction of ditches to drain marshes for the purpose of cultivating them and the exceedingly hot weather which tends to increase evaporation.

Not Permanent Condition

Every month of 1934, Osgood's report shows, has fallen below the state average in precipitation for the past 47 years.

"This condition judged in the light of past records will not be permanent," Osgood says. "Should the precipitation of the next few years return to normal, then the lake levels should come up again. However, irreparable damage has been done in numerous localities of the state by the construction of drainage ditches. These ditches operate to lower the general ground water level of the area and drain moisture from the land. Areas drained by such ditches obviously cannot withstand drought conditions as well as before, because the ground water level is lowered and the water supply drops farther from the surface soil. Lakes in the vicinity of drainage ditches may be permanently affected. The surfaces of such lakes are definitely related to the ground water level and when the level goes down as a result of ditch drainage the lake level will drop accordingly."

Pumping Unsuccessful

Restoring levels by pumping water from some other source offers little hope, Osgood says. The tremendous amount of water necessary to help even a very small lake and the cost of such a project eliminates it from serious consideration. Where drainage ditches have been cut the water table has often been permanently lowered and the damming of these ditches would probably be of only minor aid.

"The remedy for the existing low water conditions lies very largely in increased rainfall," Osgood says. "Judging from past records, the next few years should show a gradual increase which will eventually raise the ground water level and relieve the present distress. Just when this increase will take place cannot be predicted, but it seems certain to come."

DUCK STAMPS NOW ON SALE

All Hunters of Migratory Birds Must Pay Tax This Fall

The new duck stamps, which all hunters of migratory birds must have this fall in addition to the state game hunting license, have been received at the local postoffice and are now on sale, it was announced yesterday by Postmaster Frank A. Miller.

Proceeds of the stamp will be used to purchase suitable breeding, feeding and resting grounds in a movement aimed at the restoration of migratory waterfowl. Sale of stamps is the result of federal legislation following a noticeable decrease in the number of ducks and geese during recent years.

Efforts were first made to place a tax on shotgun shells, but public opinion blocked the move made about 3 years ago. The purpose of the proposed shell tax was approximately the same as that of the migratory bird hunting stamp law now enacted.

The federal stamps cost one dollar and in no way exempt a person from the state licensing law or state game provisions.

Convictions upon violation of the stamp law can result in a maximum penalty of $500 fine being imposed or a sentence of not to exceed six months in prison, or both fine and imprisonment.

Materials have already arrived and workmen and the directors in charge of the project will take over the house on Tuesday morning. It is planned to reopen on Wednesday, Sept. 12.

Pretty Girl Kills President Of Bank, Then Shoots Self

Morristown, Tenn., Aug. 31 (AP)—A young woman of 29, described as a "very pretty girl" and identified as a minister's daughter, walked into the Hamblen National Bank today, fatally wounded the president, Jesse C. Shelton, 35, and then shot herself to death in his private office.

Shelton, who was unmarried, died within less than an hour, refusing to name his assailant.

The dashing brunette had registered at the Kingmeyer hotel here Monday as Miss Mary Sam Bruce of Nashville, but a note in her handbag gave her address as Lebanon, Tenn., and asked that her father, the Rev. W. J. Bruce, a Presbyterian minister, be notified "tactfully."

The note indicated a thwarted love affair was the cause of the double tragedy. She had told friends several years ago she and Shelton were engaged.

Dachshund Muff Is Novel Note

Paris (AP) "Dachshund" muffs are something new to talk about this fall. Schiaparelli launched them in her new collection in very narrow designs two feet long definitely recalling the shape of the canine for which they are named. The mannequins carried them crinkled, so that they looked little more than a foot long. Some were of black astrakhan, others of quinted black cire silk to harmonize with afternoon costumes.

In the Nevada desert, near Las Vegas, alfalfa was found to grow 12 inches in 26 days.

THEATRES

Singing more songs than he has in any other motion picture, Bing Crosby comes today and Monday to the Rialto Theatre in his brand new film, "We're Not Dressing."

Second Feature

Frank Buck, the dean of wild animal collecters, continues bringing them back alive in "Wild Cargo," the camera record of his recent adventures in filling orders for rare animals. It is showing as a second feature.

Buck's newest exploits plunge him into the jungles of Java, Sumatra, Ceylon, India and Malaya. As the film depicts, he has his big moments in capturing alive tapirs, rhinoceros, monkeys, maneating tigers.

Buck's "Wild Cargo" is said to embrace almost the whole glossary of zoology, and run the gamut of thrills.

I just throw 'em in—that's all. Sometimes the ball gets hit, sometimes it doesn't. Most times, if I throw 'em fast enough, they don't get hit.—Schoolboy Rowe, Detroit Tigers, pitcher

SCHOOL BELLS RING TUESDAY

Both Public and Parochial Units Reopening for Year

School bells will ring again on Tuesday when the public and parochial schools of the city resume classes.

At the parochial school the day will be given over to enrollment and registration of pupils and to purchase of books and supplies.

Veneers Still In Lead As Play Goes Into Final Week

The Veneers continued the hot pace they have set in the second half and practically assured themselves at least a tie and possibly first place in the last half season. The Demos repose in second place, but have two games to make up.

The coming week will see the close of the local season and it now looks likely that there will be a playoff for city honors, between Empsons, winners of the first half and very likely the Veneers.

League standings:

	W.	L.	PCT.
Veneers	6	2	.750
Demos	4	2	.667
Marbles	5	3	.625
Empsons	5	3	.625
Buckeyes	3	5	.375
Scotts	0	8	.000

WEEK'S SCHEDULE

Monday
Game postponed.
Tuesday
Marbles and Veneers.
Wednesday
Buckeyes and Demos.
Thursday—
Empsons and Scotts.

LEADING BATTERS

H. Bovin of the Demos is leading the batsmen in the league with a mark of .442 in 42 trips to the plate. H. Kircher of Empsons is second with .415; M. Kircher of the Demos has .389; Kernz of Marbles .376; Upton of the Veneers .371, and Cannon of Empsons .369.

Party for Helen

Friday night Miss Helen Coon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coon, was the guest of honor at a surprise party held at the home of Miss Mary Jane LaPine, 723 Michigan avenue. There were sixteen guests present. An enjoyable evening was spent and at its conclusion a dainty luncheon was served.

Miss Coon left yesterday for Big Rapids to attend Ferris Institute.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Tuxworth and two children, who have been spending the past week in Chicago and points in lower Michigan, are arriving today for a visit at the home of Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Colenso, enroute to their home in Sault Ste. Marie. Mrs. Tuxworth is Mrs. Colenso's sister.

Jack Mingay Home On Month Furlough

Jack Mingay, midshipman at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, arrived yesterday morning in Gladstone to spend a month's furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Mingay, 1310 Wisconsin avenue.

Mingay, now a third classman, shortly before coming to Gladstone, completed a summer cruise that took him to European waters and countries. The ships returned to the United States late in August, docking at Annapolis on the 23rd.

Labor Day Will Be Quiet In Gladstone

Although flags are flying for the occasion, Labor Day will be a quiet one in Gladstone, no community observance having been planned for the occasion.

However, there will be two celebrations in the county at which many Gladstone peoples will be present. One is a two day fete at the Dutch Mill at Rapid River Falls while the other is a boat regatta at Escanaba on Sunday afternoon. A number of local boats will participate.

DUCK STAMPS NOW ON SALE

The new duck stamps, which all hunters of migratory birds must have this fall in addition to the state game hunting license, have been received at the local postoffice and are now on sale, it was announced yesterday by Postmaster Frank A. Miller.

Proceeds of the stamp will be used to purchase suitable breeding, feeding and resting grounds in a movement aimed at the restoration of migratory waterfowl. Sale of stamps is the result of federal legislation following a noticeable decrease in the number of ducks and geese during recent years.

Efforts were first made to place a tax on shotgun shells, but public opinion blocked the move made about 3 years ago. The purpose of the proposed shell tax was approximately the same as that of the migratory bird hunting stamp law now enacted.

The federal stamps cost one dollar and in no way exempt a person from the state licensing law or state game provisions.

Convictions upon violation of the stamp law can result in a maximum penalty of $500 fine being imposed or a sentence of not to exceed six months in prison, or both fine and imprisonment.

Rialto Theatre to Close On Tuesday For Redecorating

On Tuesday, Sept. 4, the Rialto Theatre will close for ten days while the local theatre undergos a complete renovating, it has been announced by John Vogt, manager.

The theatre will be completely refinished and redecorated inside, new type lights will be installed with which novel lighting effects may be produced and the house will be entirely reseated with new and more comfortable seats.

Materials have already arrived and workmen and the directors in charge of the project will take over the house on Tuesday morning. It is planned to reopen on Wednesday, Sept. 12.

Pretty Girl Kills President Of Bank, Then Shoots Self

Morristown, Tenn., Aug. 31 (AP)—A young woman of 29, described as a "very pretty girl" and identified as a minister's daughter, walked into the Hamblen National Bank today, fatally wounded the president, Jesse C. Shelton, 35, and then shot herself to death in his private office.

Shelton, who was unmarried, died within less than an hour, refusing to name his assailant.

The dashing brunette had registered at the Kingmeyer hotel here Monday as Miss Mary Sam Bruce of Nashville, but a note in her handbag gave her address as Lebanon, Tenn., and asked that her father, the Rev. W. J. Bruce, a Presbyterian minister, be notified "tactfully."

The note indicated a thwarted love affair was the cause of the double tragedy. She had told friends several years ago she and Shelton were engaged.

Dachshund Muff Is Novel Note

Paris (AP)—"Dachshund" muffs are something new to talk about this fall. Schiaparelli launched them in her new collection in very narrow designs two feet long definitely recalling the shape of the canine for which they are named. The mannequins carried them crinkled, so that they looked little more than a foot long. Some were of black astrakhan, others of quinted black cire silk to harmonize with afternoon costumes.

In the Nevada desert, near Las Vegas, alfalfa was found to grow 42 inches in 26 days.

Mrs. A. D. Harris returned home Friday following a visit in Traverse City, Mich., with her sister, Mrs. Charles Wahl.

THEATRES

Singing more songs than he has in any other motion picture, Bing Crosby comes today and Monday to the Rialto Theatre in his brand new film, "We're Not Dressing."

Second Feature

Frank Buck, the dean of wild animal collecters, continues bringing them back alive in "Wild Cargo," the camera record of his recent adventures in filling orders for rare animals. It is showing as a second feature.

Buck's newest exploits plunge him into the jungles of Java, Sumatra, Ceylon, India and Malaya. As the film depicts, he has his big moments in capturing alive tapirs, rhinoceros, monkeys, maneating tigers.

Buck's "Wild Cargo" is said to embrace almost the whole glossary of zoology, and run the gamut of thrills.

I just throw 'em in—that's all. Sometimes the ball gets hit, sometimes it doesn't. Most times, if I throw 'em fast enough, they don't get hit.—Schoolboy Rowe, Detroit Tigers, pitcher

SCHOOL BELLS RING TUESDAY

Both Public and Parochial Units Reopening for Year

School bells will ring again on Tuesday when the public and parochial schools of the city resume classes.

At the parochial school the day will be given over to enrollment and registration of pupils and to purchase of books and supplies.

Veneers Still In Lead As Play Goes Into Final Week

The Veneers continued the hot pace they have set in the second half and practically assured themselves at least a tie and possibly first place in the last half season. The Demos repose in second place, but have two games to make up.

The coming week will see the close of the local season and it now looks likely that there will be a playoff for city honors, between Empsons, winners of the first half and very likely the Veneers.

League standings:

	W.	L.	PCT.
Veneers	6	2	.750
Demos	4	2	.667
Marbles	5	3	.625
Empsons	5	3	.625
Buckeyes	3	5	.375
Scotts	0	8	.000

Monday—
Game postponed.
Tuesday—
Marbles and Veneers.
Wednesday—
Buckeyes and Demos.
Thursday—
Empsons and Scotts.

LEADING BATTERS

H. Bovin of the Demos is leading the batsmen in the league with a mark of .442 in 42 trips to the plate. H. Kircher of Empsons is second with .415; M. Kircher of the Demos has .389; Kernz of Marbles .376; Upton of the Veneers .371, and Cannon of Empsons .369.

MR. MAN, you may know more about the intricacies of the stock exchange, more of high finance, more of the whys and wherefores of politics, more of this and that---

BUT, when it comes to shopping, your wife has probably got you beat six ways to the jack-pot.

Now don't let your male egoism get the better of you and just say, "The bl——k she has,"—think about it. After all, women have made it their business to be good, economical shoppers. They have devoted thought and effort to the business "you haven't had time for."

Go to your wife and ask her how she handles this shopping proposition. She'll tell you, "Well, the first thing, and it's the most important, too, is to read the ads in the Daily Press."

And then she'll be glad to demonstrate for your benefit exactly how reading the ads led to economies and advantages in the purchase of everything from that club steak you liked so well last night to the new dress you've just been admiring.

A Proclamation

Labor Day, Monday, September 3, will be observed throughout the nation. We owe a great debt to labor and on Monday we have an opportunity to show our appreciation.

Therefore, I, Frank M. Gierke, Sr., by virtue of the authority vested in me as mayor of the city of Manistique, on that day do hereby urge cessation of business and industry as far as possible, that people rest from their labors and in homes to the end that Manistique may join in a fitting tribute to labor.

Signed:
Frank M. Gierke, Sr, Mayor.

Two Grid Teams to Work Out Monday

Members of the Manistique high school football team who have not received uniforms are requested by Coach Oscar Wassberg to report to the gym on Monday afternoon at two o'clock. All players are requested to bring with them all equipment which the school does not furnish. There will be practice at the county fairgrounds the same afternoon and all candidates for the team are asked to turn out.

The Legion football team will hold a workout on the same afternoon at two o'clock at the court house grounds. Manager Harvey Quick is anxious that all candidates be present.

Harry Durno Kills Coyote Wednesday

A large coyote was killed on Wednesday afternoon by Harry Durno, of this city, near the Lake Michigan shore and not far from the farm of "Bill" Durno, near Marblehead. Indications point to a number of coyotes in this vicinity, according to Mr. Durno. A number of the turkeys on the Durno farm have been killed recently, presumably by coyotes.

No Mail Delivery On Next Monday

There will be no mail delivery, either city or rural, on Monday, Labor Day. The lobby of the postoffice will be open as on Sundays, until 1 p. m., according to Postmaster A. O. Drevdahl. There will be no window service, however.

Plan Job Program For Needy Students

Word has been received by the State Emergency Welfare Relief Commission and sent to William Marin, county administrator, to the effect that a new student job program will be innaugurated on September 1 and remain in effect until the end of the academic year in 1935.

The new program provides that students shall be allowed to earn a maximum of $20 per calendar month, and that the allottment of funds to each college shall be made on the basis of $15 per month for each of 12 per cent of full time students enrolled. Need, character and ability to do college work are the requirements for eligibility for aid under the new program.

It is clearly stipulated in the federal bulletin that student betterment is the primary aim of the activity. Assistance to the colleges is purely incidental. The work assigned the students is restricted to socially desirable undertakings.

Further limitations are that the division of jobs between the sexes must be equal and that at least 50 per cent of the funds allotted each institution must be paid to student who were not regularly enrolled in any college or university during January, 1934.

A Proclamation

Labor Day, Monday, September 3, will be observed throughout the nation. We owe a great debt to labor and on Monday we have an opportunity to show our appreciation.

Therefore, I, Frank M. Gierke, Sr., by virtue of the authority vested in me as mayor of the city of Manistique, on that day do hereby urge cessation of business and industry as far as possible, that people rest from their labors and in homes to the end that Manistique may join in a fitting tribute to labor.

Signed:

Frank M. Gierke, Sr, Mayor.

Two Grid Teams to Work Out Monday

Members of the Manistique high school football team who have not received uniforms are requested by Coach Oscar Wassberg to report to the gym on Monday afternoon at two o'clock. All players are requested to bring with them all equipment which the school does not furnish. There will be practice at the county fairgrounds the same afternoon and all candidates for the team are asked to turn out.

The Legion football team will hold a workout on the same afternoon at two o'clock at the court house grounds. Manager Harvey Quick is anxious that all candidates be present.

Harry Durno Kills Coyote Wednesday

A large coyote was killed on Wednesday afternoon by Harry Durno, of this city, near the Lake Michigan shore and not far from the farm of "Bill" Durno, near Marblehead. Indications point to a number of coyotes in this vicinity, according to Mr. Durno. A number of the turkeys on the Durno farm have been killed recently, presumably by coyotes.

Lakeside Lodge Has Change In Meetings

For the first time in over thirty years Lakeside Lodge No. 371, F. and A. M., will change its regular meeting night. Hereafter whenever the regular meeting comes on a holiday it will be postponed until the following Monday. The September meeting will be held Monday, September 10.

Add a few drops of vinegar to the water when washing greasy dishes and the grease will come off easily.

SOCIAL

Birthday Party

Complimentary to Miss Louise Bolitho, who is leaving soon to enter Rockford college, Mrs. V. F. Lang entertained several girls who are returning or entering college this fall at a delightful afternoon bridge party, Friday.

Miss Catherine Herbert received high honors in the contests, and Miss Edith Brown was low. Miss Bolitho was presented with a guest prize.

Refreshments were served from one large table, with covers laid for twelve. The appointments were prettily carried out in the Rockford college colors, purple and white.

Linen Shower

Miss Marjorie Morrison, who on September 15, will become the bride of William Marin, was the guest of honor at a linen shower given by Miss Helen McLaughlin at the latter's home Friday evening.

Two tables of bridge were formed by the guests and prizes were awarded to Miss Alice Girvin, first, and Miss Lucille Waters, second. The color scheme for the table decorations was pink and white and the center piece was prettily formed with sweet peas and tapers.

Luncheon

Mrs. W. S. Crowe was hostess at Sunset Beach tea room Friday in honor of Mrs. May Homer, of Assuit, Egypt, and Mrs. Louis Yalomstein, of White Plains, New York.

Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock and was followed by a pleasant afternoon of bridge. Mrs. Paul Baldwin received the honors at bridge.

Other out of town guests at the party were Mrs. Gertrude Roos Furey, of New York City, and Mrs. Frederick Carr, of Detroit.

No Mail Delivery On Next Monday

There will be no mail delivery, either city or rural, on Monday, Labor Day. The lobby of the post-office will be open as on Sundays, until 1 p. m., according to Postmaster A. O. Drevdahl. There will be no window service, however.

Plan Job Program For Needy Students

Word has been received by the State Emergency Welfare Relief Commission and sent to William Marin, county administrator, to the effect that a new student job program will be inaugurated on September 1 and remain in effect until the end of the academic year in 1935.

The new program provides that students shall be allowed to earn a maximum of $20 per calendar month, and that the allotment of funds to each college shall be made on the basis of $15 per month for each of 12 per cent of full time students enrolled. Need, character and ability to do college work are the requirements for eligibility for aid under the new program.

It is clearly stipulated in the federal bulletin that student betterment is the primary aim of the activity. Assistance to the colleges is purely incidental. The work assigned to the students is restricted to socially desirable undertakings.

Further limitations are that this division of jobs between the sexes must be equal and that at least 50 per cent of the funds allotted each institution must be paid to students who were not regularly enrolled in any college or university during January, 1934.

BY FREDERICK GARDNER
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The stock market was all but deserted today, and trading fell to the smallest volume for a Saturday in 16 years.

Price changes were narrow and mostly unimportant. Business was largely in the nature of lightening both long and short accounts before the holiday week-end. Sales were only 113,060 shares, the smallest since August 3, 1918, when only 68,700 shares were traded.

The Standard Statistics Co. price index of 90 representative shares receded 0.1 of one point to 72.5. Bonds were quiet and fairly steady. Wheat at Chicago closed unchanged to 5-8 of a cent a bushel higher, and corn 1-8 to 3-8 higher. The New York Cotton market was closed for the week-end.

Strike Casts Shadow

Preparations for a general strike in the textile industry dominated the news, and cast fresh shadows of doubt and uncertainty over the financial community. If the strike, which seemed inevitable, were of fairly short duration, it was felt that it would not seriously interfere with what autumn business recovery was in prospect, for inventories on hand are still sufficient to last some weeks.

But a labor dispute of such magnitude was decidedly sobering in its effect upon the financial community, and hopes that it would not spread, were widely expressed.

Business failed to give much clue to the post Labor-Day prospects, although that holiday is usually regarded as the turning point from vacation dullness to autumn revival. Nevertheless, that revival is often not particularly distinct until mid-September. The best augury of an autumn pickup thus far has been the vigor of retail trade. Dun & Bradstreet said the past week was the best of the summer.

Automobile output this week, according to Cram's estimate, has fallen to 32,506 units, off 19,845 from the previous week, and 14,341 under the like week of last year.

In foreign exchange dealings, the pound sterling slipped off 3/4 of a cent to its recent low of $4.98½, but there were reports that the British equalization fund was again offering support.

New York, Sept. 1—Preliminary estimates place the number of passengers carried by airlines during the month of July at slightly more than 46,000. Miles totaled 4,$51,700.

Production of lumber during the week ended August 25 totaled 194,566,000 feet and shipments amounted to 203,085,000 feet compared with production of 212,415,000 feet and shipments of 215,977,000 feet in the preceding week.

Directors of the National Standard Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, payable September 29 to stock on record September 19.

Curb Market Has Very Dull Session

BY BERNARD S. O'HARA
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The curb market was a series of meaningless fluctuations today. Activity was around record low levels and many leading shares sold only once or twice if at all. Final prices were slightly mixed.

Swift International again moved into new high territory in fairly active dealings. Aluminum Company of America, Electric Bond & Share, Swift & Co., Hiram Walker and Pioneer Gold ended steady.

Transfers approximated 82,000 shares compared with 83,000 the previous Saturday.

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The bond market merely went through the motions of trading in today's brief session and prices, as a whole, failed to move in any direction.

The proceedings were the dullest since August 18, transfers totalling only $4,051,000, par value. The Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 84.1. On the week this average showed a decline of four-tenths of a point.

U. S. government securities steadied following Secretary Morgenthau's overnight announcement that no inflationary gesture would be made in the September-October financing involving more than $1,700,000,000. Exchange offerings for both the certificates, maturing September 15, and the Liberty fourth 4¼s, called for October 15, will be made in the usual way, the secretary said.

In view of the conferences being held between President Roosevelt and treasury experts, some banking quarters voiced the opinion that the administration might attempt a large long-term bond issue. This was doubted, however, in other circles which believed short-term paper would continue to be used.

The turnover in the government listed section amounted to only about $1,900,000.

Most of the rails were a bit easier. Canadian Pacific debentures 5s dropped 2 3-8 points to 74 5-8.

The foreign department was also listless and irregular.

Groesbeck Insists Sales Levy Could Exempt Clothing

Caro, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP) Alex J. Groesbeck, speaking here Friday night in his campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, took issue with Governor William A. Comstock on the latter's contention that food and clothing could not have been excluded from the state sales tax without damaging the constitutionality of the act.

"The supreme court of this state," said Groesbeck, "has held a sales tax on gasoline is constitutional, and if they can tax sales on gas they can tax sales on any commodity and by the same token omit a tax on the sales of a commodity they wish to exempt."

The former governor also criticized the state administration for its policy on the upkeep of state charitable and educational institutions, and pointed out that 1,000 feeble minded patients are on the list waiting for admission to the institution at Lapeer.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Sept. 1 Pre-holiday inertia held trading in the grain market to a minimum today and prices clung to a narrow range, swinging to the day's peak just before the close.

Wheat finished 1-8 cent lower to 51 higher as a result of late buying and corn was unchanged to 3-8 cent up while other grains closed irregularly steady.

Inasmuch as the market will not be in session Monday, a big portion of the trade consisted of shifting over hedges from September to December contracts with some cash houses buying the current month outright. Deliveries on September options totaled 2,861,000 bushels.

Corn rallied late following announcement of a bullish crop estimate. Part of this strength was reflected in wheat but the volume did not swell, traders showing a hesitancy.

September wheat deliveries reacted from early lows almost a cent at the close. September new wheat finished at $1.02½ to $1.02 5-8, December new at $1.03½ to $1.03 5-8, and May at $1.04 7-8 to $1.05. The corn trade was confused at the start because of inauguration of trading in new-style contracts necessitated by new grading rules which went into effect today. December old tumbled to 79¼ early but gained a cent, closing at 80 to 80 1-8 cents.

A crop report by E. H. Miller, prominent crop expert, forecast the United States 1934 corn crop at 1,396,000,000 bushels compared with the government forecast of 1,607,000,000 a month ago and last year's harvest of 2,344,000,000. This estimate was 63,000,000 below the average of yesterday's forecasts.

Provisions were unevenly steady. Oats were 1-8 lower to 1-8 higher, rye was ¼ down to ¼ up and barley was unchanged to ¼ lower.

Dunce caps were named after a learned Scotch clergyman, Duns Scotus, who lived in the 13th century.

NEW FINANCING PROGRAM LAID

Announcement of Regular Quarterly Operation To Be September 10

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP)—President Roosevelt and treasury heads today decided upon the government's regular quarterly refinancing operation coming due September 15 and also canvassed the extent of participation by banks in the recovery effort with loans.

The only word from the conference between the president, Secretary Morgenthau and financial experts was the statement that announcement would be made September 10 of the refinancing program and its extent.

Takes Car Ride

Observing closely the trend of national affairs from his summer White House, Mr. Roosevelt offered no comment on the textile strike and there was no intimation of his immediate intercession. No request for such has been received, it was stated.

Late today the president left his study to take advantage of the favorable weather. He drove his own car about the farm and neighborhood for an hour and a half.

Secretary Morgenthau and his chief lieutenants spent the afternoon with Mr. Roosevelt at the summer White House. Tonight Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator and Rexford Guy Tugwell, under secretary of agriculture, arrived with their wives to be week-end guests.

There was every indication that the administration is dissatisfied with the attitude of a vast majority of banks toward loans, particularly under the recent federal insurance plans for loans to industry and home builders.

There have been signs that some in high quarters feel the banks have been keeping too liquid at the expense of retarding the recovery effort.

A goldfield, 100 miles in circumference, has been found in the Transvaal.

Whitedale & Gulliver

Rev. Hogg and family, Mr. and Mrs. Summers and two sons, with other members of their camping party from Geneseo, Ill., left last Saturday for their homes after two weeks' recreation at the picnic grounds in Old Deerfield.

Elder J. J. Ledsworth of Port Huron, Mich., missionary for the northern Michigan district of the L. D. S. church will arrive Sunday, Sept. 9 to begin a series of meetings in the L. D. S. hall at Whitedale. The first meeting will be the same evening, Sept. 9 at 8 p. m. A cordial invitation is given the public to attend these services.

Mrs. Jack Rasmussen of Gladstone, Mich., visited several days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Brearley in the last week.

Mrs. William Bowman, daughter Joyce, and Mrs. Charles Baker called on friends in Manistique Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Brearley visited Mr. Caffey at the Shaw hospital in Manistique Thursday. Mr. Caffey's condition is reported favorable after his serious accident ten days ago, when his right leg was broken just below the knee and also two small bones in the wrist of the left arm.

Township Road Commissioner John Anderson, has a crew of men working on the Alexis Nelson road just north of Whitedale. They are making the road wider and blasting out a stone cut so that the snow plough may go through in safety.

The weather in the past week has not been very favorable for harvesting, showers every other day. Hard frosts of the week have blackened gardens in many places, while in spots the corn has escaped much damage. Threshing has started on some of the farms.

A crowd filled the L. D. S. hall last Sunday evening to witness the confirmation of two new members of the church who had previously been baptized one Sunday afternoon the other a few days before, two little children were also blessed at the same meeting.

Ted Caffey of Sault Ste. Marie, visited at the Alex Walker home during the week, also his father at the Shaw hospital, Manistique.

Visitors at the J. J. Creeden home last week, were the Misses Rosalie and Monica Collins and Ruth Barton all of Manistique.

BY FREDERICK GARDNER
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The stock market was all but deserted today, and trading fell to the smallest volume for a Saturday in 16 years.

Price changes were narrow and mostly unimportant. Business was largely in the nature of lightening both long and short accounts before the holiday week-end. Sales were only 113,060 shares, the smallest since August 3, 1918, when only 68,700 shares were traded.

The Standard Statistics Co. price index of 90 representative shares receded 0.1 of one point to 72.5. Bonds were quiet and fairly steady. Wheat at Chicago closed unchanged to 5-8 of a cent a bushel higher, and corn 1-8 to 3-8 higher. The New York Cotton market was closed for the week-end.

Strike Casts Shadow

Preparations for a general strike in the textile industry dominated the news, and cast fresh shadows of doubt and uncertainty over the financial community. If the strike, which seemed inevitable, were of fairly short duration, it was felt that it would not seriously interfere with what autumn business recovery was in prospect, for inventories on hand are still sufficient to last some weeks.

But a labor dispute of such magnitude was decidedly sobering in its effect upon the financial community, and hopes that it would not spread, were widely expressed.

Business failed to give much clue to the post Labor-Day prospects, although that holiday is usually regarded as the turning point from vacation dullness to autumn revival. Nevertheless, that revival is often not particularly distinct until mid-September. The best augury of an autumn pickup thus far has been the vigor of retail trade. Dun & Bradstreet said the past week was the best of the summer.

Automobile output this week, according to Cram's estimate, has fallen to 32,506 units, off 19,845 from the previous week, and 14,341 under the like week of last year.

In foreign exchange dealings, the pound sterling slipped off ¾ of a cent to its recent low of $4.98½, but there were reports that the British equalization fund was again offering support.

New York, Sept. 1—Preliminary estimates place the number of passengers carried by airlines during the month of July at slightly more than 46,000. Miles totaled 4,$51,700.

Production of lumber during the week ended August 25 totaled 194,566,000 feet and shipments amounted to 203,085,000 feet compared with production of 212,445,000 feet and shipments of 215,977,000 feet in the preceding week.

Directors of the National Standard Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, payable September 29 to stock on record September 19.

Curb Market Has Very Dull Session

BY BERNARD S. O'HARA
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The curb market was a series of meaningless fluctuations today. Activity was around record low levels and many leading shares sold only once or twice if at all. Final prices were slightly mixed.

Swift International again moved into new high territory in fairly active dealings. Aluminum Company of America, Electric Bond & Share, Swift & Co., Hiram Walker and Pioneer Gold ended steady.

Transfers approximated 52,000 shares compared with 83,000 the previous Saturday.

BY VICTOR EUBANK
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The bond market merely went through the motions of trading in today's brief session and prices, as a whole, failed to move in any direction.

The proceedings were the dullest since August 18, transfers totalling only $4,051,000, par value. The Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 84.1. On the week this average showed a decline of four-tenths of a point.

U. S. government securities steadied following Secretary Morgenthau's overnight announcement that no inflationary gesture would be made in the September-October financing involving more than $1,700,000,000. Exchange offerings for both the certificates, maturing September 15, and the Liberty fourth 4¼s, called for October 15, will be made in the usual way, the secretary said.

In view of the conferences being held between President Roosevelt and treasury experts, some banking quarters voiced the opinion that the administration might attempt a large long-term bond issue. This was doubted, however, in other circles which believed short-term paper would continue to be used.

The turnover in the government listed section amounted to only about $1,900,000.

Most of the rails were a bit easier. Canadian Pacific debentures 5s dropped 2 3-8 points to 74 5-8.

The foreign department was also listless and irregular.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 1—Foreign exchange irregular. Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain demand, 4.98½, cables, 4.98½; 60-day bills, 4.97½; France demand, 6.69½, cables, 6.69½; Italy demand, 8.70, cables, 8.70.

Groesbeck Insists Sales Levy Could Exempt Clothing

Caro, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP)—Alex J. Groesbeck, speaking here Friday night in his campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, took issue with Governor William A. Comstock on the latter's contention that food and clothing could not have been excluded from the state sales tax without damaging the constitutionality of the act.

"The supreme court of this state," said Groesbeck, "has held a sales tax on gasoline is constitutional, and if they can tax sales on gas they can tax sales on any commodity and by the same token omit a tax on the sales of a commodity they wish to exempt."

The former governor also criticized the state administration for its policy on the upkeep of state charitable and educational institutions, and pointed out that 4,000 feeble minded patients are on the list waiting for admission to the institution at Lapeer.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Sept. 1—Pre-holiday inertia held trading in the grain market to a minimum today and prices clung to a narrow range, swinging to the day's peak just before the close.

Wheat finished 1-8 cent lower to 51 higher as a result of late buying and corn was unchanged to 3-8 cent up while other grains closed irregularly steady.

Inasmuch as the market will not be in session Monday, a big portion of the trade consisted of shifting over hedges from September to December contracts with some cash houses buying the current month outright. Deliveries on September options totaled 2,861,000 bushels.

Corn rallied late following announcement of a bullish crop estimate. Part of this strength was reflected in wheat but the volume did not swell, traders showing a hesitancy.

September wheat deliveries reacted from early lows almost a cent at the close. September new wheat finished at $1.02½ to $1.02 5-8, December new at $1.03½ to $1.03 5-8, and May at $1.04 7-8 to $1.05. The corn trade was confused at the start because of inauguration of trading in new-style contracts necessitated by new grading rules which went into effect today. December old tumbled to 79¼ early but gained a cent, closing at 80 to 80 1-8 cents.

A crop report by E. H. Miller, prominent crop expert, forecast the United States 1934 corn crop at 1,396,000,000 bushels compared with the government forecast of 1,607,000,000 a month ago and last year's harvest of 2,344,000,000. This estimate was 63,000,000 below the average of yesterday's forecasts.

Provisions were unevenly steady. Oats were 1-8 lower to 1-8 higher, rye was ¼ down to ¼ up and barley was unchanged to ¼ lower.

Dunce caps were named after a learned Scotch clergyman, Duns Scotous, who lived in the 13th century.

Scotland may raise its school-leaving age from 14 to 15 years.

Announcement of Regular Quarterly Operation To Be September 10

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP)—President Roosevelt and treasury heads today decided upon the government's regular quarterly refinancing operation coming due September 15 and also canvassed the extent of participation by banks in the recovery effort with loans.

The only word from the conference between the president, Secretary Morgenthau and financial experts was the statement that announcement would be made September 10 of the refinancing program and its extent.

Takes Car Ride

Observing closely the trend of national affairs from his summer White House, Mr. Roosevelt offered no comment on the textile strike and there was no intimation of his immediate intercession. No request for such has been received, it was stated.

Late today the president left his study to take advantage of the favorable weather. He drove his own car about the farm and neighborhood for an hour and a half.

Secretary Morgenthau and his chief lieutenants spent the afternoon with Mr. Roosevelt at the summer White House. Tonight Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator and Rexford Guy Tugwell, under secretary of agriculture, arrived with their wives to be week-end guests.

There was every indication that the administration is dissatisfied with the attitude of a vast majority of banks toward loans, particularly under the recent federal insurance plans for loans to industry and home builders.

There have been signs that some in high quarters feel the banks have been keeping too liquid at the expense of retarding the recovery effort.

A goldfield, 100 miles in circumference, has been found in the Transvaal.

Whitedale & Gulliver

Mr. and Mrs. Grey and daughter, Virginia of Toledo, Ohio, returned Monday to their home after a three weeks' vacation, occupying a Brearley cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Keenan of Detroit, Mich., were visitors last week at the home of Mrs. Keenan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Reid, Sr. They returned to their home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bentley and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baker, Jr., of Menominee, Mich., spent the week-end with Mr. Baker's mother, Mrs. Charles Baker, Sr.

Mrs. John Rodgers, Sr., left Monday for Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and St. Joseph Island, where she will visit her daughter, Ethel (Mrs. Robert Hudson) her mother and other relatives for some time.

M. Brearley and Peter Nelson attended the meeting of the Rock Farmers' Mutual Insurance Co. at Rock, Mich., Monday.

Sylvester Leny and family of Gulliver visited relatives in Garden last Sunday.

Elder J. J. Ledsworth of Port Huron, Mich., missionary for the northern Michigan district of the L. D. S. church will arrive Sunday, Sept. 9 to begin a series of meetings in the L. D. S. hall at Whitedale. The first meeting will be the same evening, Sept. 9 at 8 p. m. A cordial invitation is given the public to attend these services.

Mrs. Jack Rasmussen of Gladstone, Mich., visited several days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Brearley in the last week.

CARDS REGAIN SECOND PLACE

7-1 Victory Over Cubs Sends Bruins to Third Spot

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals broke the second place tie with the Cubs today by winning the second game of the series, 7 to 1.

Bill Hallahan shut out the Chicagoans until the ninth, while the Cardinals took advantage of an error by Augie Galan with the bases filled and two out in the second inning to pile up four unearned runs. Jimmy Collins and Bill Delancey fattened Hallahan's working margin with homers off Bill Lee, Cub starter, in the third.

Hallahan allowed six hits, while the Cards got fifteen off Lee and his successors, Charley Root and Roy Joiner.

The victory left the Cardinals five and a half games behind the Giants, while it sent the Cubs down into third place six and a half games in arrears.

Rainbow Takes Test Spin, Nerves Relax

Newport, R. I., Sept. 1 (AP) With Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow named to meet Endeavour, Tom Sopwith's British challenger, peace descended on Newport's harbor today. Tense nerves relaxed and tired crews rested. Long deferred shore leave was in order and it was payday on the cup boats.

Yankee of Boston, skipped by Charles Francis Adams, which just missed the defense nomination, swung at her mooring in Brenton's cove. She will leave for a leisurely voyage home Monday.

Vanderbilt had Rainbow out for a spin today, trying out some canvas borrowed from Frederick Prince's Weetamoe, which was eliminated from cup competition early in the week.

Endeavour's crew is very confident of victory. Her professional sailing master, Captain D. H. Williams, is ready to bet his nautical cap against a straw hat that the old mug goes back to England on the challenger. He has declined to withdraw the bet even after being informed straw hats are no longer good form after Sept. 15, the date of the race.

Giants Win from Dodgers Again, 4-3

Brooklyn, Sept. 1, (AP)—The Giants continued their parade toward the pennant today but it was a rather straggling march that led them to their second straight victory over the Dodgers, 4 to 3.

Schumacher went the route to get his 20th victory of the season against six defeats, allowing two hits in the first seven innings.

The first three Giant runs resulted from homers. Johnny Vergez drove his seventh of the season into the left field stands to start the third inning and Joe Moore clouted his eleventh after Schumacher had doubled in the fifth.

Trailing 4-0 in the eighth the Dodgers began to solve Schumacher's delivery, but with the tying run on second in the ninth, Schumacher induced Stripp to fly out.

BIG SIX STANDINGS

(By The Associated Press)

Charley Gehringer fattened his batting average yesterday while the other leaders were having a bad day and moved into third place in the Big Six as a result. Gehringer hit four times in six trips to the plate, adding four points to his average. His American League rivals, Lou Gehrig and Heinie Manush, each hit once in four tries, losing one point apiece, while Met Ott and Bill Terry of the Giants each lost two points. Terry didn't get a hit in three tries while Ott hit one out of five. Paul Waner, the leader, was idle. The standing:

ROSS TO FACE TOUGH BATTLE

Experts Figure Jimmy McLarnin Will Be Hard Opponent

New York, Sept. 1, (AP)—The impression was growing in fistic circles tonight that Barney Ross is in for the fight of his life in defending his welterweight title against slugging Jimmy McLarnin, the man from whom he won it, in Madison Square Garden bowl Thursday night.

The baby-faced Celt from the coast has never looked better than he has the last few days in training at his Orangeburg, N. J., camp.

McLarnin has never failed to turn the tables on any man who ever licked him; he will have from six to nine pounds advantage in weight and he will fight Ross in a ring where no champion yet has successfully defended his title.

Ross in Good Shape

Two or three days ago, Ross was an overwhelming favorite but tonight most of the big players were offering no better than 5 to 6 and take your choice. It was believed the fight would be even money at the ringside.

Both boxers put in a vigorous day of training, Jimmy at Orangeburg and the champion at his Catskill Mountain retreat near Ferndale, N. Y.

Ross' chief unofficial adviser, former Champion Benny Leonard, said the Chicago youngster was a better fighter than when he won McLarnin's title last May to become the first boxer ever to hold both the welterweight and lightweight crowns at the same time.

Ross weighed 138 1-2 pounds after his workout which is approximately the weight he expects to carry into the ring. McLarnin has held his poundage steady around the limit of 147 pounds. In their last meeting he agreed to come in at 145 or less and took off weight so industriously he only tipped the scales at 152. He believes that weakened him.

Psychic Bid Wins Over Mighty Field In Hopeful Stakes

Handled by Mack Garner, who guided Cavalcade through the rich three-year old stakes, Psychic Bid breezed home to earn $24,250 for his owner, and pay his backers 4 to 1.

CLUB PAIRINGS ARE ANNOUNCED

Escanaba Golf Club Will Begin Tournament at Nine O'clock

Drawings for the club championship golf tournament which will start at nine o'clock this morning at the Escanaba golf club were made yesterday by Rowan Fitzharris, club professional. There will be two flights and in some cases first round byes were necessary. In case where second round opponents are already matched, these players will be permitted to play their second round matches at nine this morning.

Clarke Glavin, upper peninsula golf champion and club champion, will not compete for the club award this year so the championship tournament will not be an open and shut affair this year.

Katherine Stammers Wins Tennis Title

Rye, N. Y., Sept. 1. (AP) Katherine Stammers won the women's singles title of the eastern grass court tennis championships today, defeating Freda James, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, in the fourth all-English final in as many years.

Miss James, surprise conqueror of her compatriot Betty Nuthall, in the semi-finals yesterday put up a surprisingly strong battle against Miss Stammers but finally succumbed to the steady play of Britain' fourth-ranking player. Miss James is ranked No. 12 abroad.

Miss Stammers and Miss James returned to the courts after their singles tussle to annex the doubles, defeating Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian, and Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, Conn., 6-3, 6-3.

Donald Budge, red-haired Oakland youngster, and Gene Mako of Los Angeles, scored a decisive victory over John Diarmid, Fort Worth, and Jack Tidball, Oakland, Calif., in the men's doubles, 7-5, 8-6, 6-3. Mako and Budge had scored a surprise victory over the English stars, Fred Perry and F. H. D. Wilde to reach the finals.

The men's singles final between George Lott of Chicago and Frankie Parker of Spring Lake, N. J., will be played tomorrow.

The Port of London, England, does an annual overseas trade valued at more than $2,000,000,000.

Masonville To Play Rock and Garden

Rapid River, Sept. 1 (Special)—The Masonville baseball team will have plenty of trouble on their hands this week when they meet Rock and Garden, on Sunday and Labor Day afternoons. They will meet Rock on Sunday at Rock and Garden at Garden on Labor Day afternoon.

Two weeks ago, Masonville took the measure of the Spartans defeating them in a thrilling pitchers' duel between Wright and Rabideau, with Wright getting the better of the argument by allowing but five hits and striking out 16 men who opposed him. Last week Rock took a terrific beating from Perkins, a team which Masonville easily won from, and Wright setting them down with only three hits.

At Garden on Monday is expected the toughest of the two; this will be the saw-off game as each have defeated each other. About two months ago Garden won by a close score after rallying in the ninth inning to push across two runs.

Masonville will probably start Miller against the Spartans, and holding Wright for the Garden game. Last week Miller turned in a well pitched game against Cooks. Behind the plate will be LaPine. For Rock will be probably Rabideau and Klieber, and for Garden, Truckey and Chaffey.

Gar Wood, Jr., Wins Outboard Contest

Young Wood defeated Art Jacobs of Chicago, the only other entrant. Miss Ruth Deroo of Flint, withdrew because weather conditions made the water extremely choppy.

Rain marred the program of opening day events, but Sunday's program is expected to bring a record crowd to Port Huron and St. Clair for the 13 mile swimming marathon as well as the boat and short swim races.

Riverview To Play At Schaffer Today

The Riverview Eagles will play at Schaffer today. Trudell will take the mound for the Eagles against his old teammates and Oseen will hurl for Schaffer.

Football Team to Practice Today

The Escanaba city football team will practice this morning at 10 o'clock at the east end of Ludington street, near the lighthouse point.

YANKEES LOSE TO SENATORS

Babe Ruth's Home Run Is Only Score Made by New York

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—Wally Stewart, aided by the fine fielding and timely hitting of his teammates, pitched Washington to a 5 to 1 victory over the Yankees today.

The Yanks made ten hits off Stewart's delivery but Babe Ruth's 20th homer of the season was their only score. It was the Babe's first circuit swat since Aug. 11 and came in the first inning.

The Senators concentrated their attack on Jimmy Deshong in two innings, connecting for three hits and two runs in the fourth and driving him out with a three-run burst in the seventh.

A run behind after the Bab's circuit swat, Washington jumped ahead in the fourth when Cronin singled, moved to second on Bolton's infield out and tallied on Fred Schulte's double. Pete Susko brought Schulte home with a single.

Cronin Overruns Bag

There was no more scoring and only one Washington hit off Deshong until the seventh. Then the Senators broke loose with five more blows to finish the scoring job. Kerr started with a single. Stewart sacrificed and Bluege flied out. Johnny Stone belted a double to bring Kerr in.

Manush singled scoring Stone and Cronin followed with another single. When Ruth let the ball go through him, Manush, who had reached third on the hit, ran on home.

That was enough for Deshong and Russ Van Atta took his place. Bolton met the new pitcher with a base hit and Cronin crossed the plate. Saltzgaver, who failed to touch third for the Yanks yesterday, discovered that Cronin had made the same "boner" and got the ball from Hoag to put the Senator manager out.

All the way the Yanks kept rapping Walter Stewart rather freely without scoring.

In the semi-final stanza the bases were loaded on singles by pinch hitter Sam Byrd and by Crosetti and a walk to Ruth. But Gehrig fanned.

SEEDED TENNIS STARS ADVANCE

Perry Leads Group Into Second Round of U. S. Tourney

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP) The prefunctory procedure of the first round of the 53rd men's national singles tennis championship went along today without a hitch, with Fred Perry, the British holder of the title, barely getting a workout in his elimination of Carl H. Schweikhardt.

While most of the big guns were muffled by virtue of receiving first round byes, the black haired British titlist accounted for the former Columbia university star in straight sets, 6-0, 6-1, 6-3, and led four seeded domestic challengers George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago; Lester R. Stoefen of Los Angeles, Clifford Sutter of New York and Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., into the second round.

Lott Has Tough Time

They were the only members of a select group of 15 American and foreign seded players who saw action in the opening round.

The veteran Chicago Davis cup doubles player learned to his discomforture that "hot dogs" and beer don't mix before a match, and had to make some remarkable recoveries in the final set to pull out the match, 6-2, 10-8, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

Allison, the man figured to have the best chance of restoring the championship to this country, met a formidable antagonist in Gilbert Hunt of Washington, D. C., but won the match, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

The towering Stoefen, who was beaten in the semi-finals last year by Perry, squelched Lieut. James M. Parrin, Jr., of Edgewood, Md., 6-1, 6-1, 6-1, while Sutter had almost as little trouble disposing of Elmer J. Griffin, of New York, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

DETROIT TEAM EXTENDS LEAD

Bengals Put on Rally in Late Innings Again To Win Scrap

Cleveland, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Tigers came from behind again today, tying the score in the eighth inning, then hammered across two more runs in the eleventh to defeat the Indians 6 to 4 in the second game of their series.

It was Detroit's tenth extra-inning victory this season and increased the Tiger lead over the defeated New York Yankees to 5½ games.

The Tigers trailed from the third inning, when Earl Averill belted his 23rd home run with one aboard, until the eighth. Then Gerald Walker bounced a single off Pitcher Oral Hildebrand's leg, stole second and scored the tying run on Jo-Jo White's single.

In the eleventh Charley Gehringer opened with a single, Bill Rogell got to first and Gehringer to second when Moe Berg fumbled Rogell's tap in front of the plate and Hank Greenberg drew a pass to load the sacks and pave the way for Owen's winning clout. The Indians made a threat that was halted partly by a freak play in the same inning.

Freak Putout

Averill sent a long drive to center and White tried a one-hand catch. The ball bounced off his glove and Walker snatched it before it hit the ground to make the putout. Right after that Hal Trosky doubled, but the next two men went out.

Tommy Bridges went the full route for the Tigers, giving a run in the second to tie the score after Detroit tallied in the first, two more on Averill's homer and one in the sixth before Detroit started its serious scoring. Over the long route he allowed eight hits, gave no walks and struck out seven.

Three Cleveland pitchers were embarrassed by poor support as the Indians committed four errors, and Detroit got within striking distance when Berg dropped a throw to the plate for a double play and let Gehringer score.

Foxx's Home Run Beats Boston, 8-7

Philadelphia, Sept. 1 (AP) Jimmy Foxx's ninth inning home run with one on base gave the Athletics an 8 to 7 victory over the Boston Red Sox today.

The homer, the 39th of the season for Foxx, was hit off the pitching of his former teammate, Lefty Grove, who had relieved Jimmy Welsh.

CARDS REGAIN SECOND PLACE

7-1 Victory Over Cubs Sends Bruins to Third Spot

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals broke the second place tie with the Cubs today by winning the second game of the series, 7 to 1.

Bill Hallahan shut out the Chicagoans until the ninth, while the Cardinals took advantage of an error by Augie Galan with the bases filled and two out in the second inning to pile up four unearned runs. Jimmy Collins and Bill Delancey fattened Hallahan's working margin with homers off Bill Lee, Cub starter, in the third.

Hallahan allowed six hits, while the Cards got fifteen off Lee and his successors, Charley Root and Roy Joiner.

The victory left the Cardinals five and a half games behind the Giants, while it sent the Cubs down into third place six and a half games in arrears.

Rainbow Takes Test Spin, Nerves Relax

Newport, R. I., Sept. 1 (AP)—With Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow named to meet Endeavour, Tom Sopwith's British challenger, peace descended on Newport's harbor today. Tense nerves relaxed and tired crews rested. Long deferred shore leave was in order and it was payday on the cup boats.

Yankee of Boston, skipped by Charles Francis Adams, which just missed the defense nomination, swung at her mooring in Brenton's cove. She will leave for a leisurely voyage home Monday.

Vanderbilt had Rainbow out for a spin today, trying out some canvas borrowed from Frederick Prince's Weetamoe, which was eliminated from cup competition early in the week.

Endeavour's crew is very confident of victory. Her professional sailing master, Captain D. H. Williams, is ready to bet his nautical cap against a straw hat that the old mug goes back to England on the challenger. He has declined to withdraw the bet even after being informed straw hats are no longer good form after Sept. 15, the date of the race.

Giants Win from Dodgers Again, 4-3

Brooklyn, Sept. 1, (AP)—The Giants continued their parade toward the pennant today but it was a rather straggling march that led them to their second straight victory over the Dodgers, 4 to 3.

Schumacher went the route to get his 20th victory of the season against six defeats, allowing two hits in the first seven innings.

The first three Giant runs resulted from homers. Johnny Vergez drove his seventh of the season into the left field stands to start the third inning and Joe Moore clouted his eleventh after Schumacher had doubled in the fifth.

Trailing 4-0 in the eighth the Dodgers began to solve Schumacher's delivery, but with the tying run on second in the ninth, Schumacher induced Stripp to fly out.

BIG SIX STANDINGS

(By The Associated Press)

Charley Gehringer fattened his batting average yesterday while the other leaders were having a bad day and moved into third place in the Big Six as a result. Gehringer hit four times in six trips to the plate, adding four points to his average. His American League rivals, Lou Gehrig and Heinie Manush, each hit once in four tries, losing one point apiece, while Met Ott and Bill Terry of the Giants each lost two points. Terry didn't get a hit in three tries while Ott hit one out of five. Paul Waner, the leader, was idle. The standing:

ROSS TO FACE TOUGH BATTLE

Experts Figure Jimmy McLarnin Will Be Hard Opponent

New York, Sept. 1. (AP)—The impression was growing in fistic circles tonight that Barney Ross is in for the fight of his life in defending his welterweight title against slugging Jimmy McLarnin, the man from whom he won it, in Madison Square Garden bowl Thursday night.

The baby-faced Celt from the coast has never looked better than he has the last few days in training at his Orangeburg, N. J., camp.

McLarnin has never failed to turn the tables on any man who ever licked him; he will have from six to nine pounds advantage in weight and he will fight Ross in a ring where no champion yet has successfully defended his title.

Ross in Good Shape

Two or three days ago, Ross was an overwhelming favorite but tonight most of the big players were offering no better than 5 to 6 and take your choice. It was believed the fight would be even money at the ringside.

Both boxers put in a vigorous day of training, Jimmy at Orangeburg and the champion at his Catskill Mountain retreat near Ferndale, N. Y.

Ross' chief unofficial adviser, former Champion Benny Leonard, said the Chicago youngster was a better fighter than when he won McLarnin's title last May to become the first boxer ever to hold both the welterweight and lightweight crowns at the same time.

Ross weighed 138 1-2 pounds after his workout which is approximately the weight he expects to carry into the ring. McLarnin has held his poundage steady around the limit of 147 pounds. In their last meeting he agreed to come in at 145 or less and took off weight so industriously he only tipped the scales at 152. He believes that weakened him.

Psychic Bid Wins Over Mighty Field In Hopeful Stakes

Handled by Mack Garner, who guided Cavalcade through the rich three-year old stakes, Psychic Bid breezed home to earn $24,250 for his owner, and pay his backers 4 to 1.

CLUB PAIRINGS ARE ANNOUNCED

Escanaba Golf Club Will Begin Tournament at Nine O'clock

Drawings for the club championship golf tournament which will start at nine o'clock this morning at the Escanaba golf club were made yesterday by Rowan Fitzharris, club professional. There will be two flights and in some cases first round byes were necessary. In case where second round opponents are already matched, these players will be permitted to play their second round matches at nine this morning.

Clarke Glavin, upper peninsula golf champion and club champion, will not compete for the club award this year so the championship tournament will not be an open and shut affair this year.

The drawings follow: first flight: John Cass vs. J. J. Boucher; Stack Smith, bye; S. H. Shepeck, bye; J. R. Andrews vs. Russ Carlson; W. R. Smith, bye; L. H. Reed, bye; Tom Gander, bye; Harold Gessner vs. G. Fischer. Second flight: Charles Gessner vs. George Mashek; E. G. Bennett, bye; Tom Lynott vs. Bill Smith; C. B. Katherine Stammers Wins Tennis Title

Rye, N. Y., Sept. 1. (AP)—Katherine Stammers won the women's singles title of the eastern grass court tennis championships today, defeating Freda James, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, in the fourth all-English final in as many years.

Miss James, surprise conqueror of her compatriot, Betty Nuthall, in the semi-finals yesterday put up a surprisingly strong battle against Miss Stammers but finally succumbed to the steady play of Britain's fourth-ranking player. Miss James is ranked No. 12 abroad.

Miss Stammers and Miss James returned to the courts after their singles tussle to annex the doubles, defeating Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian, and Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, Conn., 6-3, 6-3.

Donald Budge, red-haired Oakland youngster, and Gene Mako of Los Angeles, scored a decisive victory over John Diarmid, Fort Worth, and Jack Tidball, Oakland, Calif., in the men's doubles, 7-5, 8-6, 6-3. Mako and Budge had scored a surprise victory over the English stars, Fred Perry and F. H. D. Wilde to reach the finals.

The men's singles final between George Lott of Chicago and Frankie Parker of Spring Lake, N. J., will be played tomorrow.

The Port of London, England, does an annual overseas trade valued at more than $2,000,000,000.

Masonville To Play Rock and Garden

Rapid River, Sept. 1 (Special)—The Masonville baseball team will have plenty of trouble on their hands this week when they meet Rock and Garden, on Sunday and Labor Day afternoons. They will meet Rock on Sunday at Rock and Garden at Garden on Labor Day afternoon.

Two weeks ago, Masonville took the measure of the Spartans defeating them in a thrilling pitchers' duel between Wright and Rabideau, with Wright getting the better of the argument by allowing but five hits and striking out 16 men who opposed him. Last week Rock took a terrific beating from Perkins, a team which Masonville easily won from, and Wright setting them down with only three hits.

At Garden on Monday is expected the toughest of the two; this will be the saw-off game as each have defeated each other. About two months ago Garden won by a close score after rallying in the ninth inning to push across two runs.

Masonville will probably start Miller against the Spartans, and holding Wright for the Garden game. Last week Miller turned in a well-pitched game against Cooks. Behind the plate will be LaPine. For Rock will be probably Rabideau and Klieber, and for Garden, Truckey and Chaffey.

Gar Wood, Jr., Wins Outboard Contest

Rain marred the program of opening day events, but Sunday's program is expected to bring a record crowd to Port Huron and St. Clair for the 13 mile swimming marathon as well as the boat and short swim races.

YANKEES LOSE TO SENATORS

Babe Ruth's Home Run Is Only Score Made by New York

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—Wally Stewart, aided by the fine fielding and timely hitting of his teammates, pitched Washington to a 5 to 1 victory over the Yankees today.

The Yanks made ten hits off Stewart's delivery but Babe Ruth's 20th homer of the season was their only score. It was the Babe's first circuit swat since Aug. 11 and came in the first inning.

The Senators concentrated their attack on Jimmy Deshong in two innings, connecting for three hits and two runs in the fourth and driving him out with a three-run burst in the seventh.

A run behind after the Bab's circuit swat, Washington jumped ahead in the fourth when Cronin singled, moved to second on Bolton's infield out and tallied on Fred Schulte's double. Pete Susko brought Schulte home with a single.

Cronin Overruns Bag

There was no more scoring and only one Washington hit off Deshong until the seventh. Then the Senators broke loose with five more blows to finish the scoring job. Kerr started with a single. Stewart sacrificed and Bluege flied out. Johnny Stone belted a double to bring Kerr in.

Manush singled scoring Stone and Cronin followed with another single. When Ruth let the ball go through him, Manush, who had reached third on the hit, ran on home.

That was enough for Deshong and Russ Van Atta took his place. Bolton met the new pitcher with a base hit and Cronin crossed the plate. Saltzgaver, who failed to touch third for the Yanks yesterday, discovered that Cronin had made the same "boner" and got the ball from Hoag to put the Senator manager out.

All the way the Yanks kept rapping Walter Stewart rather freely without scoring.

In the semi-final stanza the bases were loaded on singles by pinch hitter Sam Byrd and by Crosetti and a walk to Ruth. But Gehrig fanned.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—The prefunctory procedure of the first round of the 53rd men's national singles tennis championship went along today without a hitch, with Fred Perry, the British holder of the title, barely getting a workout in his elimination of Carl H. Schweikhardt.

While most of the big guns were muffled by virtue of receiving first round byes, the black haired British titlist accounted for the former Columbia university star in straight sets, 6-0, 6-1, 6-3, and led four seeded domestic challengers—George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago; Lester R. Stoefen of Los Angeles, Clifford Sutter of New York and Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., into the second round.

Lott Has Tough Time

They were the only members of a select group of 15 American and foreign seded players who saw action in the opening round.

The veteran Chicago Davis cup doubles player learned to his discomforture that "hot dogs" and beer don't mix before a match, and had to make some remarkable recoveries in the final set to pull out the match, 6-2, 10-8, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

Allison, the man figured to have the best chance of restoring the championship to this country, met a formidable antagonist in Gilbert Hunt of Washington, D. C., but won the match, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

The towering Stoefen, who was beaten in the semi-finals last year by Perry, squelched Lieut. James M. Farrin, Jr., of Edgewood, Md., 6-1, 6-1, 6-1, while Sutter had almost as little trouble disposing of Elmer J. Griffin, of New York, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

DETROIT TEAM EXTENDS LEAD

Bengals Put on Rally in Late Innings Again To Win Scrap

Cleveland, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Tigers came from behind again today, tying the score in the eighth inning, then hammered across two more runs in the eleventh to defeat the Indians 6 to 4 in the second game of their series.

It was Detroit's tenth extra-inning victory this season and increased the Tiger lead over the defeated New York Yankees to 5½ games.

The Tigers trailed from the third inning, when Earl Averill belted his 23rd home run with one aboard, until the eighth. Then Gerald Walker bounced a single off Pitcher Oral Hildebrand's leg, stole second and scored the tying run on Jo-Jo White's single.

In the eleventh Charley Gehringer opened with a single, Bill Rogell got to first and Gehringer to second when Moe Berg fumbled Rogell's tap in front of the plate and Hank Greenberg drew a pass to load the sacks and pave the way for Owen's winning clout. The Indians made a threat that was halted partly by a freak play in the same inning.

Freak Putout

Averill sent a long drive to center and White tried a one-hand catch. The ball bounced off his glove and Walker snatched it before it hit the ground to make the putout. Right after that Hal Trosky doubled, but the next two men went out.

Tommy Bridges went the full route for the Tigers, giving a run in the second to tie the score after Detroit tallied in the first, two more on Averill's homer and one in the sixth before Detroit started its serious scoring. Over the long route he allowed eight hits, gave no walks and struck out seven.

Three Cleveland pitchers were embarrassed by poor support as the Indians committed four errors, and Detroit got within striking distance when Berg dropped a throw to the plate for a double play and let Gehringer score.

Foxx's Home Run Beats Boston, 8-7

Philadelphia, Sept. 1 (AP)—Jimmy Foxx's ninth inning home run with one on base gave the Athletics an 8 to 7 victory over the Boston Red Sox today.

The homer, the 39th of the season for Foxx, was hit off the pitching of his former teammate, Lefty Grove, who had relieved Jimmy Welsh.

NO PRICE CUT ON NEW CARS

Shut-Down Is Expected Over Labor Day Week To Clear Stocks

BY DAVID J. WILKIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP)—There will be comparatively little "cut price" selling in the automobile industry this year as the assembly lines and the dealers' floors are made ready for new models, if present indications correctly forecast the plans of the producer and distributor.

Some 1934 models, of course, will be offered at reduced prices to clear the decks for the newer types, but the volume of this "forced" selling should be smaller this year than for several years past.

To get the sales floors clear of passing models as later types are about to be introduced long has been one of the problems before the industry each year. Despite the most carefully planned production programs, too, an absolutely perfect balance between output and consumption has not been possible as long ago as 1930, the industry adopted the policy of "controlled production," which meant that volume of output was to be guided strictly by the actual demand in sight.

Because of the competition that marks every price class in the industry, however, a certain elasticity had to be attached to this program. Dealers had to be supplied with floor models of various styles; and there are upwards of 40,000 dealers scattered throughout the United States. When the number of styles produced by the various makers is considered the figures give a fairly reasonable estimate of the volume of vehicles that constitutes "stock on hand."

The production machinery, however, is probably more flexible today than it ever has been in the history of mass production in the automobile industry. When buying falls off for any reason, the assembly lines are slowed down and when consumer demand goes up the prodfiction division increases its output. Thus the production and distributing divisions of the industry probably now are more nearly together than they have been in many years.

There has been a noticeable falling off in retail demand during the last week and production volume will show a marked decline during the next fortnight. It is expected that a large part of the industry will shut down for all of Labor Day week. Such a suspension would cut sharply into whatever new car stocks are currently on hand, since production has been running above the 52,000-unit a week mark.

A shut down during the first week of September does not necessarily mean, however, that new models will begin coming off the assembly lines when operations are resumed. The suspension would be solely to permit distributors to clear stocks on hand and the production of current types would be resumed barring some unexpected upset in present plans. As a matter of fact relatively few of the major producers could change over all the manufacturing equipment necessary for new models and few if any, have yet begun to receive shipments of new tools for the 1935 models.

The precise plans of the different producers concerning next year's types continue to be a matter of conjecture as far as the public is concerned. None wants to lead the way until some definite idea has been obtained regarding the plans of his competitor. This disposition as well as the size of the sustained retail demand for current models is a factor in the delay in swinging over to new model output.

Pickford and Soo Stage Local Fairs

Despite some unfavorable conditions, the eastern part of the upper peninsula of Michigan is going ahead with three county and local fairs this season.

The Chippewa-Mackinac Agricultural society will hold its annual fair at Pickford, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 1, 3 and 4. The Pickford district is noted for its horse production, and the annual horse-pulling contest on Sept. 4 will be one of the features of interest. J. H. Wise of Pickford is secretary.

The Chippewa County Agricultural society will present its fifty-fourth annual fair at Cloverland park, Sault Ste. Marie, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 11, 12 and 13. This fair is also noted for its excellent horse and cattle displays and special features. E. S. Royce of the Sault is secretary.

The peninsula's last fair of the year will be held at Stalwart, Chippewa county, Thursday and Friday, Oct. 4 and 5, under the auspices of the Stalwart Agricultural society. It will be the twenty-eighth annual fair presented by the organization. Draft and driving horses are always at the forefront in the Stalwart fair, and the later date makes possible an annual display of farm and garden products. R. G. Crawford of Stalwart is secretary.

COUNTY SCHOOL PROPOSAL FAILS

Rural Districts Look With Disfavor on Proposition

No agreement could be reached to enable all high school students of the county to be enrolled in the Newberry schools, the state plan for a high school consolidation falling through during this week. The objections all come from the rural sections, and appear do to fear of centralization, transportation difficulties and the fact that teachers had already been engaged for the year just opening.

The plan had been worked out through the cooperation of the state board of education, by which the cost of education in Luce county might have been reduced from $10,000 to $12,000 per year, plus increased aid under the Thatcher-Sias school bill. This plan called for the transportation of a large part of the county children to the Newberry schools and the elimination of all tuition charges to the townships of Columbus, Lakefield and Pentland. Under the act Newberry schools would have collected $40 per capita for children up to the seventh grade and $65 per child for grades seven to twelve. The state also would allow transportation aid up to $30 per child. The result would have made it possible to hire the necessary extra teachers and would have resulted in vastly better schools for most of the children of the county.

Must Pay Up

McMillan township school board find themselves in the position of having to insist on payment of back tuition from the townships before the rural children will be allowed to enroll in the Newberry schools. Lakefield township is all paid up. Pentland township has paid $534 and still owes $1,706 for past years' tuition. Columbus township has made arrangements to pay. That district paid for a half year and still owes for a year and a half. A contract has gone to Columbus township school boards to cover the 1934-35 school year as this township has sent its high school students in for the past two years.

The plan of the state regarding consolidation was made in the interests of the children and for bettering both teaching and scholarship conditions. The plan frankly helps the formation of county school units in which all of the advantages of larger classes, gymnasium, auditorium services, home economics and manual arts and library service can be obtained for all of the children. With the advancement of the science of snow removal, transportation problems are being solved. None of the school buses missed a day of last year, and both snow and cold were worse than usual.

MATTRESS FACTORY

A mattress factory will be set up the first of the week in the voting room in the basement of the community building, the township board agreeing to donate the room for the purpose at their last meeting this week. Matresses will be made in Newberry, using the surplus government cotton, a carload of it now being in transit. It is expected that 500 mattresses will be turned out from this supply.

The equipment, consisting mostly of tables and presses, will be made here out of lumber, welfare relief workers doing the job. Between 40 and 50 workers, mostly women, will be employed. After Luce county welfare families are supplied the mattresses will be used for welfare workers in nearby districts. This is a part of the self-helps planned by the state welfare whereby people are enabled to work for themselves. The plan will be watched with interest.

ILLNESS FATAL TO MRS. MOSS

Former Anna Greis Dies At Family Home; Last Rites Monday

Mrs. Harry J. Moss, 49, of Chicago, the former Anna Greis, passed away at 7:30 o'clock Saturday morning at the family home, 316 South Eleventh street. She had been ill for six months, suffering from complications.

Mrs. Moss was born in Escanaba, Nov. 17, 1884, and attended St. Joseph's school, and before going to Chicago, where she made her home for the last twenty years, she was a member of the sales staff of the Fair Store and also of the Ed Erickson store, now Lauerman Brothers. Her marriage to Harry J. Moss took place in Escanaba six years ago.

The body was taken to the Allo Funeral Home to be prepared for burial and was returnéd to the family residence Saturday evening.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, Rev. Fr. Edward Leary officiating. Burial will be in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Surviving are her husband, and the following brothers and sisters: John, Clarence, Michael, Charles and Marie of this city, and Mrs. Charles Morrow of Chicago.

Stricken Cornell Family Needs Help

A appeal for bedding, clothing and children's garments has been made for an unfortunate family living one mile west of the Cornell school. The children range in ages from one to 13 years, and the family is destitute, the father having been laid up for some time with a broken shoulder.

Anyone having clothing or bedding to contribute for the aid of this family is asked to call the Delta county probate judge's office, 296.

To the voters of Delta County

Two years ago you elected me as representative in the State legislature, and I made you just one promise at that time, and that was that I would do my very best to attend to your business as best I could. I feel that I have kept my promise and am asking your support at this time in order that I might help to carry on the work and clarify some of the matters that we passed at that time. No one is perfect, and no matter how well he may try to legislate he is bound to make some slight mistake where he has about a THOUSAND BILLS to consider.

I was present at every roll call and vote and spent many days in the House even if we were not in session.

The Supt. of Public Instruction says of me "I am delighted. In every instance you have been anxious to conserve the taxpayers interests. You have thought of those in need, and of the welfare of the coming generation." Labor has said: "Your vote on all labor matters was favorable for which we thank you."

The farm group speak of me as follows: "No one stood by the matter of the conservation of our farms and natural resources with more ability and eagerness than you. This was done with wholehearted and intelligent interest for the betterment of the people of Mich. as well as for your own constituents."

Speaker Bradley writes as follows: "I wish to express to you my appreciation of your services in the House. It is a fine thing when a member earns the confidence of his colleagues and earns a reputation for honesty and fidelity to the office to which they they elected him, such as you have done.

A letter to The Escanaba Women's Club from Mrs. Sears R. head of the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs, says in part:

NO PRICE CUT ON NEW CARS

Shut-Down Is Expected Over Labor Day Week To Clear Stocks

BY DAVID J. WILKIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP)—There will be comparatively little "cut price" selling in the automobile industry this year as the assembly lines and the dealers' floors are made ready for new models, if present indications correctly forecast the plans of the producer and distributor.

Some 1934 models, of course, will be offered at reduced prices to clear the decks for the newer types, but the volume of this "forced" selling should be smaller this year than for several years past.

To get the sales floors clear of passing models as later types are about to be introduced long has been one of the problems before the industry each year. Despite the most carefully planned production programs, too, an absolutely perfect balance between output and consumption has not been possible as long ago as 1930, the industry adopted the policy of "controlled production," which meant that volume of output was to be guided strictly by the actual demand in sight.

Because of the competition that marks every price class in the industry, however, a certain elasticity had to be attached to this program. Dealers had to be supplied with floor models of various styles; and there are upwards of 40,000 dealers scattered throughout the United States. When the number of styles produced by the various makers is considered the figures give a fairly reasonable estimate of the volume of vehicles that constitutes "stock on hand."

The production machinery, however, is probably more flexible today than it ever has been in the history of mass production in the automobile industry. When buying falls off for any reason, the assembly lines are slowed down and when consumer demand goes up the production division increases its output. Thus the production and distributing divisions of the industry probably now are more nearly together than they have been in many years.

There has been a noticeable falling off in retail demand during the last week and production volume will show a marked decline during the next fortnight. It is expected that a large part of the industry will shut down for all of Labor Day week. Such a suspension would cut sharply into whatever new car stocks are currently on hand, since production has been running above the 52,000-unit a week mark.

A shut-down during the first week of September does not necessarily mean, however, that new models will begin coming off the assembly lines when operations are resumed. The suspension would be solely to permit distributors to clear stocks on hand and the production of current types would be resumed barring some unexpected upset in present plans. As a matter of fact relatively few of the major producers could change over all the manufacturing equipment necessary for new models and few if any, have yet begun to receive shipments of new tools for the 1935 models.

The precise plans of the different producers concerning next year's types continue to be a matter of conjecture as far as the public is concerned. None wants to lead the way until some definite idea has been obtained regarding the plans of his competitor. This disposition as well as the size of the sustained retail demand for current models is a factor in the delay in swinging over to new model output.

Pickford and Soo Stage Local Fairs

Despite some unfavorable conditions, the eastern part of the upper peninsula of Michigan is going ahead with three county and local fairs this season.

The Chippewa-Mackinac Agricultural society will hold its annual fair at Pickford, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 1, 3 and 4. The Pickford district is noted for its horse production, and the annual horse-pulling contest on Sept. 4 will be one of the features of interest. J. H. Wise of Pickford is secretary.

The Chippewa County Agricultural society will present its fifty-fourth annual fair at Cloverland park, Sault Ste. Marie, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 11, 12 and 13. This fair is also noted for its excellent horse and cattle displays and special features. E. S. Royce of the Sault is secretary.

The peninsula's last fair of the year will be held at Stalwart, Chippewa county, Thursday and Friday, Oct. 4 and 5, under the auspices of the Stalwart Agricultural society. It will be the twenty-eighth annual fair presented by the organization. Draft and driving horses are always at the forefront in the Stalwart fair, and the later date makes possible an annual display of farm and garden products. R. G. Crawford of Stalwart is secretary.

COUNTY SCHOOL PROPOSAL FAILS

Rural Districts Look With Disfavor on Proposition

No agreement could be reached to enable all high school students of the county to be enrolled in the Newberry schools, the state plan for a high school consolidation falling through during this week. The objections all come from the rural sections, and appear do to fear of centralization, transportation difficulties and the fact that teachers had already been engaged for the year just opening.

The plan had been worked out through the cooperation of the state board of education, by which the cost of education in Luce county might have been reduced from $10,000 to $12,000 per year, plus increased aid under the Thatcher-Sias school bill. This plan called for the transportation of a large part of the county children to the Newberry schools and the elimination of all tuition charges to the townships of Columbus, Lakefield and Pentland. Under the act Newberry schools would have collected $40 per capita for children up to the seventh grade and $65 per child for grades seven to twelve. The state also would allow transportation aid up to $30 per child. The result would have made it possible to hire the necessary extra teachers and would have resulted in vastly better schools for most of the children of the county.

Must Pay Up

McMillan township school board find themselves in the position of having to insist on payment of back tuition from the townships before the rural children will be allowed to enroll in the Newberry schools. Lakefield township is all paid up. Pentland township has paid $534 and still owes $1,706 for past years' tuition. Columbus township has made arrangements to pay. That district paid for a half year and still owes for a year and a half. A contract has gone to Columbus township school boards to cover the 1934-35 school year as this township has sent its high school students in for the past two years.

The plan of the state regarding consolidation was made in the interests of the children and for bettering both teaching and scholarship conditions. The plan frankly helps the formation of county school units in which all of the advantages of larger classes, gymnasium, auditorium services, home economics and manual arts and library service can be obtained for all of the children. With the advancement of the science of snow removal, transportation problems are being solved. None of the school buses missed a day of last year, and both snow and cold were worse than usual.

MATTRESS FACTORY

A mattress factory will be set up the first of the week in the voting room in the basement of the community building, the township board agreeing to donate the room for the purpose at their last meeting this week. Matresses will be made in Newberry, using the surplus government cotton, a carload of it now being in transit. It is expected that 500 mattresses will be turned out from this supply.

The equipment, consisting mostly of tables and presses, will be made here out of lumber, welfare relief workers doing the job. Between 40 and 50 workers, mostly women, will be employed. After Luce county welfare families are supplied the mattresses will be used for welfare workers in nearby districts. This is a part of the self-helps planned by the state welfare whereby people are enabled to work for themselves. The plan will be watched with interest.

NEWBERRY LOCALS

Strict Requirements for Admittance to Bar Recommended

Detroit, Sept. 1, (AP)—A tightening up on requirements precedent to examinations for admittance to the practice of law and a five year probationary period for successful applicants will be recommended to the Michigan State Bar association in a report to be presented by its committee on legal education and admission to the bar. The convention will be held at Mackinac Island on September 7 and 8.

The committee, headed by Dean Henry M. Bates, of the University of Michigan law school, taking notice of criticisms that a minority of dishonest lawyers is bringing ill repute to the entire bar, will recommend:

1. To be eligible to take Michigan bar examinations, a student must file notice with the state board of law examiners within 60 days after he begins the study of law. This notice must state where and with whom he intends to study.

2. Within 60 days before taking the examination, the applicant must file with the state board a complete record of courses taken, grades received and a detailed record of his school behavior.

3. The license first issued to a successful applicant shall be from three to five years only and probationary. Another examination must be taken at the end of the probation period and will cover his record as a practitioner.

Drastic Action Needed

Commenting on this recommendation, the committee said:

"This may seem drastic. We believe, however, something of the kind has become necessary. In the first place, many persons secure admission to the bar, but do not thereafter practice law as their major or serious undertaking. They, nevertheless, hang on as attorneys, and occasionally undertake to perform legal services, though without the skill and experience which come from serious and continued practice.

"They are more likely to participate in some of the reprehensible occupations associated with illegal practice. The ambulance chaser and the runner for various illegal undertakings are examples of a numerous class of people who seek to plunder society under the protection of admission to the bar."

The committee on criminal jurisprudence will submit for consideration three different methods for the selection of judges without elections "that the judiciary of this state may be freed from the influence of politics and be made independent of the favor of politicians."

Record State Fair Crowd Today Looms

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP)—A record breaking crowd is expected to attend the annual Michigan State Fair here Sunday to help celebrate Veterans Day.

Bugles and drums and marching units will provide the colorful background for Sunday's program of events, and veterans organizations in many counties of the state are expected to send musical and drill units.

Despite the rain the fair grounds Saturday was thronged with visitors inspecting the variety of exhibits valued in excess of $1,000,000. One of the chief attractions of the 4-H exhibit is the display of furniture made by Donald Tuttle, 17, Bay City.

Business Conditions Reveal Improvement

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States today reported business conditions were unusually favorable.

In its fortnightly summary, it said mid-summer conditions had the advantage of an export gain in the first half of the year. It noted particularly the increase of domestic imports of raw materials—"usually forecasting domestic activity."

The chamber also told of increases in payrolls, carloadings and department store sales.

COUNSEL FOR SLAIN GUNMAN SENT TO JAIL

would be brought into the case. The Dillinger mob took $29,000, killed a policeman and wounded four other persons in the robbery of the Merchants National Bank at South Bend on June 30.

Piquett's hearing was set for September 7.

The whereabouts of Dillinger during the last four months of his life, when he was the most hunted criminal in the country, were believed disclosed by the recent developments.

For an indefinite time prior to the operation, believed to have been May 27 or before, he was on the near north side of Chicago. On June 13 he allegedly went to the Finerty home and remained there until he transferred himself to the home of Mrs. Anna Sage, "the woman in red," near the scene of his subsequent slaying, on July 22.

Finerty, was said by south side police to have been a minor member of the Al Capone booze running gang.

Indicted for Graft

Piquett became city prosecutor under Mayor William Hale Thompson. For five years before that he had been chief clerk in the prosecutor's office. During that period police charged he interceded in behalf of gamblers.

He was indicted in September, 1922 on charges of graft in connection with school board coal sales, but was freed when the state failed to bring him to trial.

The seven arrests brought the total of those who have either been indicted or charged with hiding Dillinger to 19. Fifteen other persons died by the gun in connection with the Indiana desperado's crimes.

Rumors that the two physicians and O'Leary had made full confessions, arose a few hours after they appeared in court.

Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, would not confirm reports that the three had agreed to testify against Piquett.

Crash of Transport Plane Investigated

Oregon, Mo., Sept. 1 (AP)—An investigation into the crash last night of a transport plane that struck an embankment near here during a storm and burst into flames, killing its five occupants, was launched by a department of commerce inspector today.

The bodies of the pilot and the three men and one woman passenger were prepared for removal to their prospective homes.

The plane, a tri-motor ship of the Rapid Air Lines, Inc., was en route to Omaha, Neb., when the fatal crash occurred.

The pilot, Don Bontrager, 34, apparently had tried to make a forced landing in a six-acre clover field because of a raging rain and wind storm.

Death Of Woman In Hospital Is Probed

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP)—Police of Detroit were investigating the death of Margaret Smock, 37, who died in Receiving hospital today half an hour after she was taken to the hospital by a man who gave his name as Steale.

The victim had been wounded and beaten, and physicians believed her skull had been fractured. A post morten examination was ordered. Her identification was made by her father, Elmer Smock several hours after her death, but because she did not live with him, he said he could shed no light on the mystery of her death.

TURNER BREAKS FLIGHT RECORD

Dashes Across Country in Ten Hours and Two Minutes

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—Col. Roscoe Turner, dashing speed demon of the air, set a new record for a flight from the Pacific to the Atlantic today of ten hours and two minutes.

He roared into Floyd Bennett field in his orange monoplane like a streak of fire from a rifle barrel at 4:05 p. m., E. S. T., shading the record he made last year of ten hours and four minutes.

The clockers figured his margin over the old mark at two minutes and 39 seconds.

"The new record isn't must better than my old one," Turner said, "but we can't break records by hours anymore. Minutes are going to count plenty."

Harrassed by Rain

The colonel not only smashed the record, but probably won $3,500 in prizes. Two thousand dollars was the prize for the Bendix race from Burbank, Calif., to New York, which Turner alone completed. Other entrants stopped at Cleveland for the air races. The other $1,500 was a bonus race officials posted for any flier who broke the record.

Turner was flagged away from the Union Air terminal at Burbank this morning at 3:03 a. m. (P. S. T.). Two hours and 45 minutes later he came down at Albuquerque, N. M., replenished his fuel supply in eight minutes and winged away to Wichita, Kans. He stopped four minutes there, five minutes in St. Louis and ten minutes at Cleveland.

Rainstorms harrassed him all along the route, which he figured at 2,512 miles compared with 2,520 miles he traveled to set the last record.

"This is the toughest flight I ever made in my life. I ran into nothing but storms this side of Albuquerque," he said.

workers in many communities "jumped the gun." Arrests had been made in Macon Georgia where a mob yesterday blocked a train at the Bibb mill. New England manufacturers did not deny rumors that strike breakers were being imported, and both mill owners and strike leaders anticipated clashes with communists.

Of possible violence, Gorman had this to say:

"Our instructions are specific—to be peaceful, if possible, but if our workers are slugged by hired thugs they are advised to slug back."

Workers Organized

The strike committee sent telegrams to the governors of 22 states, asking protection from "either the forces of employers or by the insidious and disruptive forces of communism."

Gorman will broadcast a message to all workers at 1 p. m. E. S. T. tomorrow.

The workers have been organized in near-military manner, divided into squads of ten, each under a captain whose responsibility is to maintain "disciplined restraint under provocation."

Claims of manufacturers and strike leaders as to the extent of the strike were at sharp variance. Mill owners predicted few workers would leave the mills, the union asserted that "not a wheel will turn," and that more than 1,000,000 workers will be involved.

The answer will be seen on Monday, when most southern mills will operate. In New England the mills will not be open until Tuesday.

The decision to call out some 150,000 silk workers was somewhat unexpected. Peter Van Horn, chairman of the silk code authority sent word he would confer here Tuesday with Gorman and members of the strike committee. His message was interpreted as a possibility of laying ground work for negotiations.

Organized labor, headed by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, rallied behind the textile workers. Privately it was said in these quarters that the present situation probably would mean a showdown on two issues vital to labor: the possibility of forcing code amendment by strike and the policy of federal relief for strikers.

10-Day Old Baby Poses for Films

Hollywood, Sept. 1 (AP)—Movie cameras were set up in a big hospital here today to record the antics of the youngest film player—a 10-day old baby girl, cast for her role a month before she was born.

The young actress was Phyllis Rica Frey, daughter of Sophie Frey and Sam Frey, accountant at Paramount movie studio. She was photographed for a Lee Tracy and Helen Mack picture.

SUED FOR $100,000

Los Angeles, Sept. 1 (AP)—Lew Brice, actor, writer, and brother of Fannie Brice, comedienne, was sued for $100,000 damages today by Marchen Jorgenson, concert pianist, who charged she was attacked last Dec. 27.

World Revolution is Predicted by Voliva

BY RODERICK M. GRANT
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Zion, Ill., Sept. 1 (AP)—For 1935 and '36, Wilbur Glenn Voliva gives the "flat" earth—"revolution and chaos!"

For seven years thenceforward, a world dictator will rule . . . and then the millennium, the passing of the gentile age and the beginning of the thousand years of Christ's second reign.

Voliva, the prophet, preacher and overseer of his religious colony here, opened his Bible and his mathematics text today, dug some magic numbers out of the scriptures, summed up what he proclaimed as proof that things were about to happen.

Backed Up By Bible

He has already summoned the faithful to Shiloh tabernacle Sept. 10 to await the coming of the Lord any time thereafter. So today he elaborated on the grounds for his prophecies—remarking that it must be plainly understood he is no date setter but a date searcher.

"I can present from the Bible a volume of figures showing that I am right as to 1935-36," said Voliva.

To begin with, said he, "the present momentous period beginning with the World War, August 2, 1914, is designed in the Bible as 'time of the end.'" He referred the reader to Daniel 8:17-19; 9:26; 11:35, 40-45; 12.4, 6, 9.

"This period will run from 1914 to 1942-43," he explained, "and will reach a world climax in 1935-36 in world revolution and chaos, out of which will come the superman, the world dictator, whose administration of world affairs will continue for approximately seven years, ending with the battle of Armageddon," which, however, Voliva said "will never be fought."

Armageddon will "be halted by the second stage of Christ's coming," said the overseer, "namely his coming in glory to destroy all gentile nations and to inaugurate his millennial rule—his rule for one thousand years.

"We shall see the nations of the world align themselves in two great confederacies, the great northeastern confederacy and the revived Roman empire. The former will be headed by Russia and Germany, the latter by Italy, England and France.

"The World War, which cost 20 million lives and more than 200 billion dollars, followed by the world-wide pestilence which destroyed 12 million lives, followed by the greatest earthquake in history, followed by an unparalleled depression, followed by the most wide-spread, terrible drought ever known in history, will be followed by other world calamities which will impoverish all gentile nations, while Palestine will know no depression and will become the wealthiest country in the world."

For the first time in three years, the North Carolina government had a cash balance—$70,072—in its general fund at the end of this fiscal year.

forbidden to commercial banks, these banking institutions, infected with speculative fervor, indulged in practices and transactions which had the direst consequences.

"Commercial banks found a fertile field among their depositors for purchase of security issues which their investment affiliates were sponsoring. These banks, violating fiduciary duty to depositors seeking disinterested investment counsel from their bankers, referred these depositors to the affiliates for advice. These depositors were sold securities in which the affiliates had a pecuniary interest."

The National City company, affiliate of the National City Bank and the Chase Securities corporation, affiliate of the Chase National Bank, were cited frequently in excerpts from testimony quoted to bring out the practices followed.

The report condemned trading in the stock of the parent company by the investment affiliate and the activities of officers and directors in connection with such procedure.

Hit $100,000 Pension

The testimony of Albert H. Wiggin, former president of Chase National, was recited at length to show his activities in forming several investment corporations, the stock all held by members of his family, for purposes of dealing in stocks, including that of the bank itself.

The report also cited Wiggin's pension of $100,000 a year, giving at the same time a court precedent under which it was contended that such a pension was illegal. The Chase board of directors discontinued the pension at Wiggin's request.

Turning to "activities and practices of officers and directors of commercial banks and investment affiliates," the report said:

"These custodians of funds, gambled and speculated for their own account in the stock of the banking institutions which they dominated; participated in speculative transactions in the capital stock of their banking institutions that directly conflicted with the interest of these institutions which they were paid to serve; participated in and were the beneficiaries of pool operations; bestowed special favors upon officers and directors of their banking institutions and investment affiliates to insure domination and control, for their own personal aggrandizement, of these officers and directors; received the benefits of "preferred lists," with resultant impairment of their usefulness and efficiency as executive officers.

INFLATION SEEN AS VERY LIKELY

Treasury Developments Point to Trend of Monetary Policy

BY RICHARD L. TURNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—Recent treasury developments pointed tonight the trend of the administration's monetary policy toward ultimate full realization of the inflationary possibilities of past dollar devaluation, but with an immediate determination to keep inflationary talk from upsetting the market for government bonds.

In addition, there was revealed a governmental effort to see that small industries are supplied with sufficient credit to keep the recovery program in progress. It would test out the contention that the banks are refusing to make sound loans, to keep themselves as liquid as possible.

The happenings of the week pointing to these trends were:

Secretary Morgenthau announced that the $2,800,000,000 profit accruing from last winter's increase in the price of gold eventually would be used to retire government bonds and thereby reduce the national debt, now at an all-time peak of $27,080,000,000.

Devaluation Considered

The treasury made known that the $1,724,700,000 in government bonds falling due in September and October would be retired in the usual way by offering new issues of government securities in exchange.

A survey of rejected applications for bank loans in the Chicago area was announced to begin next week. From the results, government financial officers will decide whether sound loan applications were turned down, and whether the government can supply the credit asked in them.

New changes, too, were generally anticipated with the naming of Daniel W. Bell, commissioner of accounts at the treasury, to be acting director of the budget. He will replace Lewis Douglas, director of the budget, long out of sympathy with administration fiscal policies.

Entering into a discussion of Secretary Morgenthau and Under Secretary Thomas Jefferson Coolidge with President Roosevelt, it was understood, was the possibility of a further future devaluation of the gold dollar. With authority to cut in half the amount of gold equivalent to a dollar, President Roosevelt last winter contented himself with lopping off but 41 percent.

Many believe similar action with relation to the silver dollar is inevitable. The silver dollar is now based on a value of $1.29 an ounce for that metal. The government is buying it at a rate of approximately 50 cents. Inflationists in congress are beginning to clamor for an increase in the statutory price of the metal similar to that ordered for gold in January when the figure was jumped from $20.67 to $35.

VOTE SNARING DRIVE SHOWS MORE ACTION

you have been hearing about Bill Comstock are not true, but he has surrounded himself with men I don't dare to habitate with."

John K. Stack, Jr., the remaining Democratic candidate for governor, has made virtually no drive for votes to date.

On the Republican side, Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, Alex J. Groesbeck and John W. Smith are planning additional addresses during the final week before the primary. Ora A. Bailey, Shiawassee county farmer, fourth aspirant for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, has made only a modest campaign.

While the headquarters staffs of the various candidates profess to be confident of the outcome, impartial observers make no attempt to predict the trend of the vote 10 days hence. They explain this as due to the unprecedented lack of public interest in the primary. While some sources have ventured the belief something like 500,000 votes will be cast throughout the state on September 11. This admittedly is pure guess work. However, there is no disposition anywhere to challenge the statement that a relatively small percentage of Michigan's approximately 2,000,000 electors will go to the polls for the primary.

LONG CLOSING IN ON HIS FOE

barred out but with broadcasting equipment set up. The committee room and environs fairly bristled with troops, who rough-handled anyone attempting to pass and escorted Huey Long to and from the committee room.

A string of witnesses told the committee that they had knowlege of the operation of a huge lottery ring, race horse handbooks and houses of girls with protection money being paid to the police and city administration.

The high spot of the testimony was reached when a witness, who said he was Henry R. Long, native of Mississippi and no relation to Huey Long, testified that some twenty lottery establishments were operated in New Orleans and paid approximately $3,500 weekly protection money to city officials.

A witness, who said he was William R. McCarthy, living a half block from a disorderly house on Carnodelet street, testified that he had been unable to have it closed because it was frequented by "the Walmsley brothers, Carroll and Bob, and by Judge Walter Gleason." The witness said Judge Gleason is a candidate for the state supreme court.

After the hearings had adjourned until 2 p. m. Tuesday, Mayor Walmsley issued a statement denying the testimony concerning him.

EXTENDS AUTO CODE 2 MONTHS

President Orders Pact Be Retained Until November 3

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt ordered today that the nation's automobiles be manufactured at least until Nov. 3 under the code he signed just a little more than a year ago.

The president's action at Hyde Park, N. Y., brought to an end speculation over the question of continuing one of the most important and controverted codes that has been tusseled with by NRA.

The position that organized labor will take on the president's order could not be determined tonight. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was out of the city, and Frank Morrison, secretary, said he was not certain what the stand might be.

Morrison reiterated, however, that a maximum work week of 30 hours is sought, and that the work week should not exceed five days. The same demand was made unsuccessfully by labor when the public hearing was held on the code.

Only recently the issue of hours and wages was raised again when Green asked that wages be raised and hours shortened. He also asked elimination of the so-called "merit clause"—giving employers the right to hire and fire workers without consideration of their union or non-union affiliations—and provision of time and a half pay for overtime work.

It was considered significant today, however, that Green did not make the demands as head of the labor group, but as a member of the NRA labor advisory board. Leaders of the industry said they had not yet received any official notice of any demands from the federation.

President Roosevelt's action obviously ended any immediate hopes labor had to gain reopening and revision of the code.

Highest Temperature on Record Was 83, Lowest 37

Some highs and lows in temperature were recorded at Escanaba during the month of August, records at the weather bureau show. The highest of the month was 83 on the ninth, and the lowest came down to 37 on the 29th. The mean temperature for the month, however, was 61, which was below the normal of 64.3. The maximum reached here in 63 years was 94 in 1896.

The precipitation for the month totalled 2.68 inches, compared with normal of 3.19. The heaviest rain for the month for a 24-hour period was on the first and second, when 1.14 inches fell. So far, the year 1934 is nearly five inches short on precipitation, compared with normal.

Clean-Up of Florence In Rip-Roaring Days Recalled by Pioneers

Iron Mountain—The Regulators were marching out of the little town of Florence, Wis. Their errand was a serious one. Scarcely a word was spoken as they plodded down a sandy road, a dozen masked men or more, heavily armed, and carrying faggots and cans of inflammable fluid.

The Menominee iron range was ablaze with hatred. The conflicting elements were the plug-uglies, tough and gamblers who controlled the territory and its politics, and reputable citizens who had vowed to end the reign of ribaldry with rifle and noose if other methods failed.

Tonight the Regulators—this was the name adopted by these Crusaders of the Upper Peninsula—were about to strike a decisive blow for law and order. Their objective, termed a "camp of death" by Chase S. Osborn, was a low, squat building at the outskirts of town where "Old Man" Mudge maintained a logged "palace" of vice.

Mudge was an accomplished actor. He posed as a minister on annual trips to Ohio and Northern Indiana, enjoying the confidence of the ordained clergy. He wore a silk hat, white cotton gloves and a frock coat—even while behind his bar—and his bland, sanctimonious air gained him large donations for his "missionary work" in the iron county. The money went for new roulette wheels and thugs to terrorize his enemies.

His presence in Florence, just over the Wisconsin line, necessitated that the storm break there. Before it was over bullets sped in several pitched battles, a sheriff and a prosecuting attorney engaged in a pistol duel on the main street and a mining official's son was kidnaped and presumably killed.

Apply the Torch

The Regulators gathered in a solemn knot when they neared the Mudge establishment. They heard the howl of a gaunt timber wolf chained to the back door. Music ribald laughter and the shouts of gamblers issued from a dance hall from which many a lumberjack and miner was reputed to have disappeared after receiving a drink from the "black bottle," containing a mixture of hootch and "knockout drops," and a permanent fixture at the bar.

"Go easy now or they'll see us," advised the leader of the band. "It'll be daybreak in half an hour."

The men, their ranks closed, crept through the trees along the road. They paused to adjust their masks in the shadow of the big building which was constructed of the big building which was constructed of logs on the principle of a fort. While watchmen scanned the front door, they emptied their cans upon the logs and applied matches to the dripping kerosene.

Flames Leap High

Expecting a fusillade from the windows, the Regulators leaped away from the glare of the flames. Blended with screams and running footsteps were yelps from the wolf, tugging in terror at his chain. Heat drove back a bucket brigade organized within. Trunks, furniture and clothing pelted to the ground from windows; a group of lumberjacks struggled to remove a battered melodeon.

Shuffling into the blinding light, "Old Man" Mudge, dressed in his clerical garb, sent curse after curse into the darkness. His daughter Mina, said to have been a beauty shook her fist at the twinkling lights of Florence. But voices were lost in the increasing roar of the flames now climbing over the roof and thrusting its tongues into every cranny and crevice.

Den Wiped Out

To the Regulators, running over the hills, the roar was a welcome one. It was a challenge of civic virtue to organized crime, a threat of more violent measures to clean up the district. They chuckled and grinned beneath their masks, for they knew that one of the worst dens of iniquity on the range would soon be ashes and smouldering timbers.

Today a shallow depression at the edge of a swamp is all that remains of "Old Man" Mudge's establishment. The Regulators have died or gone elsewhere, but their deeds and high points of the war between right and wrong are remembered by their descendants and the citizens who gave them support.

The most vivid historian of the struggle is Osborn, who was a young newspaper editor in Florence in the early eighties when the fight was at its hottest. In his book, "The Iron Hunter," he paints Mudge as the arch-villain of the Middle West who combined the guile of a Borgia with the brutality of Bill Sykes.

"The Mudge Gang was organized over a territory including the region for 500 miles south of Lake Superior from Canada to Minnesota," he says. "Mudge was as much of a genius in some directions as he was a devil in others. Compared with him, Machiavelli was a saint . . . He tolerated no rivals. No sea pirate was more bloodthirsty or vengeful.

Secret Passages

"The gang would run off witnesses when arrests occurred near the law and order line. If they could get rid of them in no other way, the witnesses were killed. Any man who showed an inclination to oppose the gang was either killed or murdered."

Osborn described the headquarters as follows:

"A big log camp with frame gables held a bar and a dance hall and stalls on the first floor. On the second floor were rooms about the size of those in a Tokio Yoshiwara. A third floor attic contained dungeons and two trap doors. In the cellar were dark cells and a secret passage, well timbered with cedar, leading to where the hill on the stockade was situated broked down into a dense swamp.

Surrounded by Wall

"Surrounding this camp of death were sharp pointed palisades, ten feet high, of the kind used against the Indians to inclose pioneer blockhouses. There were loopholes. Two passages led through the stockade."

Mudge was a Michigan product, according to Florence's old timers. Some say he came from Ishpeming, some from Benton Harbor. He left Florence in a cutter pulled by a team of spanking white horses, stopping for a drink at the saloon of Azara Robichaud before turning his back forever on "Whisky Alley," where the Regulators had lashed the undesirables with black-snake whips as an argument to leave town.

With a scarf concealing his venerable locks, he climbed into the cutter, pausing to mutter a sacrilegious blessing upon the community. Then with a string of oaths and a peal of eerie laughter he disappeared over the hills, leaving Mina to look after herself. After a brief stay in central Wisconsin, Mudge went to Benton Harbor, still maintaining his clerical pose, and died there at the age of 70.

"I don't think he was as bad as Osborn made out," said William Judge, former sheriff at Florence. "But his gang caused a lot of trouble. The Menominee iron range was the toughest spot in the Middle West in those days and the worst characters shifted their operations between here and Iron Mountain. When things became too hot in Michigan they jumped to Wisconsin and vice versa.

"Mudge came from a good family and studied for the ministry in his youth, I believe. Anyhow, he knew all the hymns and prayers. He used to tell how he made congregations cry over the plight of the poor downtrodden miners and lumberjacks. With their amens ringing in his ears and their good money in his pocket he would hurry back to his bottle in a hotel.

An Early Racketeer

"He could stacks cards as expertly as any man I ever saw, and pull aces out of his sleeves so rapidly it was impossible to detect him. He was also an accomplished violinist.

There was no racket he didn't undertake. One of his favorites was the sale of a "bee sting preventive," composed of dish water and coloring put up in attractively labeled bottles. He sold it to farmers with the guarantee that if it were rubbed on the hands and face one could remove honey from a hive without unpleasantness.

"Several men who took him at his word nearly died from the consequences. He worked these dodges during the slack season, but never in this territory because everyone knew him too well."

One of the most dastardly acts attributed to the gang was the kidnaping of Willie Dickinson, seven-year-old son of Capt. William E. Dickinson, superintendent of the Commonwealth mine, two miles out of Florence. Dickinson incurred the gang's displeasure by demanding that the owner of a gambling resort move the establishment from property owned by the mine. The owner refused.

"Capt. Dickinson took matters into his own hands," Judge related. "He had a crew of men place skids under the place and roll it away. Shortly afterward his son disappeared while on his way to school in Florence. It was surmised at the time that some one picked him up with a horse and rig, on the excuse of giving the boy a ride to town.

Never Recovered

"The case was like the Lindbergh kidnaping in regard to the excitement it raised. Officers could find no clews. Capt. Dickinson spent thousands of dollars on private detectives, hired spies to join the gang and learn its secrets, offered big rewards and directed a nation-wide search. But he learned nothing. It was supposed the boy was killed and thrown into an abandoned shaft."

Pat McHugh, saloon keeper and former prize fighter, was Mudge's most notorious henchman. He was feared throughout the iron county as a bully. Though numerous charges were laid at his door he always managed to escape arrest. Because of his apparent immunity, it was charged by Osborn that Sheriff John Redmond and J. E. MacIntosh, prosecuting attorney, were under Mudge's control.

Fought A Duel

"Each blamed the other for failure to act in regard to McHugh," Judge said. "The quarrel became so bitter they agreed to duel at 50 paces. The prosecutor fired when a handkerchief was dropped but his bullet whistled wide of the mark. The sheriff's gun missed fire. Tossing aside the useless weapon, Redmond grappled with the prosecutor, who shot him in the lung during the tussle.

"The sheriff's friends obtained a rope and threatened to hang MacIntosh but their temper cooled. Redmond died from the wound a short time later."

Eventually the law caught up with McHugh. Deputies and crusading citizens chased him into a swamp, from which he sniped at them with a rifle while dodging from tree to tree. Bill Noyes, giant woodsman and brother of the two-gun sheriff who succeeded Redmond, soon had the drop on the bully who fell on his knees and begged for his life. Noyes spared him.

"Shots cracked along 'Whisky Alley almost every night," Judge added. "Life was mighty cheap. One one occasion a miner chased another man between two buildings after an argument in a saloon. When the man hid behind a lumber pile the miner waited for him to come out. As a figure stepped from the shadows the miner, who had armed himself with a plank, swung with all his strength. The victim was a stranger.

"The miner was tried for murder, of course, but the jury declared him innocent. It held the killing was accidental because the victim was the wrong man."

Today Florence, with mining at an end and its forests leveled, is a staid and dignified community. Business places fill "Whisky Alley," where several soft drink establishments enjoy a brisk patronage. The town lockup seldom boasts an occupant. Citizens find adventure in watering gardens and mowing their lawns, and Sunday school children play ring-around-the-rosy and other picnic games on the site of the notorious "camp of death."

Pioneer Association Picnic Plans Laid

Final plans have been made for the Alger County Pioneer Association picnic to be held on the old court house grounds at Au Train today. It will be the social event of the season where old timers will meet, music of bygone days played by old fiddlers, candidates for county offices will be there, also speakers of note to address the crowd for a few minutes. Sports will be feature of the days entertainment, the old timers' ball game to top the list, made up of players all over 50 years old. Jack Sharkey is in charge of this feature of the program and he has promised a game of excitement.

Walter Gorey, also in charge of the sports program has made up a program of sports for young and old alike. The program as arranged is as follows:

1:00—Speaking.

1:45—Boys' foot race under 15 years.

2:00—Men's race, free for all.

2:15—Ladies' race, free for all.

2:30—Fat Men's race.

2:45—Fat Ladies' race.

3:00—Tug o' War, county vs. city.

3:15—Tug o' War, free for all.

3:30—Horse shoe pitching.

4:00—Old Timers' ball game.

5:00—Soft ball game.

5:30—Standing jump, girls under 15.

5:45—Standing jump, boys under 15.

Everyone is invited, and are requested to bring their basket. Other refreshments will be served on the ground with ice cream and pop for the children.

BRIEFS

L. C. Clipp, proprietor of the Restwood lodge on Au Train lake relates an interesting fish story that happened at his place Friday afternoon when several of his guests were out fishing. There were seven or eight boats in the lake with people fishing at the mouth of the Au Train river when Prof. C. O. Davies, of the University of Michigan, hooked, what later proved to be an eight pound rainbow trout, and as soon as the fish was hooked he began to attempt to free himself and tangled the professor's fish line with the rest of the lines. While this was going on W. A. Armstrong hooked a seven-pound wall-eyed pike that assisted the rainbow in tangling up the fishing lines. After a while both the fish were landed much to the delight of the fishermen, although much fish line was destroyed.

Labor Day will be quietly observed in Munising Monday. All places of business and public buildings will be closed. There will be no mail delivery. However, the postoffice will dispatch mail as usual. The paper mill employees will hold a picnic at Bay Furnace, and there will be sports program and speaking.

Miss Beth Vendein, who spent the summer on the Pacific coast, and who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Margaret Vendein, east Onota street the past week, left yesterday for Owosso where she will resume her teaching duties with the opening of school.

Funeral services for Mrs. Louise Michelin who died Thursday night were conducted by Rev. P. F. Manderfield yesterday morning. The remains were taken to Cheboygan yesterday afternoon for interment. The pallbearers were: Octave Perry, Henry Gollinger Wm. Carmody, John Saul, Robert Grignon and John E. Ryan. Mr. and Mrs. Gene Ramberg were here from Marquette to attend the funeral services and accompany the remains to their final resting place at Cheboygan. Mrs. Ramberg is a daughter of Mrs. Michelin.

A surprise party was tendered Mrs. Arthur Dale Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Ed Corriveau. The hostesses were Mrs. Charles Kellar, Mrs. Henry Ames and Mrs. Ed Corriveau. Five tables of 500 were played. First prize was won by Mrs. George St. Martin, second to Mrs. Paul Revord, and Mrs. Henry St. Martin received consolation. Mrs. Emma Ames was awarded the door prize.

There will be a meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. All members are urgently requested to be present.

Mrs. Lawrence Sharkey and daughter "Peggy" accamponied by Mrs. Joe Rousseau and Peter Wilson attended the fair at Chicago last week. The party returned to Munising yesterday with the exception of "Peggy" who went on to Marquette where she will visit with her aunt, Mrs. David Depew, a few days before the opening of school.

Older Girls Want To Work for Room

There are three or four girls living outside of Escanaba who plan to attend the county normal here this term, and are looking for places where they can work for their room and board. These girls are all older than high school girls, and are experienced in duties around the home.

Anyone who is able to place one of the girls and give her a room in return for work she is able to do around the home is asked to call C. U. Woolpert, county superintendent of schools.

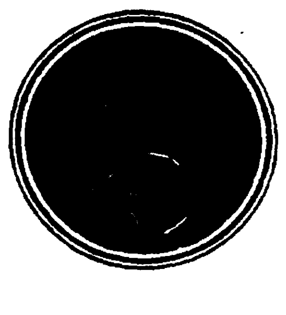
SOCIETY BRAND CLOTHES

LAUERMAN'S



Custom Tailoring Day at LAUERMAN'S Tuesday, September 4th

A REPRESENTATIVE of the Society Brand Custom Department is making a special trip from Chicago for this event. He will present a preview of the models, patterns, colors and fabrics that will be worn by the best dressed men this fall.

He will show several hundred samples of fine custom woolens, also Society Brand's complete line of new fall models. He will personally fit customers for suits to be strictly custom tailored to individual measurements—or in a ready-to-wear size, if preferred.

Instead of merely selecting a model from a picture, you may try on various model garments and definitely determine in advance just how you will look in a certain style. This tends to eliminate all guesswork—all uncertainty—all possible disappointments.

Come—be our guest for this interesting and educational custom exhibit.

LABOR DAY

THROUGHOUT the nation, on Monday, American labor will assemble to celebrate in a fitting manner, the day set aside to dignify the important and significant place which labor, the basic principle upon which the strength of this powerful country of ours is founded, has won in this nation.

Labor Day is primarily the occasion for organized labor to review its achievements in the past and to reaffirm its confidence in the policies which have guided workers in their attainment of a higher standard of living for all classes and a fuller enjoyment of life's blessings.

For its material contribution to American civilization organized labor deserves a large measure of credit. It has always furnished, and must continue to, that calm leadership that is necessary to guide a nation through the adversities which are its stepping stones to progress. Radicals and racketeers have attempted to gain a foothold in labor unions, but in the past they have been held in check because organized labor has always stood, and stands today for justice and devotion to American ideals.

At every stage of national growth, whether in peacetime or during war periods, Labor has responded in full measure to the demands made upon it. And in view of the magnificent monument to labor that our nation with its towering buildings, its beautiful homes, and its widespread lines of transportation and communication presents, there is no more fitting occasion for celebration than that in which citizens everywhere will unite in on Monday.

A DEPLORABLE CONDITION

SCHOOLS in the state of Michigan are to open for the boys and girls of this state on Tuesday morning, faced with financial problems that contsitute a serious indictment of those in charge of Michigan's governmental affairs.

In spite of a misleadingly optimistic statement issued at Lansing on Thursday by the state department of public instruction, the schools of this state will open Tuesday morning, just as they did a year ago, with no assurance that they can operate for the full school year. With a primary school fund reduced by approximately $3,000,000, under the amount available from that source a year ago and other state aid reduced in approximate proportions, only the financially fortunate school districts in Michigan can be certain of sufficient funds to operate for the full school year.

The precarious financial position of the schools of this state was known and fully appreciated by a great majority of Michigan's people more than a year ago and up to this time only makeshift action has been taken by those in charge of the affairs of this state, to correct this deplorable situation.

A year ago the financially poor school districts in Michigan were forced to drastically slash teachers' salaries and operate under a shortened school year schedule, in order to provide even the semblance of a normal educational program for the boys and girls of these unfortunate school districts. In spite of the general realization of this condition, the same problems that faced school officers a year ago stand today as an unsurmountable obstacle to the restoration of normal school advantages for all of the boys and girls of Michigan.

A BOOST FOR GIN'RAL JOHNSON

QUITE a boost in pay has come to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson of NRA fame. Having been stepped up from $6,000 to $15,000 he must feel he is appreciated.

To have his pay more than doubled and then win in a tilt against Donald R. Richberg and Miss (or Mrs.) Perkins all in one day must set the gin'ral up quite a bit.

As government salaries go, General Johnson is entitled to his raise in pay. If the new deal is half as good as its adherents say it is, and since NRA is one of, if not the main spoke in the alleged chariot of returning prosperity, it would seem that the head engineer should be rewarded with at least a crumb from the millions upon millions which NRA is alleged by the campaign statisticians to be giving to the people. But, all this aside, no man should be asked to give what General Johnson is giving to any cause without a just recompense. General Johnson has been more indefatigable in recent months than any cabinet member.

Besides satisfaction in the pay boost that has come to the general there doubtless is satisfaction with many that Johnson won in his tilt with Donald R. Richberg and Miss (or Mrs.) Perkins. General Johnson is not going to take a vacation in Europe while the Richberg-Perkins combination warps the NRA around to its own notion. Hugh remains cock of the NRA walk.

Those who have been amazed at the NRA and have stood aghast at much that has been attempted under it, and flinched from such a spectacle of government as the general has given when he has threatened to "crack down," nevertheless vastly prefer the general to the Richberg-Perkins combination.

The whole country knows right where the general stands. He may be wrong and he may be high-handed and autocratic, but never for a moment has the nation been deceived in where he stands. How different the general from the sly, quiet, oily, adroit Richberg, gesturing with one hand to distract the audience while with the other hand he reaches for that which he secretly covets. As for Miss (or Mrs.) Perkins she thinks the moon is made of green cheese. The bluff old general, who can crack hickory nuts with his teeth, knows better.

So while many may dissent from NRA, these many still prefer administration of the new device in full sight of the audience, with lots of noise. Administration of NRA by stealth would make it unbearable.

THE STATUS OF HUEY LONG

IN HIS discussion with newspaper correspondents the other day, President Roosevelt said that he did not believe the situation in Louisiana demanded any federal action.

That Senator Long may go upon the floor of a state legislative body and order the lawmakers around as they crack whips over negroes in the deep South is, as yet, no one's business but that of Louisiana. It elects those legislators. Perhaps it likes that sort of stuff. If it does it may have plenty of it.

The opposition to Mr. Long has entered the courts of Louisiana for relief. That is the right place to make a complaint if Long and his personal legislature have transcended constitutional guarantees.

Perhaps the courts will hold that the legislature acted within the bounds of its jurisdiction, and, if so, its acts are final and must persist until the people send other legislators if dissatisfied with the present ones.

The attitude of the United States government is based solely upon the guarantee of the federal constitution that the national government shall see to it that each state has a republican form of government.

Any action by the United States government is not appropriate in the affair unless and until Mr. Long seizes power in defiance of the courts.

Then we would have a genuine transgression upon a republican form of government because such conduct would be tantamount to an overthrowal of our system of government.

When that time comes action will be so swift that Mr. Long will become dizzier than he did at that Long Island country club. The limits in this respect, however, are so plainly marked out that no man would persist as against the nation unless he were actually afflicted with some form of dementia.

Maybe if California wants to get rid of its Communists they'd be welcome in Cincinnati. They'd do almost anything there to start an uprising of the Reds.

It looks as if Aimee Semple McPherson might be slipping. A small-time evangelist has tied her for kidnaping honors and another preacher is one snake bite ahead of her.

That Kansas weather forecaster who admitted it was getting cooler when the mercury dropped from 102 to 60 probably will feel safe in ordering his coal by February.

While everybody else is supposed to be benefiting by the New Deal, how about the husband who has to exercise his wife's dog?

Huey Long doesn't mind every other man being a king, if Huey only can be the ace.

Beach Club Girl

(By NEA Service) BY MABEL McELLIOTT

CHAPTER XXI

As the days melted into weeks Boots' realization of what she had done, the seriousness of the step she had taken that August morning almost overwhelmed her. She would have died rather than admit that her marriage to Russ had been a mistake; but there it was. Nature, for her own purposes, had thrown a veil of glamour over this particular young man. Moonlit nights, scent of roses in the hedges, the spell of physical nearness had blinded her to his imperfections. Now, quite suddenly, she saw him with clear eyes. He was a fine physical specimen, he was sunbrowned, he had excellent teeth and an agreeable smile. Beyond that, beyond the lovemaking which had already begun to pall a little there was simply nothing; no bond between them. They spoke different languages.

She was not the first girl to come alive to this difference after marriage. But she was young and the lesson was a bitter one. Her stoic acceptance of the situation spoke volumes for her growing maturity. Although she celebrated her 19th birthday early in September she was years older—or felt it—in experience and wisdom. When she passed young girls on the street she glanced at them curiously.

"Was I really that stupid and unseeing last year?" she often said to herself.

After that black afternoon when she had received from her parents a strapped and neatly addressed trunk and a brief, cold note advising her that her father did not wish to hear from her again she had had no further word from Larchneck. She seldom went over to New York now. She had no money to spend and Gloria, discovering that Boots had a real talent for housework, was leaving more and more for her to do in the shabby flat.

When questioned about their plans Russ usually mumbled something vague about starting for Florida a little later. Boots had learned now that the car which he had driven about the village that summer was not really his. It had been taken back by the company because of defaulted payments. How they were to get to Florida she had no least idea but for a long time she trusted in Russ to keep his word, against her better judgment and indeed her common sense.

The one thing she refused to do was to go to her parents for help. Russ had a little job now and then. Once he was requisitioned as a helper on a bakery wagon, working for the firm Lou drove for, and Boots' cheeks flamed scarlet as she heard the news. It seemed perfectly reasonable to all the family—to Gloria, Lou, and to Russ himself—that he should do this sort of work. To Boots, in her pride and her love, it was a cruel blow. Russ as a lifeguard had been a romantic enough figure, invested with all the glamour of the out-of-doors, windswept blue sea and yellow sand. Russ as a bakery-truck helper—she shuddered at the thought. But she had put her hand to the plough now; there was no turning back.

Sometimes, in the dead of night, she thought of her mother and her tears fell thick and fast. She never let Russ see her cry. It made him angry. He hated, he said, "squalling women." But usually he was kind, in a thoroughly unimaginative way. To this girl who had been babied and petted all her life the experience of living as a member of this household was a devastating and maturing one. The old life, seen from this vantage, seemed now unbelievably soft and easy. What had she done with her time, her money? Why, even her old scanty allowance now seemed prodigal.

"We've got to get out of this place. We've simply got to," she murmured one warm morning in late September. She was alone in the flat. Gloria had left the house a few moments before on one of her periodical "shopping" orgies. Gloria was perfectly happy strolling down Manhattan's Fourteenth street, staring at the wax mannequins in the windows, sipping a hot chocolate and swallowing a double-decker sandwich at a crowded soda fountain counter. Lou and Gloria never managed to save a penny. The installment collector was a familiar figure at the door of the flat. But Gloria came home from these expeditions triumphant in her spoils—a velvet hat "just like the uptown shops," a sleazy pink silk vest, a pair of gloves which would shrink hopelessly in the first washing. Bargains were Gloria's very breath of life. Her bureau drawers overflowed with lace trimmed nightgowns with frayed seams. There were half a dozen shoddy pairs of high-heeled shoes tumbling about in gray curls of dust on the floor of her clothes closet.

"I can't live this way, I won't," Boots told herself, setting her lips stubbornly. This was the day Russ had gone over to Jersey to see some vague man "about a job." Boots had rather lost faith in these nebulous jobs. After she had hung the frayed towel beside the cracked dishpan she spread the morning paper out on the drainboard, open at the "help wanted" pages. Girl wanted . . . girl wanted . . . oh, there were 20 jobs open but she was eligible for none of them.

"Steno: some coll. operate slide rule."

"Switchbd. opr. mult. exp."

"Alert, capable woman, over 27: executive ability."

* * *

She opened her purse, the dark blue kidskin envelope she had bought so casually last spring. It was still smart looking but the change purse was limp; she shook out its contents. Thirty cents. The quarter Russ had given her yesterday. The nickel she had saved. Russ had been shamefaced but blustering about it.

"Stick with me, kid, and you'll wear diamonds," he had said. He remembered hearing his father say that to his mother.

Thirty cents. Five cents for subway fare to the city. Five cents back. She could have lunch at some counter. Maybe the basement of the dime store. She'd do it. She wouldn't wait around til Russ came home, till Gloria came dawdling in with her bargain of the day. She'd go over to New York and see if there wasnt something—anything—she could do.

If only she didn't meet anyone from home! That was the fear which plagued her most of the time. Would they cut her, turn away their eyes?

She put on her last year's fal tweed, still smart. She had pressed it herself. (How easy it had been in the old days to telephone the tailor to come around) She darned her gloves.

On the street, her spirits liftd. It was so bright and blue a dy; the air had a sort of tonic init. She lifted her chin and steped along with animation. She eft the mean street with its occasional pallid tree behind her. Ahad, in the dazzling clearness ofthe distant horizon, she could seethe city's towers and spires. New York! She wasn't terrified b it, its vastness and indifference because she had known it al her life as a friendly place to hich one went on happy jaunts tothe-ater and shops and restaunts. Of course it was not the same now. She was one of a vat army, struggling for a fothold. She stared out of the window as the train rushed over the bridge, her hands clenched in her mnded gloves.

"I must find something" she told herself. "I simply must."

She had the newspaper want ad column in her purse. There would be the agencies first. Experience? No, she hadn any. But weren't there some things which didn't require experience?

The woman behind the desk shook her head pleasantly but firmly. The woods, she said to Boots, were full of college girls willing to do anything. Had she tried the department stores? She had heard it was possible to get in over at Lacy's. "Personally," she said, lowering her voice, "we only handle clerical work—high-class stuff, you understand. But Lacy's—well, you might say you had a year of college. They like that. They won't investigate."

Lacy's was 10 blocks away. Ten long city blocks of crowds, of traffic lights, of milling taxis. Boots walked them briskly, impelled by youth and a fervent hope and ambition.

The personnel department of Lacy's. You made out a long form, peppered by half a hundred questions, most of them sounding quite irrelevant. You filed this. A serious young woman with a deep voice talked to you about the aims and ideals of the big store and you went away, buoyed up by a new hope. Maybe this time next week you would be behind one of those busy counters. Lace or books or chintzes. Part time at $2.90 a day. Four days of that, Boots thought ecstatically, would be almost $12. Sylvia Rivers paid $12 for her sport shoes, but what did that signify?

Lacy's! She had bought things here always. Blouses, gloves, pretty tailored underthings. Now her highest hope was to be on the other side of the counter, a sales slip in her hand.

She pitted all her strength against the stubborn glass door which swung outward, colliding with a girl who was entering the store.

"Isabel!" The name tumbled out before she had time to think.

The other girl widened her eyes. "My dear, wherever did you drop from?"

FIVE TO SEVEN

What a rare world this is, from five to seven!
Some never see the sun till high in heaven,
Behold the dew, or hear the wildbird singing
Its peep of joy before the song of winging.

Begins to ruffle, and the reeds to quiver,
Or city streets to roar, or traffic thicken,
Or men to hurt, and other hearts to sicken.

What a rare world this is, when done the sinning
Of night, nor yet the sin of day beginning,
When man has neither done the wrong nor paid it,
The earth a little as the good God made it.

An old night ended and a new day breaking.
Yes, would you make acquaintance with God's heave

20 Years Ago

Paris, Sept. 2—The president and members of the government and all embassies of the Allied nations left Paris at 10:50 tonight for Bordeaux, where they will remain during the hostilities. The removal of the capital to Bordeaux followed almost immediately upon the issuance of proclamation by the minister of interior, who said the military authorities were responsible for the decision, having decided that fortifications of Paris, while not positively certain of being attacked, undoubtedly will be the pivotal of the field operations of the opposing armies for some time to come.

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The stock market was all but deserted today, and trading fell to the smallest volume for a Saturday in 16 years.

Price changes were narrow and mostly unimportant. Business was largely in the nature of lightening both long and short accounts before the holiday weekend. Sales were only 113,060 shares, the smallest since August 3, 1918, when only 68,700 shares were traded.

The Standard Statistics Co. price index of 90 representative shares receded 0.1 of one point to 72.5. Bonds were quiet and fairly steady. Wheat at Chicago closed unchanged to 5-8 of a cent a bushel higher, and corn 1-8 to 3-8 higher. The New York Cotton market was closed for the weekend.

Strike Casts Shadow

Preparations for a general strike in the textile industry dominated the news, and cast fresh shadows of doubt and uncertainty over the financial community. If the strike, which seemed inevitable, were of fairly short duration, it was felt that it would not seriously interfere with what autumn business recovery was in prospect, for inventories on hand are still sufficient to last some weeks.

But a labor dispute of such magnitude was decidedly sobering in its effect upon the financial community, and hopes that it would not spread, were widely expressed.

Business failed to give much clue to the post Labor-Day prospects, although that holiday is usually regarded as the turning point from vacation dullness to autumn revival. Nevertheless, that revival is often not particularly distinct until mid-September. The best augury of an autumn pickup thus far has been the vigor of retail trade. Dun & Bradstreet said the past week was the best of the summer.

Automobile output this week, according to Cram's estimate, has fallen to 32,506 units, off 19,845 from the previous week, and 14,341 under the like week of last year.

In foreign exchange dealings, the pound sterling slipped off ¾ of a cent to its recent low of $4.98½, but there were reports that the British equalization fund was again offering support.

New York, Sept. 1—Preliminary estimates place the number of passengers carried by airlines during the month of July at slightly more than 46,000. Miles totaled 4,851,700.

Production of lumber during the week ended August 25 totaled 194,566,000 feet and shipments amounted to 203,085,000 feet compared with production of 212,445,000 feet and shipments of 215,977,000 feet in the preceding week.

Directors of the National Standard Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, payable September 29 to stock on record September 19.

Curb Market Has Very Dull Session

BY BERNARD S. O'HARA
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The curb market was a series of meaningless fluctuations today. Activity was around record low levels and many leading shares sold only once or twice if at all. Final prices were slightly mixed.

Swift International again moved into new high territory in fairly active dealings. Aluminum Company of America, Electric Bond & Share, Swift & Co., Hiram Walker and Pioneer Gold ended steady.

BY VICTOR EUBANK
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—The bond market merely went through the motions of trading in today's brief session and prices, as a whole, failed to move in any direction.

The proceedings were the dullest since August 18, transfers totalling only $4,051,000, par value. The Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 84.1. On the week this average showed a decline of four-tenths of a point.

U. S. government securities steadied following Secretary Morgenthau's overnight announcement that no inflationary gesture would be made in the September-October financing involving more than $1,700,000,000. Exchange offerings for both the certificates, maturing September 15, and the Liberty fourth 4¼s, called for October 15, will be made in the usual way, the secretary said.

In view of the conferences being held between President Roosevelt and treasury experts, some banking quarters voiced the opinion that the administration might attempt a large long-term bond issue. This was doubted, however, in other circles which believed short-term paper would continue to be used.

The turnover in the government listed section amounted to only about $1,900,000.

Most of the rails were a bit easier. Canadian Pacific debentures 5s dropped 2 3-8 points to 74 5-8.

The foreign department was also listless and irregular.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 1—Foreign exchange irregular. Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain demand, 4.98½, cables, 4.98½; 60-day bills, 4.97½; France demand, 6.69½, cables, 6.69½; Italy demand, 8.70, cables, 8.70.

Groesbeck Insists Sales Levy Could Exempt Clothing

Caro, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP)—Alex J. Groesbeck, speaking here Friday night in his campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, took issue with Governor William A. Comstock on the latter's contention that food and clothing could not have been excluded from the state sales tax without damaging the constitutionality of the act.

"The supreme court of this state," said Groesbeck, "has held a sales tax on gasoline is constitutional, and if they can tax sales on gas they can tax sales on any commodity and by the same token omit a tax on the sales of a commodity they wish to exempt."

The former governor also criticized the state administration for its policy on the upkeep of state charitable and educational institutions, and pointed out that 4,000 feeble minded patients are on the list waiting for admission to the institution at Lapeer.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Sept. 1—Pre-holiday inertia held trading in the grain market to a minimum today and prices clung to a narrow range, swinging to the day's peak just before the close.

Wheat finished 1-8 cent lower to 51 higher as a result of late buying and corn was unchanged to 3-8 cent up while other grains closed irregularly steady.

Inasmuch as the market will not be in session Monday, a big portion of the trade consisted of shifting over hedges from September to December contracts with some cash houses buying the current month outright. Deliveries on September options totaled 2,861,000 bushels.

Corn rallied late following announcement of a bullish crop estimate. Part of this strength was reflected in wheat but the volume did not swell, traders showing a hesitancy.

September wheat deliveries reacted from early lows almost a cent at the close. September new wheat finished at $1.02½ to $1.02 5-8, December new at $1.03½ to $1.03 5-8, and May at $1.04 7-8 to $1.05. The corn trade was confused at the start because of inauguration of trading in new-style contracts necessitated by new grading rules which went into effect today. December old tumbled to 79¼ early but gained a cent, closing at 80 to 80 1-8 cents.

A crop report by E. H. Miller, prominent crop expert, forecast the United States 1934 corn crop at 1,396,000,000 bushels compared with the government forecast of 1,607,000,000 a month ago and last year's harvest of 2,344,000,000. This estimate was 63,000,000 below the average of yesterday's forecasts.

Provisions were unevenly steady. Oats were 1-8 lower to 1-8 higher, rye was ¼ down to ¼ up and barley was unchanged to ¼ lower.

Dunce caps were named after a learned Scotch clergyman, Duns Scotous, who lived in the 13th century.

Announcement of Regular Quarterly Operation To Be September 10

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP)—President Roosevelt and treasury heads today decided upon the government's regular quarterly refinancing operation coming due September 15 and also canvassed the extent of participation by banks in the recovery effort with loans.

The only word from the conference between the president, Secretary Morgenthau and financial experts was the statement that announcement would be made September 10 of the refinancing program and its extent.

Takes Car Ride

Observing closely the trend of national affairs from his summer White House, Mr. Roosevelt offered no comment on the textile strike and there was no intimation of his immediate intercession. No request for such has been received, it was stated.

Late today the president left his study to take advantage of the favorable weather. He drove his own car about the farm and neighborhood for an hour and a half.

Secretary Morgenthau and his chief lieutenants spent the afternoon with Mr. Roosevelt at the summer White House. Tonight Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator and Rexford Guy Tugwell, under secretary of agriculture, arrived with their wives to be week-end guests.

There was every indication that the administration is dissatisfied with the attitude of a vast majority of banks toward loans, particularly under the recent federal insurance plans for loans to industry and home builders.

There have been signs that some in high quarters feel the banks have been keeping too liquid at the expense of retarding the recovery effort.

Whitedale & Gulliver

Mr. and Mrs. Grey and daughter, Virginia of Toledo, Ohio, returned Monday to their home after a three weeks' vacation, occupying a Brearley cottage.
